Wings of Wonder founder and director Rebecca Lessard wore heavy-duty leather gloves in releasing Mary, a 12-week-old bald eagle on Oct. 7 at St Marys Cement in Charlevoix. Mary flew out over the crowd of several hundred and into the blue sky. The bald or American eagle can exert up to 1,000 pounds per square inch of force per foot.

Fly home free bird

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Since 1872 the Bald or American Eagle has been the symbol of America, but regardless of its stature it was hunted, poisoned and forced out of its habitat at a rate which nearly wiped the creature off the planet.

However, efforts to replenish the American Eagle population in recent decades, like the Sunday, Oct. 7 release of two birds at St Marys Cement, who were nursed back to health by Wings of Wonder in Empire, are having a positive effect.

"They deserve to be free and there is no reason to keep them captive since neither birds were harmed in any way that would prevent them from being freed," said Wings of Wonder founder and director Rebecca Lessard.

The 2007 hatchlings consisted of Mary, a female named after St Marys Cement and Mr. Hobbs, a male named by St Marys employees.

"We have eight veterinary clinics which donate their services and we take in about 50 birds of prey each year," Lessard said. "We release an average of 65 percent of those birds."

When found, both birds were weak from starvation before being admitted to Wings of Wonder in July.

"They were seen flying sporadically," Lessard said. "They were newly out of the nest."

Experience the harvest this weekend at Apple Festival

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

This weekend downtown Charlevoix will transform into a harvest farm market and craft fair.

The town will host the 29th Annual Apple Festival from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 12 and 13 and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 14.

East Park construction has moved the festival venue to the 100 block of Mason Street and behind the Bridge Street storefronts between Clinton and Mason streets.

"The location is new and different. But everybody's been in a wonderful frame of mind to take all the construction in stride and be flexible with the new location. Its been really refreshing that people have made the best of all of it," Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce President, Jacqueline Merta, said.

According to Merta, tens of thousands of area residents and visitors are expected to filter into town to soak in the flavor and character of autumn in northern Michigan — sipping golden apple cider and munching 30 varieties of crunchy apples.

Apple Fest to host 15 food vendors and 100 crafters

APPLE

"This is one of Charlevoix's signature events. It recognizes the agriculture industry which is near and dear to everyone's heart in northern Michigan with the apples and fall harvest," Merta said.

The first festival took place in 1979 and was hosted by current sponsors, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

"It's an event the chamber started to bring the harvest to the people instead of having to go to farms," Merta said.

Northern Michigan is known for its crop production and four area orchards, Kings Orchard of Central Lake, Friske Orchards of Charlevoix, Royal Farms of Ellsworth and Cherryview Orchards of Kewadin will be showing off this year's crunchy, sweet products in bright reds, yellows and greens.

"There's great crowds. It's amazing to see the number of people who come from all over the country. And it's great for those people to be exposed to our farm and see what we have," Sara McGuire, co-owner of Royal Farms, said.

Festival goers may notice the bushels aren't as packed with the mature apples they are used to buying. McGuire, said, the dry summer had an impact on the crop.

"The drought impacted the apples that weren't irrigated. They still taste great but are a little smaller. We have both so we can see the difference. The apples we irrigated look and taste great," McGuire said.

In spite of the drought, all the participating orchards promise to have plenty of perfect apples including the popular honeycrisp.

"The (honeycrisp) flavor is spectacular but what really makes it special is its crispness. It has almost a watermelon crunch — it's so juicy but it's crisp at the same time," McGuire said.

Friske's sells an estimated 200 bushels of apples every year at the festival

Aside from the many varieties of fresh apples that will be on site, other commodities will also be for sale including apple cake, pie and dumplings, cider, organic herbs, honey, syrup and jams, fresh donuts, plants and bulbs, tomatoes, squash, pumpkins, gourds, Indian corn and more.

In all, 15 food vendors will be ready to tantalize customers with delectable harvest treats.

Friske's Orchards sells about 200 bushels of apples every year at the Charlevoix Apple Festival. The event will take place this weekend in downtown Charlevoix.

After shopping for fresh produce and baked goods, festival participants can travel through the craft courtyard packed with 100 vendors showcasing multiple handmade goods.

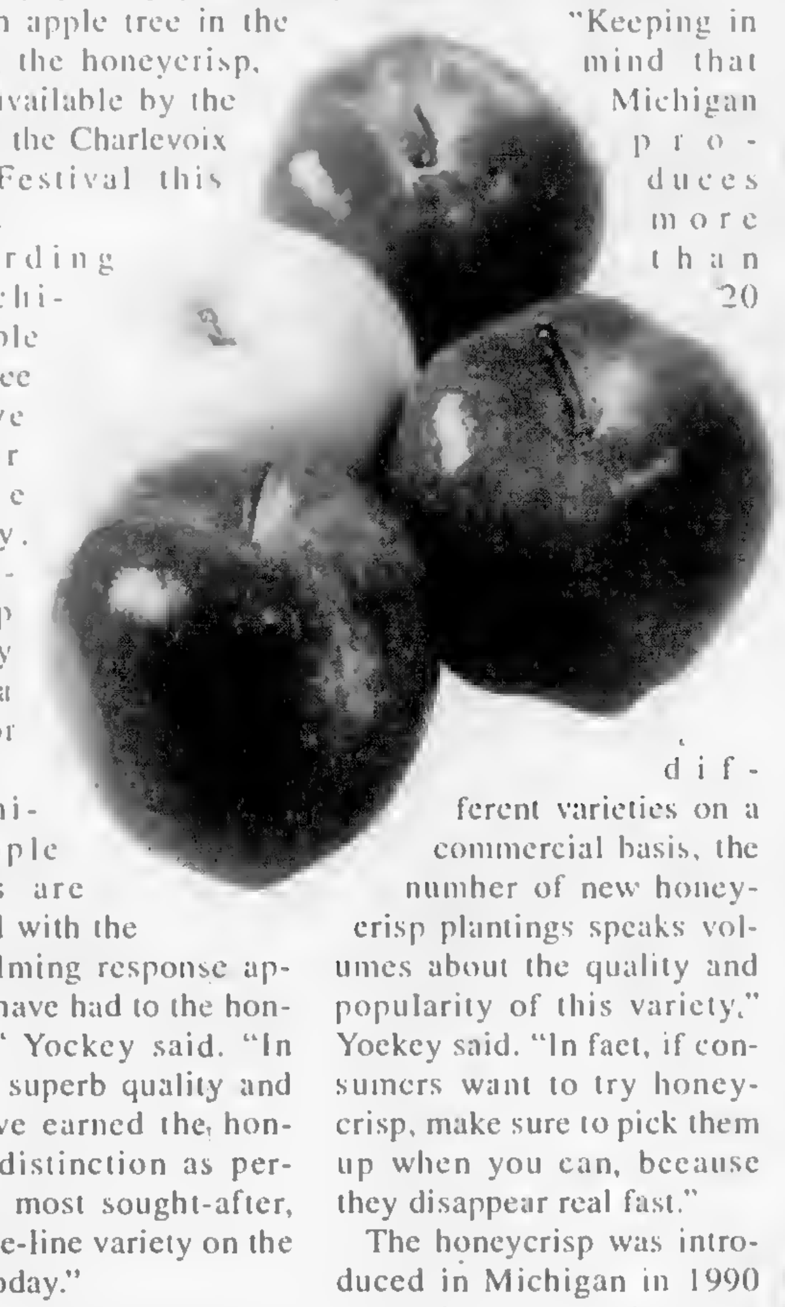
The younger crowd will be entertained with pony rides, a petting farm, apple bobbing and face painting.

All this activity provides a fall economic boost to local businesses.

"It has a very positive impact on Charlevoix's economy," Merta said.

Apple Festival vendors offer the most popular honeycrisp

The fruit from the newest and most popularly planted Michigan apple tree in the industry, the honeycrisp, will be available by the bushel at the Charlevoix Apple Festival this weekend.



According to Michigan Apple Committee executive director Denise Yockey, the honeycrisp has really made a name for itself.

"Michigan apple growers are delighted with the overwhelming response apple fans have had to the honeycrisp," Yockey said. "In fact, the superb quality and taste have earned the honeycrisp distinction as perhaps the most sought-after, top-of-the-line variety on the market today."

Since its introduction to Michigan a little more than 15 years ago, the honeycrisp has created a buzz unlike any before it. Growers have taken notice of its popularity with consumers and responded accordingly. Last year alone, honeycrisp apples accounted for a third of all the new apple acres planted across the state.

"Keeping in mind that Michigan produces more than 20 different varieties on a commercial basis, the number of new honeycrisp plantings speaks volumes about the quality and popularity of this variety," Yockey said. "In fact, if consumers want to try honeycrisp, make sure to pick them up when you can, because they disappear real fast."

The honeycrisp was introduced in Michigan in 1990 when just a couple acres were planted. Since then, growers have continued to invest in honeycrisp, planting a total of 1,200 acres. Last year alone there were 240 new acres of honeycrisp planted, far surpassing the next most planted tree — gala — with 135 new acres.

Known as perhaps the best fresh-eating apple on the market, honeycrisp has a sweet honey-like taste and superior crispness. They are an excellent choice for fresh slices, as well as for serving on sandwiches and in salads.

FAST FACTS

The Michigan apple harvest got underway in early August with the arrival of the Paula Reds, followed closely by the Ginger Gold and Gala. There are about 950 apple farms in the state, spanning some 37,000 acres.

JUST A THOUGHT

Julie Witthoeft

I feel like I'm saying good-bye to an old friend.

After seven years with the Charlevoix Courier I've taken a convergence editor's position with the Petoskey News-Review and on Nov. 1 am expected to leave my newspaper behind.

This decision was a tough one — the Courier and I are old friends, we've grown up together. Since I started with the paper in April 2000 Courier subscriptions have grown dramatically, the page count has steadily increased, the paper has been redesigned and we've launched a Web site.

As the paper grew, so did I. Personally, I've gotten married, had two children and suffered the loss of both my grandmother and father-in-law. Professionally, I moved from staff writer to editor. I'd like to say I learned to play the hard nosed editor's role but time hasn't desensitized me. I still haven't mastered death stories and every year I cry when I meet the first baby of the new year. I cried all the way through my first death interview when Nancy and Denny LaCroix lost Gabby and in writing the story just last week on Eric Perrine my keyboard was soaked.

During this same time the community has grown leaps and bounds. Looking back at headlines from my earliest editions it's clear where most of my time was spent — Marion Township. The community had just endured a school board recall election and was battling about the new Charlevoix High School and I had a front row seat where I sat for hours on old wooden school chairs at the Marion Township Hall. Thank God for a fresh out of college rear end that could handle it.

Then it was time to sit through the lengthy marina meetings and library planning sessions. I've had a front row seat to all of these amazing moments — construction of a new high school, library, city hall and now the marina and East Park projects.

With each project and event there have been new faces I've come to know and many of you have come to know me. I budget at least 15 minutes extra for trips to the grocery store so I can stop in the aisles and talk politics or jot a quick note about an upcoming event or meeting change. And while I've embraced Charlevoix, Charlevoix's welcomed me right back.

I'll never forget this summer on a Sunday when I was downtown with my girls and a tractor in East Park was washed away during a deluge. I stood there with the chitlins hoping my zoom lens would catch the action while ensuring their safety when Mary Ann Chew and Rebecca Berg said, "Give those girls to us." I ran in, got the shot and turned around to see my daughters safely standing by. I feel so honored to live here with people I know, respect and trust.

I'm a person that thrives on challenge, so change isn't the scary part of becoming the News-Review convergence editor — a fancy name for the person who will manage the news in the virtual world — its leaving my old friends behind — the Courier and the residents of Charlevoix.

Thank you for sharing your most exciting, most painful and most embarrassing moments with me. I feel privileged to have been given a front row seat to "Charlevoix up close and personal 2000-2007."

Please continue to share the good, the bad and the ugly with me as I join the Petoskey News-Review. Your insight is invaluable.

LETTERS to the editor

EVERYONE'S TO BLAME FOR THE BUDGET

Editor:

Mr. Gohs speaks like a true Republican (in his column entitled "Tax hikes won't bring prosperity" that appeared on page 4 of the Oct. 3 edition of the Courier). Everything these days boils down to "politics," doesn't it? Rarely is anything accomplished in our governments (local, state or federal) for the good of the people, only for the good of the party.

Mr. Gohs blames Gov. Granholm for the recent budget plan (his politics). If he were more far-sighted, he would realize everybody has blame in the development and passage of the new budget. The legislature spent several hours batting out this budget and it is flawed. Had they been willing to work harder, earlier and been more willing to compromise, a better bill could have been possible. Instead, they chose to throw a hodgepodge together in the late hours. The governor extended several considerations for a new budget, over a year ago, to deaf ears on the Republican side of the aisle. That is a Republican error. The Democrats wouldn't listen to the Republicans — that's their fault. Gov. Granholm may not always have the greatest of ideas but she at least proposes them in the hopes that the, up to now, Republican legislature, would work with.

Mr. Gohs, the Republicans are the side that insisted on cuts in spending. The Democrats wanted an increase in taxes. We must have both. They did finally compromise, didn't they? You cannot spend, spend, spend, without a source of income. If you're living that way, I pity you because soon you will be broke, just like Michigan. The arrangement settled on is terribly flawed as far as the sales tax on certain businesses and not others. It is further flawed by planning on reducing the income tax in three years. Costs go up, rarely down. If we don't leave the income tax at at least the new level, we will have another short fall after it's reduced.

Wake up, Mr. Gohs. Taxes are a fact of life, a necessary evil, if you wish, but if you want funding for schools, Medicare, road repair, etc., we have to have money for that. Note our federal government is in financial straits also because the Republican Congress wants to spend without increasing taxes. Again, it's strictly politics. With increased tax money, we won't have to cut vital services. Gee, we might even be able to provide some non-vital ones.

BERGMANN CENTER SAYS 'THANKS'

Editor:

The Bergmann Center would like to thank all 29 Charlevoix High School students and their teacher, Tom Shultz, for spending a "Day of Caring" with our organization on Sept. 18. The great time was had by all who participated in one-on-one teaming up during a game of kickball at Shanahan Field and the additional help with setting up our annual garage sale was greatly appreciated.

We also would like to thank Molly, Sarah, Leslie and Kathy for completing the much-needed painting of our snack bar and Greg for trimming the hedges during a "Day of Caring." Everything looks great. Last but not least we would like to thank all those individuals responsible for helping coordinate this annual event in conjunction with Char-Em United Way.

WORD on the street

How do you feel proposed tax increases will affect the state?

Al Pedwaydon
"I don't appreciate any tax increase. Why is there a crisis all of the sudden? Why did they not foresee this two years ago?"

Pat Papineau
"We have to do something. Hopefully it's a positive."

Karl Keinath
"I think we need an increase in taxes. Of course, nobody wants an increase, but you can only cut so much and at some point you can't do that any more."

Don Lessard
"I think it's great for the state. It's high time for a tax increase after all these years of tax cuts and nobody willing to step up to the plate and pay for services."

Budget proposal burns business owners

STORY HIGHLIGHT

With less than three weeks left of a 30-day extension to balance the budget, Michigan legislators have proposed a six percent tax on dozens of services in addition to the 11.5 percent jump in state income tax legislators approved last week.

What does it mean?

If approved, Charlevoix citizens will see a jump in their state personal income tax from 3.9 to 4.35 percent, an 11.5 percent jump, in addition to a tax of six cents on the dollar for services including carpet and upholstery cleaning; consultants; investment advice; janitorial; landscaping; office administration, travel and reservation; scenic transportation; skiing; tours; warehousing; transit and ground passenger transport and personal care, excluding hair care, among others.

With less than three weeks left of a 30-day extension to balance the budget, Michigan legislators have proposed a six percent tax on dozens of services in addition to the 11.5 percent jump in state income tax legislators approved last week.

While income tax was increased from 3.9 to 4.35 percent, the services tax includes businesses from carpet and upholstery cleaning; consultants; investment advice and janitorial to landscaping; office administration; travel and reservation; scenic transportation; skiing; tours; warehousing; transit and ground passenger transport and personal care, excluding hair care, among others.

"I don't think it's a good thing for Michigan. I'm sad they are doing this (proposing to raise taxes) when we have such an issue to begin with. Our economy is not healthy," said Glenda Wilhelm, owner of Shabby Girls Salon and Day Spa, one of several businesses who will pay the six percent services tax should it pass.

Wilhelm said she has never before had to pass a tax increase on to the customer and she doesn't wish to begin now.

"I think we need a brand new look at what we're doing in this state. There has got to be some reason our state has the issues it has."

She added, "What they need to do instead of putting (state employees) out of work is to send the representatives home without pay and make sure everyone else has a job."

John Campbell, owner of Site Planning Development, said he's not sure how the tax increases would affect him.

"Is it strictly labor or strictly equipment? We (believe) materials we sell will not have a double tax on them, but we're not positive," he said.

The combined service and income taxes are projected to produce nearly $1.365 billion in revenue for the state.

Samantha Harris, owner of Preferred Cleaning, said the additional taxes will be a hardship for small businesses like hers.

"I think if we go up higher on the customers, we're going to be losing our jobs," she said.

Harris said perhaps legislators should lower their own pay before they go raising taxes on the people they serve.

"They need to find a smarter way to balance the budget instead of taking away from people," she said. "We already pay high enough tax on land and gas."

She added, "I balanced my household budget my whole life and have not deprived my family of clothing or food. Why can't the state do it?

Sharing feelings of frustration with citizens like Harris and Wilhelm, the nonprofit citizen education group Taxpayers United Michigan Foundation, chaired by Bill McMaster, one of the men integral in implementing the Headlee Amendment back in the 1970s, seeks to raise $50,000 in order to file suit against Gov. Jennifer Granholm to stop the tax increases.

Glenda Wilhelm, owner of Shabby Girls Salon and Day Spa, works on Charlevoix resident Vicky Schafer's hair on Friday, Oct. 5. Neither Wilhelm nor Schafer are pleased to hear the state has increased income tax and is proposing to instate a six percent tax on many services including hair care.

Headlee is a tax limitation measure designed, among other things, to prevent Michigan taxpayers from paying too much local and state tax.

"Grassroots taxpayers believe we have a good court case," McMaster stated in an Oct. 2 press release. "Further troubling grassroots taxpayers is how Granholm is able to get away with not accounting for $12 billion to $15 billion in total state revenues missing from her Comprehensive Annual Financial Report every year."

Terry Stanton, a public information officer for the Michigan Department of Treasury declined to comment and said of McMaster's allegations, "The inference is absurd."

Leslie Fritz, communications director for the state's budget offices, said "We would strongly disagree with him (McMaster) on his position and we will disagree with him on the accounting practices too."

David Littmann, a 40-year practitioner of economics and former chief economist for Comerica Bank of 35 years, said the state's action or inaction on the budget is nonsense.

"Small businesses definitely consider this a new tax and it definitely requires a vote of the people," he said. "You tax something, you get less of it. And the state will be here again asking for another handout in a year or two."

Littmann added, "Little by little, people and businesses are voting with their feet by leaving the state."

However, Fritz said she spoke to lawyers for the state who assured her the voter requirements under Headlee do not apply to this situation, "As long as the state taxation is below the limit that Headlee set.

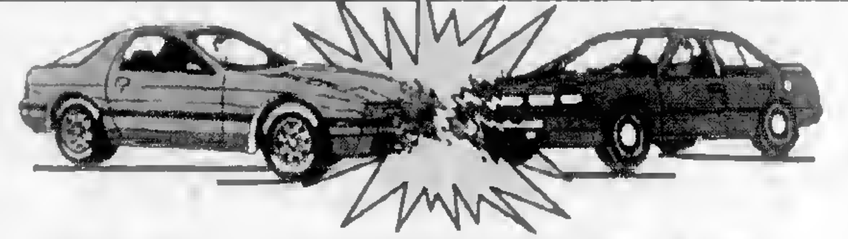
MICHIGAN DRIVER ALERT!

Insure Against the Uninsured



Many Michigan drivers believe that their "No Fault" auto policy will cover everything—no matter who is at fault. This is not entirely true.

Some losses are intended to be covered by the at-fault driver. But, what if their policy coverage limits are too low, or they drive with no insurance at all?

Not all companies offer protection in these situations, but Auto-Owners does. Let us show you how to protect yourself and your family with Uninsured and Underinsured Motorist Coverages from Auto-Owners Insurance.

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

STORY HIGHLIGHT

The Charlevoix Courier received 10 awards in the Michigan Press Association's 2007 newspaper contest.

Eight honors for advertising and two awards for editorial content were bestowed on the staff

The Charlevoix Courier received 10 awards in the Michigan Press Association's 2007 newspaper contest.

Eight honors for advertising and two awards for editorial content were bestowed on the staff of four.

"It's fantastic," said Courier advertising manager, Kim Taylor. "It shows the high quality of our composition department, specifically graphic designer Jessie Healy (of the Petoskey News-Review). It shows our advertising department is topnotch, along with the editorial content, and we have made great strides in past years to get bigger and better."

Taylor also commended classified manager Lisa Sladek on her award for best classified section.

She added, "Our circulation is up. Our page count is up. We definitely have a very strong feel for the area and the market."

Taylor said she will continue helping her advertising clients grow their businesses.

"They (customers) are the most important part of the business," she said.

Following are the advertising honors and judges' comments:

- First place — Best classified or real estate ad for a Vacation Properties spot

"Good use of color, good flow from box to box. Well tied together."

- Second place — Best ad idea for Frontier Classics

"Like idea for putting all the info on the boat. The ad jumps out too because it's not contained in a box. It pops right out!"

- Second place — Best spot color ad for Scovies

"I like the use of the blue for 'blue plate specials.' Nice balance of blue and black. The spot color is not overpowering the ad."

- First and second place — Best multi color ad for Harbor Health & Fitness and Charlevoix Children's House

- First and third place — Best newspaper promotion for "How to kill a business" and "Is your business draggin'?"

"Very creative - made me read each one. Loved it!" and "Cute play on words, nice use of small ad to grab attention."

- Second place — Best classified ad section

"I like the index on the first page. Nice layout."

Editorial honors:

Honorable mention — Special section for Fall Sports Guide

"Special sections are all about the cover!"

Second place — Local columnist, Benjamin Gohs

"Humorous and informative columns. All had good headlines. Nice work covering national and local subjects."

Courier editor Julie Withoeft was pleased with her department's two awards, but said the goal of obtaining excellence is a never-ending one.

"The Charlevoix Courier is a strong community newspaper packed with quality advertising and local news making it a perfect outlet for advertisers," she said. "And, it's nice to see Ben (Gohs, staff writer) recognized for all of his hard work."

She added, "He succeeds at making readers laugh, cry and cringe."

Beautiful bench

Courier editor Julie Witthoeft tries her hand at waiting tables ...

Name: Nina Rylant

Age: 46

Occupation: Waitress at Judy's Family Restaurant 117 Antrim St

Family: Husband, Dennis Rylant and son, Jonathan Rylant, 23

Work history: Started waiting tables at 16 and has done so on and off for 30 years. Recently she was also a licensed insurance sales agent. She moved to Ellsworth from southern Michigan almost a year ago to help her sister Sonia Cetnarowski, Judy's owner and cook, with the restaurant.

"I plan to eventually go back into insurance sales. But right now, I'm having so much fun."

Judy's hours of operation: 5 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily

What do you love about your job?

"I love everything about it. Being able to joke with customers, knowing them by name, knowing what they want to eat. And in the summer having fun with new people I don't know, making them happy and having them come back the next day."

If you could change one thing about your job what would it be?

"These cement floors. They're hard on my legs."

Unique aspect of the job?

"You can be yourself as opposed to having a professional office attitude. You can play around a little more."

What's the most embarrassing thing that's happened to you while waiting tables?

"I overflowed the coffee pot, cleaned up the mess and turned around and did the same thing right over again."

What's the hardest part of your job?

"Opening the restaurant at 5 a.m. My alarm goes off at 3:30 a.m. and I fight it for 20 minutes."

What is the one thing you could not do your job without?

"I couldn't do it without my apron and pens."

Reporter's experience:

I started my shift at Judy's about 10 minutes late and was relieved when Sonia didn't hand me my walking papers.

Instead, she and Nina were all smiles and showed me the ropes. I learned what the breakfast sandwich special of the day was, how they make coffee and the super secret space they stow the sugar free syrup.

I served the restaurant's top selling items pancakes and Judy's Mess (a mix of potatoes, ham, sautéed onions and green peppers, topped with scrambled eggs and cheese) and topped off enough coffees to keep Charlevoix buzzing through lunch.

The coolest part about the breakfast rush was meeting some of the regulars (one of whom even asked me out — a much needed boost for a new mom). I followed in Jane and Bob Hoffman, seasonal residents from Indiana who took a rectangular table close to the kitchen. Later, Charlevoix's own Charlie and Neva Kehrer came in. Even though the two couples hadn't planned to dine together, they did. Jane said what brings her back every day for breakfast is "Good food and good friends."

I love the restaurant business for the same reason I love the news business. It never stops — there's never a dull moment. I spent summers in college waiting tables at City Park Grill (the full service and all). It felt great to put the apron back on at Judy's where the staff is friendly and the made-to-order, fresh eats keep customers happy.

Charlevoix Courier editor Julie Witthoeft tries new occupations and writes about her findings in "On the job" which features Charlevoix residents working in Charlevoix. This feature appears the second Wednesday of the month in the Charlevoix Courier. E-mail "On the job" ideas and comments to news@charlevoixcourier.com.

Charlevoix native authors wine book

Sharon Kegerreis hosts book siging this weekend

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

When people think of wine country, they may automatically have visions of cities in California and regions in France, but a Charlevoix native's new book on vineyards may surprise you.

Sharon Kegerreis, a 1986 graduate of Charlevoix High School and co-author of "From the Vine: Exploring Michigan Wineries," highlights more than 50 Michigan vineyards from southern Michigan to the Upper Peninsula.

"Michigan wineries are a fast growing industry," she said.

A fast growing industry, indeed. According to the Michigan Grape and Wine Industry Council, Michigan's wine grape acreage grew 12 percent from 2003 to 2006 and has increased 60 percent in the last decade.

"By far the largest recent vineyard plantings have been Riesling; but pinot grigio, pinot noir, cabernet franc and vidal have also shown substantial increases," the council stated in the release. "Traditional European varieties now account for two-thirds of Michigan's wine grape acreage. The balance is mainly comprised of hybrid varieties (which are) crosses between European and native North American varieties."

One of the wineries featured in the book is located in Suttons Bay and owned by Silvio Ciccone, father of pop star Madonna.

"I think there are three key markets for this book. You have those that like wine and maybe even have discovered some Michigan wines and then you have those who love to travel in Michigan and this is a great book for them," said Kegerreis, whose background is in marketing and communications. "This is also a neat book for those who wish to support local agriculture because these grapes are grown in Michigan soil by Michigan farmers."

Kegerreis' co-author Lorri Hathaway was even married in a vineyard.

"We both grew up in northern Michigan and I grew up in Charlevoix and Lori grew up in Leelanau Peninsula, so when we came back to do the book, we fell in love with Michigan all over again," said Kegerreis. "We had the opportunity to travel all over the world and when we came back, we said, 'Wow, this place is really beautiful.'"

Added the Chelsea resident, "Someday I hope to move back up north."

While "From the Vine" won't be a how-to guide for novice wine enthusiasts, also known as oenophiles, the book does detail the stories of generations of family wine makers and the types of wine they grow.

"These people are hardworking and passionate about wine making," Kegerreis said. "People will learn each winery offers a unique experience. If you don't find a wine you like at one vineyard, keep looking. I'm sure you'll find one you love."

And Michigan's vineyards offer more than wine as some create their own vodka, brandy and cider.

Due to the region's harsh winters, Michigan wine makers can only use certain

Michigan Department of State Bureau of Elections

Notice to Voters: New Voter Identification Requirement in Effect

Due to a recent court ruling, every Michigan voter who offers to vote in the polls must comply with the requirement by showing picture identification or signing and affidavit attesting that he or she is not in possession of picture identification.

Voters with picture identification: Voters can satisfy the picture identification requirement by showing a Michigan driver's license or a Michigan personal identification card.

Voters who do not possess either document may show any of the following forms of picture identification as long as they are current:

- Driver's license or personal identification card issued by another state.
- Federal or state government-issued photo identification.
- U.S. passport.
- Military identification card with photo.
- Student identification with photo from a high school or an accredited institution of higher education.
- Tribal identification card with photo.

Voters without picture identification: Michigan election law anticipates that not all voters will have picture identification. Voters who do not bring picture identification to the polls or do not possess picture identification can vote like any other voter by signing an affidavit.

Questions regarding the picture identification requirement can be directed to your local city or township clerk's office.

We CROP because we care

Walkers with the 24th Annual Church World Service Crop Walk trekked from Charlevoix Middle School to Ironton to fight hunger locally and globally. Of the money raised by local walkers, 25 percent stays in town. Funds raised by Crop walkers in 2006 topped $14,000 in this area with 91 walkers attending. The amount raised this year was not available by press time. (Above, from left) Todd Thompson, Gail Seidel, Laura Borths, Katie Young and Carly Thompson walk on M-66. grapes.

"This made them (farmers) be careful about what they planted, but over the years they discovered some European varieties like chardonay, pinot grigio, noirs could survive here," Kegerreis said. "Since the wine tastes like the soil, a southwestern (Michigan) wine will have a different flavor than one from the U.P. (Upper Peninsula)."

The oldest winery Kegerreis found in Michigan is St. Julian, a vineyard moved in 1936 to Paw Paw so the family business could be closer to the Lake Michigan shore, an area renowned for its healthy grapes.

A book signing scheduled from 1 to 6 p.m. and a wine tasting from 6 to 9 p.m. on Apple Fest Saturday, Oct. 13 will be held at Zaccaro's Market in Charlevoix.

Tickets are $5 with half the proceeds donated to the Charlevoix Public Library.

Kegerreis' and Hathaway's 192-page hardcover book featuring stories and photographs on 51 wineries, with a foreword written by Gov. Jennifer Granholm, will be available at Zaccaro's Market and online at www.michiganvine.com.

What? Sharon Kegerreis, a 1986 graduate of Charlevoix High School and co-author of "From the Vine. Exploring Michigan Wineries," will be in town to sign copies of her book.

When? 1 to 6 p.m. and a wine tasting from 6 to 9 p.m. on Apple Fest Saturday, Oct. 13.

Courier advertising manager tries to kick the habit

Kim
commits to quit

Charlevoix resident and Courier advertising manager Kim Taylor has joined millions of others in attempting to free herself from nicotine's death grip.

Her method of attack is a new prescription pill from Pfizer called Chantix. According to the official Chantix Web site (www.chantix.com) the pill contains no nicotine and helps reduce the urge to smoke by keeping nicotine from reaching key receptors in the brain.

The Courier will follow Kim's progression weekly as she attempts to kick the habit.

THE PROGRAM

When did you start?

Sept. 24. Quit smoking entirely on Sept. 30.

How does it work?

Kim takes one .5 milligram pill the first three days; two .5 milligram pills on days 4-7; day eight and each day after, she takes two one milligram pills. Chantix literature recommends continuing to take the pill for 12 weeks. During the first seven days Chantix literature states users don't have to worry about quitting entirely and encourages users to let the drug get into their system first.

KIM'S BACKGROUND

Name: Kim Taylor

Age: 41

Family: Husband, John; children Cora, 11 and Keon, 7

When did you smoke your first cigarette?

Third-grade. Started smoking regularly at 14.

How many cigarettes did you smoke a day before starting this new program?

A pack (20 cigarettes)

Have you tried to quit before?

Three times, twice with pregnancy and a third time "just because" and did it cold turkey.

Why did you fail?

"I didn't really want to."

What prompted you to try to quit this time?

"My daughter was getting a sports physical and saw Jim Stewart. When he got done with the physical he said, 'I told a friend of yours the next time I saw you I was going to write you one of these' and handed me the prescription.

I'm spending $50 a week on cigarettes and other people I know have quit on it."

Why Chantix?

"If I have a cigarette it hasn't stopped all the progress I've made. But it does make cigarettes taste yucky."

How sure are you that you will succeed this time?

"I really want to smoke but I'd say I'm 75 percent sure I won't."

THE TRUTH

How many cigarettes have you smoked since starting?

Three

When did you smoke your last cigarette?

Oct. 1

What has surprised you?

"I'm not a b*#!h. It's not effecting me the way it has before. Before when I quit smoking, I'd get extremely emotional — angry or crying. I had huge mood swings and I haven't with this.

Courier advertising manager Kim Taylor is trying to quit smoking using this new prescription drug, Chantix. The Courier will follow her progress weekly for one month.

What do you like about this verses other methods of quitting?

"Nicorette was nasty and cold turkey didn't take care of the urge and the physical side effects."

What has been the most difficult?

"Associations like that cup of coffee in the morning on the way to work or having a beer."

Any side effects?

"During the first week I had some really interesting dreams. And I've been drinking a lot of water."

THE PHARMACIST'S PERSPECTIVE

John Ochs, pharmacist and owner of Central Drug Store in Charlevoix provided the following information regarding Chantix.

How popular has this been in terms of sale?

"A fair amount of people are on the program. Most people have done pretty well on it. Taking it for about three months. It's recommended for use up to six months."

What caution do you give buyers?

"It causes nausea in most people so take it after a meal."

Are there any other popular prescription medications that claim to assist smokers in kicking the habit?

There are others like Zyban. This is more effective, according to trials it's by far the most effective, one that's come out yet. This is a combination nicotine agonist which gives effects of nicotine and blocks the nicotine if you smoke."

Cost?

"Most insurance covers it. Some have not." At Central Drug Store without insurance it's $115 for a four week box.

Appellate court upholds Goldstick's conviction

BY STEVE ZUCKER
PETOSKEY NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

David Goldstick

The Michigan Court of Appeals has upheld the 2005 first-degree murder conviction of a Charlevoix man who shot and killed his long-time friend and fellow VFW member.

In an unpublished opinion released Thursday, Oct. 4 the three-member appellate panel found no merit in the issues raised by David Edward Goldstick, 59.

On Dec. 9, 2005 a jury convicted Goldstick on the first-degree murder charge following a five-day trial. He was sentenced to serve life in prison, the mandatory sentence for a first-degree murder conviction.

The conviction stemmed from events that took place on April 20, 2005. On that day Goldstick used a handgun muffled by a home-made silencer to shoot and kill Bill Brady, 79. The killing took place in a temporary office for the Charlevoix VFW organization in the back of the Brady family's storage shed next-door to the VFW property off U.S. 31 in Charlevoix.

Goldstick made repeated statements to police in which he admitted to the shooting. Testimony at the trial indicated that Goldstick was afraid that Brady was about to discover that Goldstick had taken money from the VFW's account.

Appeals are automatically filed on behalf of defendants convicted of first degree murder.

In the appeal, Goldstick's attorney asked the court to overturn the conviction on the grounds that:

— Goldstick's admissions to police should not have been admitted to evidence because he did not fully understand the implications of waiving his right to remain silent.

— Goldstick was denied a fair trial because of the pre-trial news media coverage of the case and that his defense attorney should have asked for a change of venue.

— Demonstration and other evidence shown to the jury was unfairly admitted.

The court found no merit in the arguments.

The court did find that photographs of Brady taken after the shooting were likely more prejudicial than probative (explanatory), but found the error "was harmless because of the overwhelming evidence against the defendant."

Goldstick is currently lodged at the Macomb Correctional Facility in New Haven.

Steve Zucker may be reached at (231) 439-9346 or szucker@petoskeynews.com.

Sheriff begins research for second book

Lasater writes book of World War I, Korea vets

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

"I can't do this by myself. I didn't do the World War II book by myself. I had a lot of help and I already have had a tremendous amount of help on this project. This isn't a George Lasater project, this is a project of many people."

George T. Lasater
CHARLEVOIX COUNTY SHERIFF AND AUTHOR

After every copy of his first book flew off store shelves in less than 90 days, Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater is now in the research stages of his second book.

Lasater took some time from his work as sheriff and local author to give the Courier a sneak preview of his newest book.

"My ultimate goal is to cover all of Charlevoix's contributions to every engagement the United States has been involved with," he said. "The World War II book went very well. I probably get an inquiry about once or twice a week, so I thought I would take on World War I and Korea and combine them in one publication."

Lasater said due to all the World War I veterans being deceased, that portion of the book will likely be smaller since there are fewer people around to tell their stories.

"It will be shorter, but it's going to be a harder project to come up with," he said.

Writing these books is of utmost importance, Lasater said, because the stories of soldiers, of community and American pride are the fabric which is Charlevoix County.

"We had a lot of participation in this county and I'll try to interview as many people as I can," he said. "Just like in the World War II book, I'm sure there will be so many stories from people who I've known, but that I had no idea (of) the things they've done."

A story Lasater has already heard is of a young East Jordan soldier.

"This young man, 18 or so, was headed over to Europe on a transport ship and the seas were rough and he was in the bowels of the transport ship where he got so seasick he couldn't even get out of his bunk," he said. "He was actually turning green. His best friend from East Jordan came down to check on him, he hadn't eaten for days, and he was terribly sick. The young man told his best friend, 'When you get back to East Jordan, would you please tell my mother I died a horrible death?'"

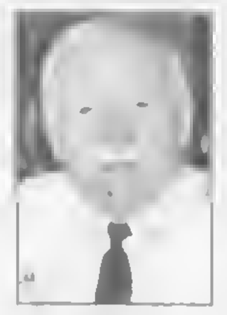
Lasater added, "Well, he didn't. He survived and went through the campaign in Europe and came back to East Jordan and lived a nice life."

Readying himself to be a second time author, Lasater said he won't make the same mistake twice.

"When I did the World War II book, I thought I would interview 100 people and have it done in a year, but that was unrealistic," he said. "I interviewed over 200 people and it took me four years. I was so naiive."

In spite of weeks and years of research and some emotional interviews Lasater said he is lucky to have been so well received in his project.

"When I started the World War II book I had people say, 'They're (veterans) not going to want to talk to you about what they've gone through and surprisingly that was not true. Out of all the people I interviewed, I only had two who were reluctant," Lasater said. "The rest said, 'Sheriff, we know we're greeting our twilight years and we want our families to know what we did."



George T. Lasater

He added, "It was wonderful. I felt so honored to listen to those stories. There is satisfaction in saying I did something that was really good for the community."

Anyone with stories or photos of loved ones who served in any capacity during World War I or the Korean conflict may contact Lasater at his home by calling 582-7001.

"I just let them tell me their story as they would like to have it published and remembered," he said. "This is their story, not mine."

Lasater has already donated over a $1,000 to veterans groups from proceeds from the sale of his first book so they may purchase memorial plaques for soldiers passed.

While he was too young to have served in either World War I or II or Korea, Lasater does have some memories of the era.

"World War II was a topic of conversation. It was on everybody's mind. Every family had contributions and almost every family had someone serving somehow," he said. "Korea, being a smaller engagement, was not talked about as much. They knew it was going on and they knew people were sacrificing."

He added, "We had a German prisoner of war camp not too far from my hometown of Arkansas and I remember us driving through there close to Christmas, I was like 5 or 6, and you could hear them singing Christmas carols in German."

Lasater, who hopes only to give back to the county which has been so good to him over the years, said he has always been inquisitive, which may be what led him to these projects.

"I just enjoy interviewing and compiling and I've always been kind of a history buff," he said. "When I was growing up in the south, I would go around to all of my elderly relatives and take notes and ask, 'What was it like in the old days?'"

In addition to preserving the histories of area servicemen, Lasater said he has had the chance to make some new friends.

"I got the opportunity to meet people I would never (otherwise) had the opportunity to meet and make friends with — some wonderful friends," he said. "Some nights I would go home and (lie) in bed and go to sleep thinking about the person I just interviewed, what they went through and how it changed their lives."

Lasater thanked all those who helped him with his first book and urges anyone who would like to tell their story to contact him.

"I can't do this by myself. I didn't do the World War II book by myself," he said. "I had a lot of help and I already have had a tremendous amount of help...on this project. This isn't a George Lasater project, this is a project of many people."

Lasater may soon revise and add information to his World War II book for another press run. If he does, the Courier will have information as it is received.

Holly Daze tickets are on sale now

The 15th Annual Holly Daze Gala Celebration "Sparkle" to benefit Charlevoix Area Hospital will take place on Nov. 29 at Castle Farms in Charlevoix.

The committee is busily planning a spectacular evening to kick off the 2007 holiday season. Guests will once again be treated to free valet parking as they arrive, entering to the sounds of Tom Kaufman and will be encouraged to participate in the silent auction during cocktails. Guests will receive a special full color photograph to commemorate the evening.

The live auction will have items that include once in a lifetime experiences and other special and sparkling items for the holiday season. Participants will also have a chance to purchase special items, called "gifts of love," for patients of the hospital.

This year's event is raising money to purchase a digital mammography machine for the hospital. The cost of this technology is $400,000.

Although there is no evidence that this form of mammography results in better diagnosis of the disease, it does result in efficiencies for the provider and for the patient. Some patients claim quicker imaging and less discomfort during the examination.

At Charlevoix Area Hospital, the goal is to have digital mammography up and running by the end of 2008.

Holly Daze tickets are $100 per person ($60 of which is fully tax-deductible) and include cocktails and dinner. The festivities start at 5:30 p.m. on Nov. 29. Tickets are now available by calling (231) 547-8685.

AAA reminds motorists: Don't veer for deer

Courtesy photo

October and November are two of the most dangerous months in Michigan for car-deer crashes. The Michigan Deer Crash Coalition, an organization dedicated to reducing car-deer crashes, reminds drivers that they should not swerve to avoid hitting a deer.

With the arrival of fall, motorists should be more aware of deer while traveling on Michigan roadways. October and November are two of the most dangerous months in Michigan for car-deer crashes.

"Car-deer crashes in Michigan cause at least $130 million in damage annually, with an average cost of $2,135 per vehicle," said Michigan Deer Crash Coalition (MDCC) chairman Jack Peet.

Recognizing this fact, Gov. Jennifer Granholm has proclaimed October as "Michigan Car-Deer Crash Safety Awareness Month."

In 2006, Michigan experienced a 4 percent increase in the number of total car-deer crashes. According to the Michigan State Police Criminal Justice Information Center, there were 60,875 deer-vehicle crashes in 2006, up from 58,741 crashes reported in 2005. However, officials note that many crashes also go unreported, so actual crash numbers are much higher. Last year, 12 people lost their lives in deer crashes and another 1,477 were injured.

"To reduce the number of car-deer deaths and injuries, motorists are encouraged to stay aware, awake, alert and sober," said Michigan Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land. "Motorists should remember to always fasten their safety belts. Safety belts often make the difference in surviving a serious crash."

Kent County once again topped the state's counties in number of car-deer crashes at 2,208. The remaining top 10 were Jackson (2,017); Oakland (1,866); Calhoun (1,817); Montcalm (1,576); Ingham (1,530); Eaton (1,420); Lapeer (1,373); Kalamazoo (1,354); and Clinton (1,265).

Although motorists should be aware of deer at all times, 80 percent of all car-deer crashes occur on two-lane roads between dusk and dawn.

Deer are herd animals and frequently travel in single file. If you see one deer cross the road, chances are there are more waiting, noted Penney Melchoir, Department of Natural Resources field coordinator.

The Michigan Deer Crash Coalition, an organization dedicated to reducing car-deer crashes, reminds drivers that they should not swerve to avoid hitting a deer. Police statistics show that most motorist deaths and injuries occur when drivers swerve to avoid hitting the deer and strike a fixed object, such as a tree or another vehicle. No one wants to see the deer destroyed, Peet said, but striking the animal is often the safest action.

Davies and Staffel exhibit together again

Bonnie Staffel

Courtesy photo

The Jordan River Arts Council will exhibit the works of Charlevoix potter Bonnie Staffel and the late John Davies (left) of Flint. Davies and Staffel exhibited together in 1964, shortly before Davies' death, at the Left Bank Gallery in Flint. The exhibit opens Oct. 14 and runs through Nov. 11. The Jordan River Arts Center is open daily from 1-4 p.m. at 301 Main St. in East Jordan.

The Jordan River Arts Council will exhibit the works of Charlevoix potter Bonnie Staffel and the late John Davies of Flint.

Davies and Staffel exhibited together in 1964 shortly before Davies' death at the Left Bank Gallery in Flint. This retrospective exhibit will feature examples of their lifetime works.

Davies' work began during the Depression with his first one-man show in 1929. During the Depression, Davies taught painting under the auspices of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, a forerunner of the Works Progress Administration. He also taught at the Flint Institute of Art, for the Mott Foundation, and the University of Michigan Extension Service in Flint. He was one of the charter members of the Flint Sculpture Association/Left Bank Gallery Cooperative.

He was a prolific painter and printmaker who developed a unique technique of serigraphs without using the traditional cut screen. He was well-known for landscapes and city scenes, receiving many awards. The exhibit features over 70 works of art many of which will be for sale. Especially notable are the intaglio prints from the 1930s, watercolors, and the series of limited edition portfolio serigraphs.

His work is represented in many museums including the Detroit Institute of Art, Flint Institute of Art, Albion College, Saginaw Museum and the Weisman Art Museum in Minneapolis, Minn. His work can also be found in many private collections. Davies is the grandfather of John Hubbard of Boyne City and Steve Hubbard of Central Lake.

Staffel is a well-known potter now living in Charlevoix. She became acquainted with Davies while living in Maumee, Ohio. She has a long list of credits and is represented in many museums and private collections. She, with Bill Staffel, established Staffel Pottery in 1965, now the Cycling Salamander, south of Charlevoix. In 1985, they closed the studio doors and Bonnie ventured to North Carolina to work in the John C. Campbell Folk School and eventually became program director. She has taught in Denmark and Guatemala, Miss. and for Elder Hostel. She has also traveled to the Orient, visiting China, Japan, Thailand and Hong Kong, as well as England, Norway and Germany.

She has produced functional pottery as well as one-of-a-kind stoneware and porcelain sculptures. One signature item are her birds. Her later work includes beautiful large vessels which have been pit fired. Staffel has received many awards, participated in numerous shows and exhibits since 1949. She is a member of Jordan River Arts Council and exhibits at the center frequently.

Staffel was one of the curators of the Masters in Clay exhibit at the council and now, along with Bill Staffel, has curated the Davies' Exhibit. The exhibit opens Oct. 14 and runs through Nov. 11. The Jordan River Arts Center is open daily from 1-4 p.m. at 301 Main St. in East Jordan.

Back on the water

Deb Saur-MacKenzie, director of Boulder Park Terrace Nursing and Rehabilitation Center, is pictured here with center resident, Gail Leibold and Ward Brothers captain, Bernie Ward on Oct. 4 before the three and four other center residents enjoyed an afternoon cruise on lakes Charlevoix and Michigan. This was one of the center's weekly outings that was suggested by Leibold. She said she spent almost every day on the water before her stroke three years ago. She said since being wheelchair bound she hasn't been out on a boat.

Booth sign up underway for Nov. 17 Mom to Mom sale at St. Mary School

Kids and teens grow like weeds and bills for new duds and toys can grow just as quickly.

Moms who are tired of paying full price for children's gear, can find relief at the upcoming 8th Annual Mom to Mom Sale.

This year the sale will take place from 9 a.m. to noon Nov. 17 in the family center at St. Mary School located at 1005 Bridge St.

The event will feature over 40 moms and teens selling oodles of "gently used" infant, children's and teen clothing, toys, books furniture, bikes and more.

Adults who are 18 and over and wish to attend will be charged a $2 entrance fee.

For moms or teens looking to unload some gear, event co-ordinator Beth Martin still has booth space available. There is a charge of $25 per space.

Proceeds from this year's event will benefit St. Mary School.

Volunteers to help set up and run the event are also still needed

The opportunity to shop from 8 to 9 a.m., before the doors open to everyone else, is offered as an incentive to vendors and volunteers.

To volunteer or set up a booth space call Martin at (231) 547-1768.

Secretary of State launches Harvest Gathering food drive

Michigan residents again can drop off nonperishable food items at Secretary of State branch offices to benefit needy families in their communities for the 17th annual Michigan Harvest Gathering.

"Harvest Gathering allows more fortunate Michigan residents to share their blessings with friends and neighbors who struggle to make ends meet," Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land said. "With 1 million Michigan residents expected to use a food bank this year, each donation helps one more family put an adequate meal on the table."

Donors are asked to give items such as peanut butter, canned tuna and other meat, and canned fruits, vegetables and soups, although all nonperishable food items are welcome. Because of safety concerns, canned stews won't be accepted. Cash donations also are accepted and will be used to cover the cost of collecting and distributing the food.

In 2006, the Michigan Harvest Gathering collected more than $300,000 and 350,000 pounds of food. The 2007 goal is $350,000 and 500,000 pounds of food. The campaign helps supply the state's regional food banks through donations of food and money. The regional food banks serve food pantries, soup kitchens and shelters in every Michigan county.

Donations will be accepted at all branch offices through Friday, Dec. 14.

Chamber says 'Thanks for DeKorne stalks'

(Right) On Oct. 1, Mark DeKorne, owner of DeKorne's Farm in Atwood, delivered corn stalks to decorate downtown Charlevoix. About 20 students from Charlevoix High School were downtown on Oct. 2 to affix the stalks to street side trees. Then, on Oct. 5 DeKorne brought a few extra to the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce to decorate their sign. Here DeKorne is pictured with Jackie Merta, president of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce and Judy Corley, a chamber volunteer. DeKorne's offers a market garden, honey and maple syrup.

Record breaking Northern Lights

St. Mary School hosted the most successful Northern Lights event to date on Sept. 29. Organizers credit the success in part to the early raffle sales, the early auction item sales and the support of the community. The Children's Art Gallery showcasing student art had proceeds of over $2,000. One of the big sales was a Sue Bolt original called "Summertime" which was purchased for $975. A fly fishing trip to the Idaho Club went for $1,000. Angel Gifts proceeds which funded technology upgrades, tuition and enrichment for the school generated over $18,000. A final tabulation is still taking place and a formal press release is forthcoming.

Seniors fight back

On Oct. 4, reserve Charlevoix County deputy Midge Daniels taught an identity theft class sponsored by the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging to 40 seniors at Boyne Area Senior Center. The program is intended to give information needed to identify frauds, cons and scams and to take common-sense precautions to protect yourself and your assets. According to the "Senior Safe Handbook," half of fraud or scam victims are 50 years and older.

Bridge Street Book Shop closes doors

STORY HIGHLIGHT
The Bridge Street Book Shop will permanently close its doors this month, according to Jim Berlage, who has owned the 14-year old store, since 2002. Store hours are 9 a.m to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday Inventory is discounted to sell and store fixtures are also for sale.

The Bridge Street Book Shop will permanently close its doors this month, according to Jim Berlage, who has owned the 14-year old store, since 2002.

Berlage cites the downturn of the Michigan economy; several years of losses; a 60 percent drop in sales this year; as well as the opening of the new Charlevoix Public Library, which is experiencing great success in its new showcase facility, as contributing factors in making his decision to close.

Berlage said, "I want to thank my loyal customers who have supported me through the years. I will miss them and the many conversations and relationships built, as well as selling books."

Store hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Inventory is discounted to sell and store fixtures are also for sale. Booksense gift cards may be redeemed until closing, and anytime thereafter at any participating Booksense book stores across the country.

Bridge Street Book Shop is located at 153 North M-66 in the Glen's parking lot. For more information, call (231) 547-7323 or visit www.charlevoixbooks.com.

Scott Kelly inducted into Ferris hall of fame

Scott Kelly of Charlevoix was inducted into the Ferris State University 2007 Bulldog Athletics Hall of Fame on Friday, Sept. 28 in Big Rapids.

This year's inductees included: Kelly of Charlevoix, baseball (1982-86); Mike Brooks of Livonia, football (1992-95); Joe Charles of Naples, Fla., men's swimming (1987-90); Lewis Garner of Grand Rapids, men's basketball (1971-75); John Gruden of Rochester, men's ice hockey (1990-94); Karen (Volkers) Keller of Hudsonville, women's volleyball (1987-90); Danielle (Smith) Walker of Norton Shores, women's basketball (1987-91); and coach Ron English of Charlotte, men's and women's golf (1979-97).

A 15-member selection committee of faculty, staff, alumni and community members chose the inductees from among 34 nominees. The class spans three decades and includes representation from nine different sports.

The eight new inductees join 74 honorees already enshrined. The Bulldog Athletics Hall of Fame, which inducted its charter class in 2000, was established to honor those student-athletes and coaches who have distinguished themselves in their sport or honorary members who made truly exceptional contributions to athletics.

Following several tough losses for Charlevoix varsity football, the Rayders obliterated Kalkaska 34-0.

Charlevoix was 27-0 at halftime, but that didn't stop them from scoring once more in the second half.

"This was a nice win for us," said varsity coach Don Jess. "These kids have been working hard in practice everyday and they never give up."

He added, "Everyone played a lot and we got a win at their (Kalkaska's) homecoming."

Charlevoix was led by Nate Golovich, who had three touchdowns.

Josh Wolletz and Corey Gotshall also scored touchdowns for the Rayders and Cliff Jones had a big night of passing for 129 yards and rushing for 123 yards.

Jones also kicked three extra points while Trevor Cole kicked one extra point.

Jon Putman had three receptions for 101 yards and completed a pass for 51 yards.

Justin Klooster had an interception and Gotshall had eight tackles to lead the defense.

"This Friday we'll have to be ready for Harbor Springs," Jess said. "This will be the seniors' last home game and parents night."

Rayder football action begins at 7 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 12 on Kipke Field.

Harbor gets fit

Harbor Industries Inc. launched a corporation-wide wellness program this year. Each month Harbor invites its employees to do something different to promote good health. In September, they held their first-ever fall Olympics, with employees competing in bocce ball, croquet and ladder golf. Gold, silver and bronze medals were awarded. (Above) Croquet winners shown with their medals are Kim Swidorski, Mark Musser and Gary Hammond.

Korfball World Championships await Charlevoix's Kate Madison

What started as a Hope College professor's idea to introduce a coed sport unique to America has turned into a dream come true for several Hope students who will be part of the USA team in the Korfball World Championship when they are held in Brno, The Czech Republic, in late October and early November. Kate Madison, a senior at Hope College, of Charlevoix has been included as a member on the USA team.

Korfball is the world's only coed team sport and resembles the game of basketball. Korf is a Dutch word for basket. There are baskets at each end of the court, but no backboards. There is no dribbling, only passing. A team consists of four players, two men and two women. Each successful shot is worth one point.

Longtime Hope physical educator and softball coach Karla Wolters introduced Korfball to the west Michigan sports scene in 2005 when she began teaching a class in it. In the fall of 2005 Hope entertained a Korfball team from Europe. The next summer a team comprised of Hope students and recent alumni traveled to Europe for a series of games. Last fall Hope hosted the tryouts for the USA team that will compete in the World Championships. Wolters serves on the governing board of USA Korfball.

"Our Hope Korfball players are thrilled to be part of the USA Korfball team that will be competing in Brno," said Wolters. "It is a dream come true to be able to compete with the world's best Korfball teams for the World Cup. We are also looking forward to learning about Brno and the surrounding area as none of us have ever been in the Czech Republic before. We aspire to play with passion, enjoy the entire experience and represent Hope College and the USA well in our travels."

The World Championships will bring together players from 16 countries for games between Oct. 30 and Nov. 10. The USA team will embark on Oct. 27.

Countries represented in the championships are Australia, Belgium, Catalonia, China, Chinese Taipei, Czech Republic, England, Germany, Hungary, India, the Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Russia, South Africa and USA.

The tournament will begin with pool play. The USA squad will be matched against teams from Chinese Taipei, Germany and Russia. Play will continue in a championship and consolation bracket. Some of the games will be televised by Czech Television.

The first Korfball World Championships were held in 1978 in the Netherlands. They are held every four years. The Netherlands has won six of the previous seven World Championships, including 2003. The International Korfball Federation is headquartered in The Netherlands.

The USA will be competing in the World Championships for the first time since 1991 when the team ended seventh.

TEEN SCENE inside the halls

Teen band kicks out death metal sound

Members of the local teen band, Death Eternal, are (above, from left) Ray Fuller, Derek Tuncap, Corey Winters and Jason Martin. To hear Death Eternal, visit http://www.myspace.com/truedeatheternal.

CAITLIN DONNELLY
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Death Eternal, sounds kind of final, right? Wrong, it's not at all final. It's a big start for four small town boys.

This death metal grind core band started in 1999. Corey Winters, a 17-year-old Northwest Academy student is the band's lead vocals and guitar. He said he loves to play for audiences because it gives him an adrenaline rush.

Death Eternal has played four shows, sharing the stage with area teen bands like Fail to Order, Carving Jennifer and Kama Kari Black.

Death Eternal, where does one come up with a name like that?

"It actually comes from the Mayhem song 'Life Eternal,'" Winters said.

This self-managed band gained inspiration from bands they grew up listening to, such as, Black Sabbath, Led Zeppelin and Metallica. They practice their melodic tunes during the weekend in Winters' basement. The three older boys, Ray Fuller (guitar and back-up vocals), Jason Martin (bass) and Derek Tuncap (drums), are all currently out of school. Winters is in his junior year. They hope to get signed and tour when he graduates.

Donnelly, Way to steer Courier's Teen Scene content

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Included in this week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier is Teen Scene — a page dedicated to and written by two local teenagers.

This page will appear the second Wednesday of each month during the school year in the Courier.

Steering the content are Aubrey Way, a Charlevoix High School senior and Caitlin Donnelly, a junior at Northwest Academy. Way is the 17-year-old daughter of Mike and Chris Way of Charlevoix and Donnelly is the 16-year-old daughter of Alexis Antinossi and Thomas Donnelly of Charlevoix.

Donnelly is kicking the section off this month with a feature on a local teen band called Death Eternal.

Caitlin Donnelly

"I think I'm a great fit for Teen Scene because I have a lot of friends in different schools and towns. I can bring more than sports to the public's focus," she said.

Topics Way and Donnelly will tackle will vary from coverage of teen events to an in-depth look at issues teens are facing.

Donnelly's writing experience includes poetry submissions to the Charlevoix High School poetry book as well as essay writing for school. Way is in her second year as a writer for both the Charlevoix High School yearbook and newspaper.

Aubrey Way

"I enjoy writing because it's a way for me to interact with people in my community. It's a way for me to express myself in ways I wouldn't normally," Way said.

Way's a sports fan and has been a member of the Charlevoix High School volleyball team for two years. Donnelly's interests include music and poetry.

In the spring, Way and Donnelly will pass the torch to the next Teen Scene content leaders.

E-mail Teen Scene ideas to Way at 08wayaub@rayder.org or Donnelly at when_it_rains13@yahoo.com.

Two eagles released Sunday at St Mary Cement

EAGLE

She added, "At 12 weeks of age they are full-size, but they are clueless."

While the male was brought to her from another rescue center, Lessard found the female and, after throwing Mary a dead rat, was able to snatch her.

"She was so flabbergasted at this food falling from the sky I just grabbed her out of the wild," she said.

Lessard said Mr. Hobbs was most likely weakened by eating something poisonous.

"Over the past several months these youngsters have had a chance to gain some weight and grow up a bit more," Lessard stated in a press release. "They are now very healthy, are feather perfect and are fully aerobically conditioned. It is time to give them back their freedom."

Founded 21 years ago as a way to educate people on wildlife conservation as well as to rehabilitate injured and orphaned raptors, the nonprofit organization, Wings of Wonder, offers more than 100 programs a year and serves nearly 9,000 people annually.

A rehabilitation specialist for more than 17 years, Lessard holds permits from the Department of Natural Resources and the U.S. Department of Fish and Wildlife Services to perform her work and has received awards from the Audubon society and was honored as 2007 Northern Michigan Environmentalist of the Year in education.

"We've developed a relationship with Wings of Wonder and we've also built two eagle nests (on the St Marys Cement property)," she said. "With any luck, this group will decide to stay here."

Hall said the release is just another way St Marys gives back to the community.

"This is the community we work in and it's also the community we live in and Medusa Creek is a good food source and there are a lot of pigeons, which are a good food source for raptors," she said. "This is one of those things the community can feel good about."

Following a short presentation, Lessard's husband Don released Mary, who flew out over the crowd of several hundred and out into the blue sky.

"It is a total joy to give these raptors back their freedom," Lessard said. "They totally would have died in the wild."

While Lessard said she adores her work with the birds of prey, doing so is costly.

"It's about $35 a day for an intensive care patient," she said. "We constantly have our hand out."

To donate money to build new bird enclosures or gift cards, call (231) 326-4663. For more information on Wings of Wonder, to adopt a raptor or book Lessard for a program, visit wow@wingsofwonder.org.

In addition to hosting the eagle release and building nesting platforms, St Mary cement has mounted nest boxes for kestrels, planted native flora and made some ponds, all of which can only encourage eagle repopulating efforts.

School board approves $1.3 million project

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Charlevoix Public Schools may have new administration and bus garage facilities by as early as next spring.

The $1.3 million combined project shows plans for a 3,000 square foot administration building on the northwest corner of the Charlevoix Middle School property and a new bus garage and wash facility on the current bus barn property located at 1021 May St.

"The board approved the project just this week," said Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Chet Janik. "Right now we're having the property surveyed and are finalizing bid documents."

He added, "They (school board) have looked at various options over the past several years and made the decision that an administration building would best serve the public in a central location and on property the district owns."

The school board members voted unanimously during their Monday, Oct. 8 meeting to approve the project.

Janik reminds taxpayers the sinking funds, .8675 mill approved in 1998 and renewed in 2003, can only lawfully be used for building and improvement projects.

"We cannot use a penny of that for operational costs," he said.

BETA Design, the same firm which worked on the Charlevoix High School, is in charge of the administration and bus garage project.

"Our goal is to have it out for bids in the month of November," Janik said. "The current administration building was put on the market this week. It is appraised at $199,000."

He added, "Our goal with the bus barn facility is to tear it

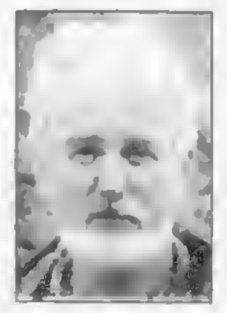
Citizen group takes Norwood mining operation back to court

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Three months after Norwood Township planners certified the 6-1 vote granting him a special use permit, mine operator and township supervisor Wayne Wynkoop is again under the judicial gun.

After twice granted the right to surface-mine limestone from his property at 01195 Norwood Rd. and twice fending off attempts by opponents to stop him, Wynkoop and over a dozen codefendants, including planning commission and board of trustees members, now face two new lawsuits — a motion for preliminary injunction and/or stay and an appeal of the planning commission's June 9 decision to grant Wynkoop the special use permit.



Wayne Wynkoop

"The next scheduled court date with Judge Powers is Nov. 7," Wynkoop said.

According to documents filed by Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety's attorney, Karen L. Ferguson, operations have recommenced, "but at a far higher level of industrial intensity and with far more severe impacts than previous to the injunction."

The citizen group members claim several special use stipulations have not been followed: stabilized construction access to prevent mud from being tracked onto Norwood Road; a gate limiting access to the mine; noise limit not to exceed 60 decibels and a limit of 30 truck trips a day; trucks prohibited from entering

Norwood Township man survives tractor accident

A Norwood Township man was fortunate to survive a tractor accident that left him hanging upside down for four hours in heavy rain.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater reported the accident which occurred on Oct. 9 in Norwood Township involving 75-year-old Richard Bartosik.

The accident occurred in the woods on Bartosik's farm at approximately 4:30 p.m. The front left tire of the tractor blew out and Bartosik lost control causing it to go over a small embankment and tip over.

Bartosik's leg was wedged between the tractor and he was stuck hanging upside down for over four hours in heavy rains and cold temperatures until he was located around 9 p.m.

Bartosik was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital where he was treated for his injuries and is reported in stable condition at this time.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office deputies were assisted on the scene by Charlevoix City EMS and Charlevoix City Fire Department.

Wynkoop vows to sell if resident fight continues the village unless delivering gravel there; obtain all necessary permits for access road and pay half the cost of signage.

MINE

"The Wynkoop defendants are blatantly conducting their operations in violation of these minimalist conditions," Ferguson stated.

However, Wynkoop said, all of the citizen group's aforementioned claims are false and he has proof.

"Per county requirements I am putting curbing and asphalt in at the end of my driveway to prevent mud and stone from being tracked onto the (Norwood) road; there is a gate to the mine entrance, but people can't see it from (Norwood) road, so they think it isn't there," he said.

Wynkoop explained that the average of 30 trips per day was exceeded by county road crews removing material for local roads.

"30 trips a day was for super gravel trains which can haul 35 yards of material. The county has dump trucks which can only haul six or seven yards at time," he said. "And I don't really have any control on which direction the trucks go after they leave the pit. I tell everyone the rules — unless they are going to deliver in the village, don't go through the village, but there's not much I can do except maybe refuse to load them the next time they come in."

The reason half of the signage has not been paid for, Wynkoop said, is because he has not received a bill.

"The county will bill the township and the township will bill me," he said. "As soon as they do that, I'll be writing a check."

Norwood resident Bill Gnodtke, one of two individuals named in the citizen group's articles of incorporation, could not be reached by press time.

Marion Shea-Light, the only other person listed as a member of Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety, deferred comment to Ferguson, who could not be reached for comment by press time.

The official handling the complaints, which range from noise to truck traffic, is Norwood Township Zoning Administrator Jonathan Scheel.

"I went out with a decibel meter and measured at (Wynkoop's) property line four times last month," he said. "The Special Use Permit allows 60 dB at the property line and each time it fell within 60 dB. It was 58 or lower."

To put that into perspective, Scheel said, "Background noise of a light wind is 60 dB or close to it. On days when there is no activity at the site, I was reading from 56 to 59 dB and days when he was working the reading was 56 to 59 dB. 130 decibels hurts your ears — that's like a rock concert — traffic going by will bounce up to 90, but most of it's 75 to 80 dB and normal conversations are going to be 60 to 65 dB."

He added, "I have looked into all complaints and I feel that the mining operation is in compliance with the Special Use Permit at this time."

Norwood Township officials have spent nearly $50,000 to defend the township from Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety's first lawsuit.

"The bottom line is I'm a one-man-band against a handful of citizens who have a lot of money and some influence. It's no secret they think they can wear me down until I go broke," he said. "You might make me go broke, but I'll only be broke for a day because I'll sign my name on that dotted line with a big mining operation and we'll pack our bags and move on."

He added, "It isn't what I want to do, but I will if I'm forced."

Who? Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety

What? They have filed two new lawsuits against Norwood Limestone Quarry's owner Wayne Wynkoop, the Norwood board of trustees, planning commission and zoning administrator among others in an attempt to shut down Wynkoop's mine

What's next? Opponents and proponents of the mine will be heard by Judge Thomas G. Power on Wednesday, Nov. 7 in Charlevoix's 33rd Circuit Court.

down along with the Quonset hut."

The bus barn, which is currently in the design stage, will house 15 buses.

Approximately $1.4 million of the original $3.1 million sinking fund coffer is left, Janik said, "So we are within budget."

Re/Max realty is handling the sale of the current administration building located at 208 West Clinton St.

"It was purchased in the early '70s as a temporary home for the school district administration," Janik said. "It has structural issues. It does not meet current Americans with Disabilities codes and it needs some major renovations."

He added, "It just didn't seem prudent to invest money in a building in (such) disrepair. And, we're not purchasing property so that is saving the district money."

Janik said proceeds from the current administration building sale will be funneled to future, unspecified, sinking fund projects.

"The new building will offer office space, conference rooms, work areas, storage space and room for our computer server," he said. "We're trying to be as financially conservative as possible but still meet the long-term needs of the district."

He added, "A new bus garage facility will offer lifts for the mechanics and a place to wash buses — studies show just washing buses can increase their life by seven years because of rust."

This northwest corner lot of the Charlevoix Middle School's property will not remain vacant much longer as school officials plan to erect the district's new administration building there. The Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education unanimously approved the next phase in the project, sending the job out for bids, during their Monday, Oct. 8 meeting.

Other projects completed with sinking funds include carpeting, roofing, landscaping, soffits, a gym floor and updates to the science rooms among others.

The current sinking fund millage is set to expire in June 2008.

"A renewal of that millage would have to go to a vote of the people, but the board has not made a decision to ask the voters for that," Janik said.

Charlevoix Public Schools at one time considered using the old library property located at 109 Clinton St. for their administration, but could not reach an agreement with the Charlevoix Public Library Board.

The 109 Clinton St. property will soon be available for lease as a cost cutting measure until the property is sold.

Buying your way to freedom?

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Just when you thought it was safe to buy back a scintilla of sanity, a fleck of freedom, reality sets in.

So, I'm reading how state Rep. Barbara Farrah (D-Wayne) introduced this bill, approved 69-39 in the House, to allow motorcycle riders to cruise without a helmet.

"What!?" Gohs shrieked with amazement and confusion — OK, so it was more of a bitter exclamation than a shriek. Could it be true Lansing has undergone a legislative lobotomy? Are the tides turning for freedom's sake? Will this finally be the year the Lions go all the way?

Then I read the not-so-fine print: Riders and passengers, must purchase the "H" permit for $100 per year ($200 for three years); undertake safety classes; buy $20,000 in insurance, though out-of-state riders would be exempt from paying to ride without headgear.

Paying for the privilege to enjoy a freedom legislators had no right to take in the first place seemed too good to be true, and it was, because that diva of Democrats, that sexiest of socialists, that Gov. Jennifer Granholm has sworn on her first edition hardcover of "Das Kapital" that she will veto anything that even hints of decriminalizing personal choice.

Don't get me wrong, I think anyone who rides without a helmet is gambling with their life.

It was the early 1980s when dad was cruising down an Alaskan highway on his motorcycle when someone cut him off, sending bike and rider end for end.

When he tells the story, he always holds up three fingers to show me the number and depth of the grooves cut into the helmet by the road, and stares at me with that look of someone who knows they narrowly escaped having their brain scraped off the street with a dustpan and squeegee.

The most confusing part of this whole legislative move toward faux freedom isn't that it won't pass, but why people are supporting it.

A governmental press release claims the bill will boost safety, law enforcement and tourism dollars.

"Michigan motorcyclists applauded the House of Representatives for uniting in support of a plan that modernizes Michigan's helmet law, restores common sense on the road and rolls out the welcome mat for motorcycle tourists," officials stated in the Oct. 11 release. "The bipartisan proposal is attracting a growing coalition of supporters, including the Michigan State Police Troopers Association, the Deputy Sheriffs Association of Michigan and a group of top business leaders."

The release goes on, "Allowing motorcyclists to ride helmet-free could generate more than $1.2 billion in direct and indirect revenue, according to a 2004 Michigan Consultants economic study. The plan will also give Michigan officials time to study the impacts of the change."

You hear that? The government needs to study the affects of having your noggin smashed against concrete at 60 mph.

And all this while Michiganders are bombarded with tax funded TV and radio commercials, harassed by law enforcement officials and force-fed studies in attempts to increase seatbelt usage.

But the contradictions get better as stated by Michael Moorman, president of the Michigan State Police Troopers Association, "This legislation puts in place appropriate protections for Michigan's citizens while generating much needed revenue which will support the services provided by the Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement Standards (MCOLES) and the Michigan Department of State Police."

How much does it cost to get police and politicians to recant previous propaganda? Well, H permits could generate $20 million for the general fund and as much as $15 million of that going to law enforcement.

Whether or not we join 30 other states who allow bare-skulled bikers is insignificant when you consider the dozens of other personal choices currently out of your grasp.

Those who wield the power say engaging in potentially dangerous activities will only further the number of deaths, and I agree. When you crash without a helmet or seatbelt you may die unnecessarily, but I'm with Uncle Scrooge who said, "If they would rather die, they had better do it, and decrease the surplus population."

Writer's year of personal challenge and growth

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

What a difference a year can make.

Last year at this time I was in Dearborn driving dad to his usual doctor's appointments checking to see if he was well enough to travel to San Francisco, Calif.

His anxiety got the best of him because real or imagined he felt he wasn't ready to take the trip. Little did any of us know his health was soon to spiral downward. By Thanksgiving last year, dad arrived via my sister's car and he came with a cough that got our attention. It made for an interesting holiday as we took him to the ER at Charlevoix Area Hospital Thanksgiving morning. He was quickly admitted having pneumonia in both lungs. My sister and I took turns calling home from the hospital giving specific instructions on how to prepare an entire Thanksgiving feast. Everyone said it was our best meal yet.

Hmmm... we weren't there to cook and add the extras we thought were necessary to give each dish its extra flavor. Turns out, family members prefer plain, unadorned, unaltered cooked food all along. Who knew, and we never asked. No time will be spent zesting oranges for the cranberries or soaking the brown rice for the stuffing this year.

Also during this year I've learned to cope with a loss of a dear friend to that infamous "C" word. Not a day passes where I don't talk to her as if she were standing in my kitchen. Her photos and notes cling by magnets collected from friends from over the years. I've made a point of taking photos of those brief and infrequent occasions when friends and family get together. I've covered the fridge with them to jog my memory of fun times I had during this very short summer caretaking dad.

I've learned a lot this year about diseases, health care, priorities, clearing out clutter and appreciating everyday as it comes, rain or shine. The fact remains that life is constant. You go to bed and think what did I accomplish today? Even if only one small task was completed that you had set out to do, so be it, mission accomplished, tomorrow will be another day.

Within this year we experienced the emptiness from the loss of our daughter's baby due to a miscarriage. We are now blessed with the pending arrival of twins who have been aptly named "baby A and baby B." With their pending arrival we are hopeful their names will change to something more feminine or masculine.

What I've learned this year helped me gain a better perspective about life and what it's all about. We are here but a brief moment in time and need to make the best of each day as it races by. Hold no grudges as someone once said, "A grudge is like taking poison with hopes someone else get sick." Don't fret the small stuff. If your elderly parent thinks it's Christmas so be it and put up a small tree.

Most of us do not need half the things we own, including all the spices I thought I needed to make the perfect holiday dinner. The health system can work with you when you ask the right questions so make a list of things you have questions about before seeing your health care professional. Take time to have a hobby. My latest venture includes painting the walls bright and unusual colors while listening to my favorite tunes from the 60s. Immersing yourself in something you like to do, can help you face the daily challenges in your life.

I've also learned this year that caregiving can bring depression and depression leads to an unhealthy immune system. Guilt and anger are soon to follow. Never let it consume you. The best book I've read this year is "The Caregiver's Survival Handbook" by Alexis Abramson. It's my additional bible that I can't do without. I strongly recommend it to anyone caring for a spouse, parent or friend who may be afflicted with a broken hip, failing eyesight, dementia, Alzheimer's

BUSINESS DECISION UNWORTHY OF POLL

Editor:

I find it interesting that you have decided to conduct a "poll" to see if my decision to close VIP and remodel it was appropriate. (Poll question, "Was it time for VIP to close its doors?" appeared on page 4 of the Oct. 3 edition of the Courier.) Since you know nothing of the economics of this restaurant, nor would you or your readers want to cover my mortgage payment, it is really not a decision that should be placed in the hands of the public.

When a business owner runs a business, it is not a democracy, it is all my responsibility. I would like you to conduct a poll asking your readers if they are willing to help pay my overhead if the existing volume at VIP did not cover our expenses. The fact that I am investing in remodeling an old tired building and rekindling an old tired business should be appreciated, not put up to vote or scrutiny. Considering that I have now invested well over $1 million in downtown Charlevoix businesses in the past 18 months, I would have expected more professionalism in your reporting, not a poll to determine, absent any facts, whether I closed too soon or not. Such is life in your business, if you are not attempting to make someone out to be a fool, liar or poor business person you are assuming your story will not sell. Let me know when you or your readers want to share some of the burden of running a seasonal business in downtown Charlevoix (let alone two). Until that time your voices are immaterial.

CELEBRATE UNITED NATIONS DAY

Editor:

In 1945, 50 nations gathered to organize an institution to maintain peace and security after the dreadful war and terrible devastation from it. I was a keen supporter and observer at that time.

Oct. 21 is a United Nations Day. It should be observed to examine its many accomplishments and need for continuing to support such an institution where a forum is provided for discussing the many problems our world needs to improve and hopefully try to find solutions that can be agreed upon by the whole international community. There must be a forum with some authority to tackle opinion differences between peoples and nations. This forum should have much support and necessary funding at all times.

On the Internet look up "United Nations history" and you will learn the vast amount of good this organization has helped, far too many to be listed in this simple letter.

'THANKS' SUPPORTERS

Editor:

I would like to thank the many businesses that have answered our recent letters requesting support for the Charlevoix area senior needs. The donations received so far will help the Charlevoix Senior Center with the $12,644.67 budget shortfall for the fiscal year 2006-2007 which ended on Sept. 30. Again, a great big thank you to all who have answered these letters so far and to those who will.

And just when I thought I'd learn everything I knew about Martha Stewart I see that she has opened a Martha Stewart Center for Living which is affiliated with Mt. Sinai Hospital. Its aim is to assist seniors through education and providing activities significant with increasing an active and healthy life span. If you care to see into the future she has presented information on her Web site from Dr. Thomas Perls, guru on Centurion studies. By clicking on www.marthastewart.com and searching for the television show that was aired Wednesday, Oct. 10 regarding Dr. Perls, you can calculate your life expectancy by answering 40 questions. After registering onto their site they will provide you with your life expectancy barring any unforeseen mishaps. They also suggest lifestyle changes you may need to make. It's aimed for individuals over 50 years of age. By registering you will also continue to receive health tips, trivia questions and information to assist you in reaching a healthy 100 years of age.

So in one year I've learned about aging, caretaking, health issues and a little more about myself. As Martha would say, "It's a good thing."

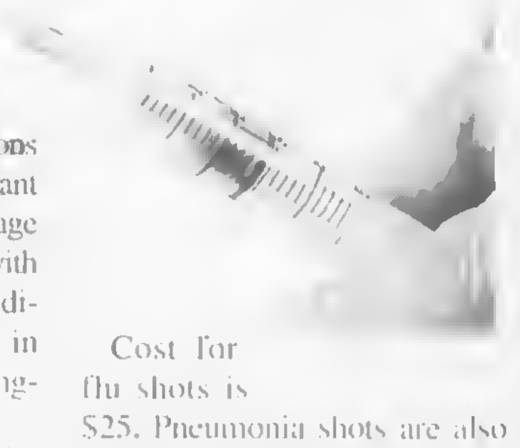
Flu shot clinics scheduled



Public health officials are urging parents to schedule flu shots for their children.

Infants and children six months to five years old should be vaccinated, along with children's household contacts and caregivers. This is especially important for parents, grandparents, siblings, daycare providers and baby-sitters, according to Joshua Meyerson, MD, medical director for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan.

"It is vital for parents and caregivers to realize that children experience the highest rates of influenza," Meyerson said. "About one in three children contract the virus every year. Infants and children can develop severe complications, such as pneumonia, seizures and ear or sinus infections. Last year, 68 children in the U.S. died of flu and related complications."

According to the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention (CDC), 220 million people, or 73 percent, of the U.S. population are recommended for an annual flu vaccine, though fewer than 100 million actually get vaccinated.

In general, anyone who wants to reduce their chances of getting the flu can get vaccinated. However, certain people should get vaccinated each year. They are either people who are at high risk of having serious flu complications or people who live with or care for those at high risk for serious complications.

In addition to children, people who should get vaccinated each year are:

- At high risk for complications from the flu, including pregnant women, people 50 years of age and older, people of any age with certain chronic medical conditions, and people who live in nursing homes and other long-term care facilities.
- Living with or caring for those at high risk for complications from flu, including household contacts of persons at high risk for complications from the flu, household contacts and out-of-home caregivers of children less than six months of age (these children are too young to be vaccinated), and health care workers.

According to the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention, every year in the U.S., an average of 5 to 20 percent of the population gets the flu. More than 200,000 people are hospitalized from flu complications and about 36,000 people die from flu.

"The single best way to prevent the flu is to get vaccinated each year," Meyerson said. "There is plenty of vaccine available this flu season. With no vaccine shortages this year, everyone who wants a flu shot should be able to get one."

Cost for flu shots is $25. Pneumonia shots are also available for $30. Medicare and Medicaid are accepted. Appointments are required for all clinics. Call 800-432-4121 during business hours to schedule a flu shot appointment.

She was born in East Jordan on April 5, 1917, to Thomas and Emma (Guerin) Whiteford, and she's made her home in Charlevoix for the past 50 years. On May 26, 1956, she married Hubert E. Skeel in Flint. Hubert was Thelma's true love and they had a beautiful marriage. He preceded her in death on Oct. 28, 1967. Thelma was employed at the Ellsworth canning factory. She was a member of the Bible Baptist Church of Charlevoix, Charlevoix Senior Center, and the VFW Post #1153 Auxiliary in Charlevoix. Thelma loved her dogs as if they were her kids. She is sadly missed by her nephew, Gary A. Whiteford of Flushing; niece, Dessie Whiteford of Mt. Morris; and lifelong friend, Marjorie Bos of East Jordan.

Thelma's brothers Harold and Elmer Whiteford preceded her in death.

A memorial service will take place at 2 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 17 at the Bible Baptist Church in Charlevoix. Pastor James Green will officiate. Interment will take place in Brookside Cemetery in Charlevoix.

Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix is handling the arrangements.

James Thomas: June 8, 1934 - Oct. 11, 2007

James Leroy Thomas, 73, died on Thursday, Oct. 11 after a two-year battle with Primary CNS lymphoma.

He was born on June 8, 1934 in Runnels, Iowa, the son of Cecil James and June (Green) Thomas both of whom preceded him in death. He graduated from high school in Lamoni, Iowa in 1952 and enlisted in the navy where he served three years during the Korean conflict. Upon his discharge and return to the U.S., he attended Graceland College in Lamoni, Iowa from 1955-1957 and was a graduate of Cornell College in Mt. Vernon, Iowa with a bachelor of arts in business administration. He also served as student union director of Cornell College following graduation. In 1962 he married Paula Lamoreux of Lanark, Ill.

He received his master's degree in recreation from the University of Illinois in 1963 and began his career in managing student unions as the assistant social director of the Illini Union. He held positions as student center director at North Dakota State University, Georgia Tech and Wayne State University, as well as business administrator at Wayne State before moving to Santa Fe, New Mexico. It was in Santa Fe that he began what would be a lifetime career in real estate sales. In 1973, Jim moved to Charlevoix where he continued in real estate sales (Jerry Lesher Real Estate, Charlevoix Properties, Thomas Real Estate, Century 21), and most recently with Vacation Properties Network.

He was a member of the Antrim-Charlevoix Board of Realtors and the Sierra Club. Jim was a vocal and staunch Democrat and strong supporter of many social and environmental causes. Most importantly, his love for the University of Michigan was only surpassed by his love of family.

Survivors also include his sister Norma Thomas Small (Richard) of Tulsa, Okla. and Robert Thomas (Virginia) of Los Angeles, Calif. He was preceded in death by his youngest sister, Sharon Thomas.

Locals brace for heating fuel cost hikes

Many look for relief in alternatives

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Last week, just as cold weather rolled in and Charlevoix residents were turning up their thermostats, the Department of Energy released a sobering report on hikes in heating fuel costs.

The Oct. 9 report announced heating oil prices are projected to jump 22 percent and natural gas costs are estimated to climb 10 percent between now and March.

Then residents were hit with a long-range forecast from the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) projecting this winter to be 4 percent colder compared with last winter.

"Because of expected colder weather, U.S. heating fuel consumption is projected to increase compared with last winter," the report states.

More consumption at a higher cost means larger bills. This reality has many locals considering their alternatives.

"I have the ultimate solution to the heating problem. I move to Florida for the winter," said Ed Crook, a Charlevoix resident and math teacher who retired from Charlevoix High School in 1995.

While many snowbirds like Crook heat their homes to avoid damage from harsh temperatures, Crook said in the over a decade he's made the move he has drained the pipes at his home and walked away with minimal problems.

Crook said when he used to stick the winter out here, he battled fuel oil heating costs in a number of ways including using a wood burning stove.

"That was a lot of work. When you heat with wood, you warm yourself three times over," he said. "We couldn't survive on wood heat alone. It required someone to be home. We found it was hard to bring the house back up to temperature if someone wasn't home."

The answer Crook discovered is a combination approach using both wood and a "clock thermostat" that can be programmed to automatically reduce the temperature at night and bring it back up in the morning.

"It really does save money not keeping the house at 70 degrees when you're not there. It's rather sophisticated (allowing weekday and weekend programming options) and inexpensive ($30 to $40 at Charlevoix Ace Hardware)," Crook said.

Charlevoix resident Margo Kane is a wood heat believer and said she had her fuel oil tank filled last year. It's now half full.

"We use the fuel oil as a backup," she said.

Other key tools in fighting the heating cost war at the Crook home are insulation and heavy drapes his wife Judy made to hang over drafty windows.

Charlevoix resident Mary Lou Holecheck said she isn't alarmed by the cost hike. She said at her small modular home she and her husband Erwin keep most of the rooms closed off and unheated and like the Crook family, draw the blinds on cold, windy days.

For those looking for a wood burning option, Bob Herrmann, owner of Reh Acres Home Heating in Boyne City said a new stove from his store will run you $1,000 to $3,000 and is well worth the cost.

"A good wood stove will pay you back in three years. The fourth year you are heating for the cost of wood," he said.

He said a 2,400 square foot two level home can be heated with a mid-size wood stove (50,000 BTU) on five to six face cords of wood per year. A face cord of wood runs about $50.

At Charlevoix Ace Hardware pellet stoves ($1,200 to $2,600 at Ace) are replacing wood stoves in terms of popularity among consumers. Bags of pellets sell from $3.99 to $5.50 per bag at Ace and Bosman's Mercantile offers a ton of pellets for $148.

"They're (pellet stoves) cleaner, there's less ash and no smell," Jason Corwin, assistant manager of Ace Hardware, said.

Bosman's is also seeing the pellet stove trend, sales associate, Tim Baker, said pellet stoves are efficient and easy to use with higher end automatic models offered. Herrmann added that whether customers choose pellet or wood stoves, they will realize a savings.

propane prices are expected to average $2.28 per gallon compared with $2.02 per gallon last winter. Residential electricity prices are expected to average 10.3 cents per kilowatt-hour (kWh) compared with 10.1 cents per kWh last winter.

Projected Winter Fuel Expenditures

Households heating primarily with natural gas are expected to spend an average of $78 (10 percent) more this winter in fuel expenditures. Households heating primarily with heating oil can expect to pay an average of $319 (22 percent) more this winter. Households heating primarily with propane can expect to pay an average of $221 (16 percent) more this winter. Households heating primarily with electricity can expect to pay an average of $32 (4 percent) more.

Natural gas

Nationwide, about 58 percent of all households depend on natural gas as their primary heating fuel. In the Midwest, where 79 percent of all households rely on natural gas, a projected 11-percent increase in average household expenditures results from an 8-percent increase in prices and 3-percent consumption growth.

Heating oil

7 percent of U.S. households depend on heating oil for winter fuel. Most of these households are in the northeast, where 32 percent of households use heating oil as their primary heating fuel. In that region, the average household is projected to pay 22 percent more than last winter as a result of a 16-percent increase in prices and a 5-percent increase in consumption.

Propane

Propane-consuming households, which account for 5 percent of the U.S. total, are projected to see an average increase of 16 percent in propane expenditures this winter, but that increase varies widely by region. Western households are projected to see an average increase of 10 percent, while Northeastern homes are expected to experience an average increase of 21 percent.

Electricity

30 percent of all U.S. households rely on electricity as their primary heating fuel, with electricity serving as the primary heating fuel for 11 percent of households in the Midwest. On average, electricity expenditures during the winter are projected to rise by 4 percent due to increased consumption and prices.

Darren Closson, a manager at Bosman's Mercantile, said he's seen a recent increase in sales of wood and pellet stoves as energy costs continue to increase.

Doty experiences setback with bone cancer diagnosis

Ken Doty:
Living with Cancer

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

In the last installment of "Ken Doty: Living with Cancer," Ken's prostate specific antigen (PSA) tests looked good and he was ready for a summer of recovery as his stage-four prostate cancer seemed to have all but disappeared.

In this, the fourth installment in the series, Doty updates readers on his condition and what he will do next.

Following a spring filled with dozens of doctor visits, radiation therapy and positive news on his PSA tests, Ken Doty spent a summer of guarded optimism even taking time to get married.

But, when he went in for his September checkup, the doctors had anything but good news.

"It has metastasized (moved) again," Doty said. "It spread from my lymph nodes to my bones and lesions are starting to form on my bones."

Doty's PSA test, which last spring was 0.1, spiked to 0.19.

"That's (0.19) normal for everybody else, but because mine was at less than 0.1 originally, it shouldn't be registering that high," he said. "The bone scan showed what they call 'hot spots' or what light up on CT scans."

Doty has these hot spots on his pelvic bone, right femur and right ninth rib cage bone:

"Chemo(therapy) is the next step, but I've got a call into the doctors and they're going to have to decide what form of chemo' to go with," he said. "Surgery is no longer an option at this point because it has spread to the bone."

He added, "They have to treat the whole body now."

Doty, who said he felt a few more aches than usual this summer, said he was surprised when the doctors told him the cancer returned.

"They actually told me all this stuff Sept. 24. I wasn't expecting this at all because the PSA had been way down and I've been feeling good. I put the weight back on and there has been some achiness, but I figured that's just because I'm 49 and I'm carrying an extra 50 pounds. But, that wasn't the case," he said.

Regardless of his battle, Doty added, "I'm still refereeing and trying to play basketball with my kids and working on projects and living life."

While doctors decide the next course of action, Doty has been given a bone hardening drug called Zometa.

"I received an infusion last Thursday, (Oct. 4). It's a drug being used in the treatment of osteoporosis," he said. "What it does for cancer patients is harden the bones, making it harder for cancer to attack it. And, it has also been shown to kill some cancer tumors on the bone in certain cases, but they can't come out and say that."

He added, "But, I know of several people taking the drug for a few years now and it's keeping them in remission."

Doty is allowed to maintain his busy schedule for now.

"Their big concern (doctors) is they don't want me playing tackle football. They don't want me to chance breaking a bone," he said.

The biggest pain Doty faces right now is the increase in aches due to the Zometa injections.

"With the weather change coming through, my body aches all the time," he said. "But, when I start the chemo' I will be more susceptible to colds because it knocks your immune system way down."

As with previous interviews, Doty vowed not to let his disease dictate the way he lives his life.

"Right now I'm still trying to figure out what direction I'm going," he said. "But I'm going to beat this and I plan on being a pain in the ass for quite some time."

He added, "It's all about attitude. If I want to have a bad day and I want to be 'woe is me' I can, but I don't plan on it. I'm too busy living."

Look for part five in the series in upcoming months as the Charlevoix Courier follows Doty through the fight of his life.

Council rejects Climate Protection Agreement

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

A 4-2 vote on Oct. 1 by Charlevoix City Council rejecting a request to sign the U.S. Mayors Climate Protection Agreement disappointed local environmentalists.

"I think they (city council members) are dedicated to keeping Charlevoix beautiful. They are sensitive to the environment but they don't want it to go too far. I just don't think they're that worried (about global warming). They don't see it as that much of an emergency," said Bruce MacArthur, a Charlevoix resident and member of the local environmental groups WATCH and CARE that presented the protection agreement to city council.

Charlevoix mayor Norman Carlson Jr. said the four city council members who voted against signing the agreement, First Ward councilman Bob Timms, Second Ward councilmen Gene Beer and Greg Stevens and Third Ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain, weren't making an anti-green statement.

"They weren't against green at all. We do a lot of that already. There are a few things in that agreement that committed the city that they didn't feel comfortable with," Carlson said.

One such concern is the agreement's discussion of recapturing gas at the city's wastewater treatment plant. Carlson said council members didn't want to agree to this and then be chastised for not following through with a gas recapturing plan.

He said the city has looked into using the plant's methane gas to create energy to heat with but they found there isn't enough volume to justify the cost.

"It's expensive and council didn't know if the agreement obligated them to do those types of things," he said. "By all means, personally I wouldn't have a problem writing a letter to support but we didn't feel comfortable committing the city to do that."

Third Ward council member Shirley Gibson, who along with First Ward councilman Lyle Gennett voted to adopt the agreement, said she's disappointed with her fellow council members.

"To me it was an endorsement to protect the environment. What was wrong with that? What are they telling the younger generation? They don't give a rat's ass. Is that OK? I guess it is," she said.

"We should be doing everything we can to protect our natural resources. Our local economy relies on it. When are we going to wake up around here?"

According to www.seattle.gov/mayor/climate, under the agreement, participating cities commit to take the following three actions:

1. Strive to meet or beat the Kyoto Protocol targets in their own communities, through actions ranging from anti-sprawl land-use policies to urban forest restoration projects to public information campaigns.

2. Urge their state governments, and the federal government, to enact policies and programs to meet or beat the greenhouse gas emission reduction target suggested for the United States in the Kyoto Protocol — 7 percent reduction from 1990 levels by 2012.

3. Urge the U.S. Congress to pass the bipartisan greenhouse gas reduction legislation, which would establish a national emission trading system.

While Charlevoix City Council was gun-shy to commit to these three actions, MacArthur said the city should establish environmental goals.

"They don't want to have goals set that they have to meet. It's good management practice to set goals. They should establish a baseline in emissions, Traverse City has done this. And the City of Charlevoix should do this with department heads — turn the lights off when they leave the room, require city employees to turn their vehicles off at the bridge," MacArthur said. "I don't think it was a political move. They just didn't want to commit to it right now."

Carlson said the city is currently doing a number of environmentally friendly things including use of fluorescent lights in its facilities and energy efficient computers and appliances at city hall. Street superintendent Pat Elliott is currently researching use of a fuel additive to save on consumption.

The city staff is also working hard to promote being an idle free community, continues implementing ways for people to recreate, is researching LED lighting to save energy and assisted in installing a rain garden at the library to clean storm water before it makes its way into Round Lake.

Council members can reconsider this agreement at a later date.

What Is the U.S. Mayors Climate Protection Agreement?

On Feb. 16, 2005 the Kyoto Protocol, the international agreement to address climate disruption, became law for the 141 countries that have ratified it to date. On that day, Seattle Mayor Greg Nickels launched the U.S. Mayors Climate Protection Agreement to advance the goals of the Kyoto Protocol through leadership and action. Two years later in anticipation of over 500 signatories to the agreement, the U.S. Conference of Mayors launched its Climate Protection Center in February to administer and track the agreement. To date, more than 600 mayors have accepted the challenge.

While 162 countries have ratified the Kyoto Protocol to address global warming, The United States has not. To date, 663 mayors representing all 50 states and over 67 million Americans have joined with Mayor Nickels.

Crafters flock to Hearts to Holly quilting store

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

New business profile
Business name? Hearts to Holly
Function? A quilting store
Hours of operation? From 9.30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and will be open until 9 p.m. on Wednesdays.
Contact number? (231) 547-2729

Crafty quilters with no local source for supplies now have a refuge.

On Oct. 10, Susan Miller opened Hearts to Holly, a quilting store located in the Rose Cottage at 107 Mason St. in downtown Charlevoix.

"Our goal is for people to have a smile when they come in and a smile when they come out. We want people to do something that makes them feel good. Quilting is a very satisfying craft," Susan said. "We have a true enthusiasm for what we are doing. We want to help develop the art of quilting in Charlevoix."

She said for decades she's dreamed of opening a store in town and her creative family ultimately determined that the shop would be for quilters.

"My daughters prompted me to do it. They all love quilting and got me into it several years ago," Susan said. "Their enthusiasm spilled over."

Susan and her husband Mike Miller have lived in Charlevoix for 33 years.

Two of their daughters, Leslie Kanoop, Hearts to Holly store manager and Emily Lee, who works at Bullfrog Light Company Candle Factory, live in Charlevoix. The other two, Valerie Krueger and Shelly Miller live in Las Vegas, Nev.

They also have five grandchildren who Susan said she loves to quilt for, marking milestones like graduations and big birthdays with quilts.

While Susan's hobby of choice has long been quilting, this is the first time she has pursued it professionally. Her background is in health care. She graduated from the University of Michigan in 1986 with a bachelor's degree in nursing and went on to work for the local health department for 15 years as a clinic nurse and assistant manager and at Charlevoix Area Hospital in nursing. She currently holds the title of administrative director for MIS User Group, a software user group.

The new store carries quality threads and fabrics including Civil War reproduction prints, soft flannels and adorable baby prints as well as supplies including quilting and stitchery kits, Bohin needles, patterns, scissors and more.

"If people don't want to quilt, we can also make a quilt for them," Susan said.

Services will soon expand to include classes like a beginner' group, specialty classes for Christmas tree skirts and more and the Wash Tub Club the members of which will tackle small monthly projects. Sign-up is underway for the beginner's class taught by Kanoop.

Susan encourages those with an interest in learning the craft to sign up.

"If I can do it, anyone can do it. It's really just sewing a straight line," she said.

Hearts to Holly is open from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and will be open until 9 p.m. on Wednesdays.

For more information, call Hearts to Holly at (231) 547-2729 or e-mail heartstoholly@yahoo.com.

Taylor notes odd dreams with Chantix

Kim
commits to quit

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Last week the Courier introduced readers to the newspaper's 41-year-old advertising manager Kim Taylor who on Sept. 24 started a new prescription pill from Pfizer called Chantix to quit smoking

The pill contains no nicotine and helps reduce the urge to smoke by keeping nicotine from reaching key receptors in the brain.

This second installment of "Kim commits to quit" will focus on any side effects she's experienced and how she fell off the wagon.

THE PROGRAM

When did you start?

Sept. 24. Quit smoking entirely on Sept. 30.

How does it work?

Kim takes two one milligram pills daily. Chantix literature recommends continuing to take the pill for 12 weeks. She just finished her first four week box and plans to buy another.

How are you feeling?

"Good. I don't know if I'm crotchety because I quit or other things in my life. I'm a little short (tempered) but not as bad as I would be if I wasn't on anything."

Any side effects?

"I haven't had any hallucinations. But my dreams are getting more real. Last night, (Oct. 11) I went shopping in my dream. I was worried about heating the house this winter so I bought warm clothes I couldn't afford to buy. I haven't had any nausea."

How sure are you that you will succeed?

"I'm planning on succeeding even if I cheat now and then. But cheating is hard now that the whole town knows I've quit."

THE TRUTH

How many cigarettes have you smoked since Oct. 10?

19

When did you smoke your last cigarette?

Oct. 7. "I bought a pack and on my way home I threw the last four away."

What has surprised you?

"It took until the article came out (Oct. 3) for my husband to comment. He's proud of me. He thought I might have quit but didn't want to say anything to jinx it. My 7-year-old son found out and looked at me like I was God. He hugged me and said, 'I love you mom.'"

What has been the most difficult?

"Associations are still hard."

Sunday school soccer

Josh Morgan of the Charlevoix Eagles and Drew Rogers of the Rogers City Royals battle for the ball during the third week of church league soccer play last week.

Volleyball beats Boyne City to remain undefeated in conference

Five games, plenty of drama.

And Charlevoix emerged from it still unbeaten in the Lake Michigan Conference.

Murphy Gillespie had 24 kills, 21 digs and finished at 93 percent on serve reception as the Rayders took a crucial Lake Michigan Conference volleyball match from visiting Boyne City on Thursday, Oct. 11.

The Rayders won the first two games, 25-18, 25-27; dropped the next two, 14-25, 25-19; then won the decisive fifth and final game, 15-8.

The Rayders improved to 35-7-8 overall, 10-0 in the league. Boyne is 23-7-3, 7-2.

"We have a two-game lead now in the conference and it was a huge game for us," Charlevoix coach Liz Grunch said. "The girls played with a lot of guts and heart. We had great senior leadership.

"After we lost the second and third games, losing was not an option for the seniors. They didn't want to lose their last home game. It was a fun game to watch."

Amber Kotalik had 15 kills, nine blocks and 19 digs to lead Boyne City, while Jessica Knysz added 12 kills.

"It was the battle of the century," Boyne coach Casie Parker said. "We had them, we were up 2-1 and started losing enthusiasm. Charlevoix always finds ways to win and they never give up.

"Despite the loss, I thought we played well tonight. We made some key errors at important times that could have changed the outcome and did change the momentom."

Setter Aubrey Way added 50 assists, eight digs and three aces for Charlevoix, while Desi Faust had 17 kills, three aces and 14 digs; Shauna Spenceley had 10 digs and seven aces; Tammy Potter had 10 kills, six blocks; Taylor Storm had 16 digs; and Michelle Burke had 15 digs.

"Boyne City hits the ball pretty hard," Grunch said. "But we just had a great day, especially at the end. We just pulled it all together."

Also for Boyne, Trisha Tomkins had 11 kills, 25 digs; Heidi Olson had 10 digs, seven kills; Stacey Spaniak had 21 digs; and setter Lindsay Clemens finished with 42 assists.

"For us, I thought Trisha Tomkins had an outstanding game," Parker said. "She made some great passes that made it easier to set the ball up.

"The most important thing tonight is that I still saw us improving in some areas."

This win brought the volleyball team's overall record to 35-7-8. They are 10-0 in the Lake Michigan Conference.

Charlevoix won the JV match, 20-25, 25-11, 25-16. For the Rayders, Bobbie Molter had five kills, three aces and three digs; Isis Hang had four aces, four assists, four digs; Lacey Greene had five digs; and Katie Mays added two kills and three digs.

They face Grayling for the district title at 4:30 p.m. on Oct. 17 at Charlevoix High School.

This was the team's second win over the Rams in less than a week.

Weston Bryan had two assists, while Matt Klooster and John Shea each had one assist for the Rayders.

"We want to have a respectable showing in our district," Charlevoix coach Josh Block said.

Block also lauded the efforts of senior Scott Haselschwardt, Molter and Shea as well as winning goalkeeper Collin McDonough.

"Collin did a good job," Block said. "He made some really nice saves and knocked down some tough shots.

"We played well. We've struggled the past few games with defensive issues, but we played a lot better."

(Right) This Injured gentleman was one of dozens of area folks who volunteered their time to play victims and victim family members during the four-hour mass casualty exercise implemented by the Charlevoix-Cheboygan-Emmet Counties (CCE) Office of Emergency Management on Oct. 10. Not only did emergency services personnel gain the opportunity to test their skills in search, rescue and treatment, but area agencies had the chance to hone their skills of mutual aid In times of crisis.

(Above) Fire and rescue workers lined the docks at St. Marys Cement during the CCE's emergency training drill. The annual exercise is intended to ensure emergency personnel are ready in the event of a terrorist attack, natural disaster or any other event causing mass casualties and threats to safety.

(Right) Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater and St. Marys human resources manager and drill spokesperson Shawn Hall gave a press conference at the sheriff's office shortly after the mock mass casualty exercise last week. Hall and Lasater told reporters that police and FBI officials were searching for at least one suspect in connection with the fire which occurred on a boat hauling cement to and from the plant. According to the drill's story line, a fire was reported to 911 by the ship's captain in the early morning hours of Wednesday, Oct. 10.

Tips to avoid Alzheimer's

People once accepted that Alzheimer's was one of those inevitable diseases they had no control over.

Research has identified many risk factors that can be controlled to prevent Alzheimer's Disease.

According to "Staying Sharp: How to Avoid Brain Damage as You Age," Nutrition Action Health 2007, people can lower their chance of developing Alzheimer's by lowering their risks and following the steps listed below.

Consuming two to three servings of fatty fish that contains the Omega-3 fish oils every week. The omega-3 fats seem to protect both the heart and brain. Supplements can be taken if you don't like fish.

Limit bad fats including saturated and trans fats. A link between consuming these bad fats and cognitive decline has been indicated by research.

Sue Bergmann

Eat plenty of leafy greens, such as lettuce and spinach these help maintain verbal and working memory intact.

Choose foods rich in vitamin-E, including oils, nuts and seeds, leafy greens and whole grains.

Lower your blood sugar. High blood sugar can cause diabetes, which has been linked to memory impairment.

Maintain a healthy weight. Being overweight may lead to diabetes, as well as a large waist is particularly linked with higher rates of cognitive decline.

Exercise is beneficial for the brain because it keeps arteries healthier and blood pressure lower, 30 minutes of brisk walking each day to achieve this.

Reduce high blood pressure, those with the highest blood pressure had twice the risk of dementia.

Maintain your brain. Research has shown that those with higher education tend to have a lower risk, even just reading books, puzzles, or playing games can help.

Seek help for depression. Many older adults are less likely to be diagnosed and treated. Common symptoms include feeling worthless, helpless, bored, fearful, hopeless and empty.

Hey Jane!

M.J. Cargill

Hey Jane!

I came home on the day I retired to my wife announcing that she was retiring also...from the kitchen! She no longer cooks. She'll bring home take-out or buy deli stuff but her first choice is to eat out. If I want a square, home cooked meal, I need to cook it myself. I've accepted this challenge and I think I've developed into a passable cook. But, to be frank, It is sometimes embarrassing to be Invited to someone's house for dinner and my wife announces that they should not expect a return invitation unless they want to "put up" with my cooking. What do you think, Jane, should I go to cooking classes to get better or just take our friends out for dinner when It Is our turn to return the favor?

Not Confident.

Dear Not Confident: Let's be clear here, your problem is not menu choices or cooking classes! You've got a communication issue between you and your wife you need to quit ignoring. It is not a good sign when one partner announces out-of-the-blue that there is going to be a big change in the family so like it or lump it. It is also tough to take public criticism from a loved one. In your letter, you sound accommodating and willing to change while making your wife sound petty, bitter and jealous. If this is a true state of affairs you both are stewing in misery. You need to begin seeing things as they really are and seek help if you can't fix it. Good luck.

Jane

Charlevoix Courier's own senior advice columnist M.J. Cargill polled 15 local people about getting together with friends for a meal. Their responses revealed fellowship is the focus, not food. Notice to Voters: New Voter Identification Requirement in Effect

Due to a recent court ruling, every Michigan voter who offers to vote in the polls must comply with the requirement by showing picture identification or signing and affidavit attesting that he or she is not in possession of picture identification.

Voters with picture identification: Voters can satisfy the picture identification requirement by showing a Michigan driver's license or a Michigan personal identification card.

Voters who do not possess either document may show any of the following forms of picture identification as long as they are current:

- Driver's license or personal identification card issued by another state.
- Federal or state government-issued photo identification.
- U.S. passport.
- Military identification card with photo.
- Student identification with photo from a high school or an accredited institution of higher education.
- Tribal identification card with photo.

Voters without picture identification: Michigan election law anticipates that not all voters will have picture identification. Voters who do not bring picture identification to the polls or do not possess picture identification can vote like any other voter by signing an affidavit.

Questions regarding the picture identification requirement can be directed to your local city or township clerk's office.

What's next for the local Chamber of Commerce?

Longtime president announces resignation

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Jacqueline Merta

Last week, following almost three decades of service to the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, president Jacqueline Merta announced her resignation.

"The end of 2007 is good timing to bring my career with the Charlevoix Chamber to an end. This will make it possible for the next half-century to be started under new management. It's been a wonderful experience working for the Chamber for all these years. It has been personally rewarding to watch Charlevoix grow and know that I've been instrumental in helping it do so. I'll miss the challenges presented by my position but I look forward to my future opportunities," Merta, who began her career as the executive director of the Chamber in 1976, stated in a press release.

Merta was on vacation and unavailable for comment when her resignation was announced and chamber board president Tom Conlan declined to comment as to why her decision to leave is being dubbed a resignation and not a retire-

Alumni association looks to recognize Connie Ford

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

The mother of performing arts in Charlevoix, Connie Ford, lost her battle with breast cancer on Friday, Oct. 19.

A teacher of 40 years, Ford had been staying at Boulder Park nursing facility during her last days, had a memorial scholarship created in her name, and now a local group of alumni is working to honor her further.

"It's a huge loss," said alumni member Maureen Themm. "You don't find people like that anymore. In this day and age it's hard to find people who are going to dedicate everything for their passion."

She added, "The program will go on, but she will be sadly missed."

Themm and her fellow alumni are currently working on a way to honor Ford in addition to the performing arts scholarship which has been set up at the school.

"She gave her life to the program and she gave everything to the kids because they were her main focus," she said. "She was always about the kids.

Themm said Ford should be honored in another way, perhaps an evening held in her honor or naming the performing arts center after her, for her contribution to her thousands of former students.

STORY HIGHLIGHT

On Friday, Oct. 19, Connie Ford lost her fight with breast cancer which had spread to the bone. Ford started the Charlevoix High School performing arts program in 1969. She resigned from her post at the school in September due to her declining health. No services are planned at this time.

A bright idea for tree lighting

On Oct. 15, Charlevoix City Council supported partnering with the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority (DDA) to usher in a new era of downtown tree lighting.

The 6-0 council vote means the Charlevoix Electric Fund and DDA will split the costs of acquiring 107,000 new energy efficient light emitting diode, or LED, tree lights for the 71 trees located on both sides of Bridge Street between Dixon Avenue and Hurlbut Street.

The move towards LED tree lights was prompted by suggestions from Charlevoix residents Mary Adams and Paul Weston. Downtown development consulting firm HyettPalma advocated expanding the downtown tree lighting program in its Charlevoix Downtown Blueprint 2007, the downtown revitalization strategy adopted by the DDA and the City Council this past spring.

Several benefits associated with the switch to LED tree lighting technology include:

LED tree lights are rated for 100,000 hours of use while standard incandescent lights typically last for a maximum of 3,000 hours. Charlevoix's current lighting program requires the replacement of incandescent light strings every two years.

LED tree lights are eco-

Chamber of Commerce aims to hire new director by Dec. 1

He said her resignation was a decision she discussed with the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors over the past few months but she wasn't pressured by the board to step down. When asked whether the decision came about as a result of prodding from disgruntled chamber members Conlan said a few respondents to a survey the chamber disseminated a year ago did express interest in replacing Merta but "Not a huge number. Not a majority.

"I think we received over 100 survey responses from the membership. The number responding fully in support of Jacquie's leadership was overwhelming," he said. "I think that Jacquie has done a wonderful job over the years and should be recognized for her service to Charlevoix."

Kirby Dipert, owner of Charlevoix Wear and Color Wear who has been a Chamber member for 21 years and is on the search committee for a new Chamber director, said, "There's been dissension back and forth for a number of years. I think she (Merta) just realized it was time to make a change."

One disgruntled Chamber member, owner of Charlevoix Cinema III, Bill Supernaw, spoke at a recent Charlevoix City Council public hearing to discuss the East Park fountain project. At the meeting, he said, "The Chamber has failed us."

Last week when Supernaw was asked if he felt the change in leadership would address the "failure" he said, "Jackie has been there a long, long time. The very fact that she's been there 30 years is a testament to her capabilities. But someone new in there might have some fresh ideas."

According to Conlan, Merta's resignation is effective Dec. 31. Her replacement will have the executive director's title as opposed to that of president and is expected to be hired by Dec. 1. The executive director search committee is made up of Dipert and four Chamber board members including Conlan, Jay Bingham, Patt Blanchard and Linda Bradley.

"We are looking for someone to carry on the same traditional events and bring new ideas to the table. We don't need to reinvent the wheel but sometimes it's good to shake things up," Dipert said.

Merta's list of accomplishments includes several programs she started including industrial development initiatives. This is one area Supernaw hopes her replacement will excel.

"There's a lack of permanent stuff in town. Apple Fest, art fairs — these types of things are OK but they come and go. I'm looking for something more stable," he said.

Highlights from Jacqueline Merta's tenure as president of the Chamber of Commerce

Under Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, president Jacqueline Merta's leadership, the following events were initiated: Apple Festival, Car Raffle fundraiser, Downtown Easter Egg Hunt, Indoor Sidewalk Sales, Chamber Golf Outing, Women's Winter Tour, Shop for Charlevoix Charities, Taste of Charlevoix, Summer Solstice Art Show and Downtown Farmer's Market.

The following programs were started: First Friday Biz Breakfast, Ambassadors, Step-on tour guides, Gifts for Grads, Michigan Scholars in conjunction with Charlevoix Public Schools and Creating Entrepreneurial Communities.

Under her direction, chamber member benefits were enacted including Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan health care plans and Auto Owners Insurance discount programs. The Charlevoix Chamber was the first Chamber in the United States to offer Chamber Checks by Certifichecks, which are gift certificates redeemable at member businesses to keep dollars in our community.

Merta was instrumental in the creation of the Charlevoix Convention and Visitor's Bureau and served on its board until 2004. She encouraged the Chamber to make Venetian Festival an independent organization to give the Chamber more time to sponsor off-season events. Merta worked with the Beaver Island business community to help establish the Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce and served as its executive director in the first years of its operation. During her tenure, the Charlevoix Chamber and City of Charlevoix in cooperation with Boyne City and East Jordan chambers of commerce and municipalities formed the Charlevoix County Business and Industry Task Force, the precursor to present day Northern Lakes Economic Alliance. In exchanging ideas at a state Chamber meeting, Merta came away with the idea of the Chamber and the Downtown Development Authority working together to strengthen the downtown. The decision was made to hire a part-time downtown coordinator in September 1991. The position was financed by the authority. She also coordinated the Chamber's relocation to its new office space at 109 Mason St.

Performing arts founder dies at 67

Members of the Charlevoix High School Performing Arts Alumni Association are discussing ways to honor Connie Ford, the program's founder who passed away on Oct. 19. Possibilities being considered include an evening held in her honor or naming the performing arts center after her.

FORD

"My son is currently in the (performing arts) program and it made a world of difference for him," she said. "He went from being an apathetic student to a student who is incredibly involved in both performing arts and his academic role."

She added, "Certain kids need that outlet."

Ford was 67. There are no services planned at this time.

Donations to the performing arts program should be made out to the Connie Ford Memorial Scholarship C/O Shawn Biddle, Charlevoix Public Schools, P.O. Box 67, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Ford's children, friends and former students will discuss Ford's accomplishments, contributions and character in the Oct. 31 edition of the Charlevoix Courier entitled "Drama Queen: Life of a performing arts teacher."

Stop the bleeding with frivolous lawsuits

EDITORIAL

It's time for residents to stop bleeding their local municipalities of needed funds with frivolous litigation.

We've watched time and time again as residents angry with how their neighbor has chosen to use his or her property drag out costly legal battles.

Most recently a resident group in Norwood Township called Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety has fought Wayne Wynkoop's right to mine his property.

In spite of the fact that the Norwood Township Planning Commission spent countless hours debating Wynkoop's special use permit request to surface-mine limestone from his property at 01195 Norwood Rd, before approving it, the resident group continues to duke it out with Wynkoop and the township.

In the most recent lawsuit they filed, the citizen group members claim several special use stipulations have not been followed: stabilized construction access to prevent mud from being tracked onto Norwood Road; a gate limiting access to the mine; noise limit not to exceed 60 decibels and a limit of 30 truck trips a day; trucks prohibited from entering the village unless delivering gravel there; obtain all necessary permits for access road and pay half the cost of signage.

However, the man these same residents pay good money to police the operation, Norwood Township Zoning Administrator Jonathan Scheel, told the Courier he's looked into all complaints and feels the mining operation is in compliance with the Special Use Permit.

Residents need to allow local zoning to govern as it is intended to do and not try to manipulate the system to suit their own needs. If the zoning is broken, then amend it. But don't cut off your nose to spite your face.

Norwood Township officials have spent nearly $50,000 to defend the township from Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety's first lawsuit. How much will this continued battle cost taxpayers before they realize they've bled the township of the money it needs to make improvements.

Share your memories and preserve history

BEHIND THE NEWS

Edith Gilbert

You or someone you know may be called on one of these days to be interviewed by Judith Ivan for the Charlevoix Public Library.

The project is two fold. One is to make DVD recordings of "veterans' stories," which will be sent to the Library of Congress in Washington DC for their Veterans History Project, and the other is to preserve precious Charlevoix memories of old time residents, in our own library, but more about those later.

Believe me, this is going to be a high quality project because professional videographer, Ric Pierpont, has been hired to record what is officially entitled, "Charlevoix's Oral Traditions." He tells me how enthusiastic he is because the video interviews will be made in high definition, which means that these interviews will be enjoyed by both young and old for many years to come.

We can thank Julie and Peter Cummings, longtime summer residents and library affectionaros, for underwriting this sentimental and wonderful addition to our new Charlevoix library. Veterans' Stories and their personal memories will be a valuable resource for both young people and adults alike.

Then there are the Charlevoix memories! You bet many of us can think of a number of interesting Charlevoix memories, the kind you tell around the dinner table on Thanksgiving, or around the TV at the Town House bar. Remember the time a bunch of our young bucks threw the juke box into the channel down at the Weathervane? Remember skinny dipping at night at Lake Michigan beach? Remember riding horses across the bridge, or jumping off the bridge into the channel? We're not allowed to do the latter anymore!

I lovingly remember the live telephone operators who said, "Number please?" They were more helpful then than today's 911! You could ask her the score of Friday night's basketball game or what was playing at the movie. She could track you down if you were visiting a neighbor and got a long distance call. And we only had four telephone numbers then. Ours was 6443. I remember what a drag it was when we had to dial 547-6443. Now we need to dial (231) 547-6443 on our cell phones.

Of course I remember Koch's fabulous Gambling Casino, which I wrote about in my book, "Summer Resort Life: Tango Teas and All." There stood the doorman, Frank Poole, who knew everyone. He knew who was allowed in — only summer people, like Ernest Hemingway — and who was not allowed in, townies, like the mayor. The reason behind this rule was that Mr. Koch didn't want local people to lose their money, but he didn't mind the summer trade dropping thousands at the roulette table on an afternoon. Townies had mixed feelings about the gambling casino. On the one hand they were disappointed that the liquor and gambling laws were not enforced, and on the other hand, they were pleased that it attracted such a wealthy clientele, people who spent a bundle in town, which meant jobs. Koch's stayed in business for 27 years, until Gov. Sigler declared war on all gambling casinos and it was finally raided in 1947. As a result Charlevoix fell into a mild depression because people with deep pockets stopped coming for a number of years. Not until the ski hills were developed did the area begin to recover.

Now hear this all veterans and locals — memory is a complicated thing and we don't want to have your precious memories lost, so please sharpen your pencils and start making your list of memories for the Charlevoix Oral Traditions program at Charlevoix Public Library. For more information, call (231) 547-2651 or e-mail jivan@charlevoixlibrary.org. Future generations will be grateful!

LETTERS to the editor

IS MY VOICE IMMATERIAL?

Editor:

I would like to respond to the new business owner who criticized the Courier for a poll about the closing of VIP (a letter entitled "Business decision unworthy of poll" written by Cindy Warner which appeared on page 5 of the Oct. 17 edition of the Charlevoix Courier). She stated how readers have no right to express their opinions about the way she operates her business unless we are willing to help pay her mortgage. Isn't the money customers spend at your restaurant and market used to pay that mortgage? I know I'm just poor local riff-raff, but as a former customer, I thought I was helping a little bit.

I don't understand why you would come into a small, resort town and alienate the very people who actually do share some of the burden of running a seasonal business. You also stated that until we are willing to help pay your mortgage, our voices are "immaterial." As a local resident, I get asked 15 times a summer "Where is a good place to eat in town?" Do you think those tourists or the restaurants they eat at would say my voice is immaterial?

Listen, we all want the downtown businesses to be successful and invest money into Charlevoix, but people also want to spend their money where they feel appreciated.

Luke LaBlance

NONE OF YOUR BUSINESS

Editor:

Fortunately, for all concerned in the Wynkoop mine issue, the law is not a public opinion poll. Facts are judged on their merits not on popularity or the lack thereof. Polls would be better held on more trivial matters or not held at all.

A SUITABLE NAME FOR THE PARK

Editor:

I am writing in regards to discussions about renaming East Park, (incidentally just where is "West" Park?) I would like to offer the suggestion that perhaps a simple mathematical solution might work as follows:

A equals beautiful marina. B equals beautiful park. Therefore A (marina) plus B (park) equals Marina Park, or maybe Harbor Park.

Only a suggestion from a loyal (displaced) Charlevoixian.

COVERAGE CLARIFICATION

Editor:

The Courier reported in its Oct. 17 edition a total of 663 mayors had signed the Climate Protection Agreement. However, the latest report states 691 mayors have now signed on as of Oct. 12, increasing at the rate of one a day according to the Web site http://USmayors.org/climateprotection. Eighteen cities in Michigan, including Grand Rapids, Ann Arbor, Traverse City, Sutton's Bay and Marquette are on the list.

Although our council did not adopt the agreement, it is more important that we attempt to meet all 12 "green goals" listed in the agreement. The conversion of the tree lights to LED lights, agreed to unanimously at the last council meeting, is a giant step to achieve the green goal number five, "energy efficient lighting." LED lights will use one-tenth the electricity of the existing tree lights.

GRANDFRIEND'S DAY

Editor:

The Charlevoix Elementary School PTO wishes to express our thanks to all those involved on Friday, Oct. 12, who helped make "Grandfriend Day" such a wonderful event this year. This is such an enormously exciting day for the elementary students and we are so appreciative to those who volunteered and gave their time to help ensure that the students would enjoy a nice lunch with their "grandfriends."

A sincere thank you to our business donors, our parent volunteers and to the kitchen staff who provided a really lovely meal and desserts and community volunteers who gave so generously of their time.

Thank you all for the outpouring of community support that made "Grandfriend Day" such a wonderful day for all.

IF NOT NOW, MEN... WHEN?

Editor:

Look around you. The leaves are just beginning to change the palette of our landscape from shades of green to one of reds and gold. Such a soft transition of seasons reminds us that we live tucked within a beautiful corner of the world. At night many of us leave the doors unlocked as we contentedly go to sleep beneath a quiet, dark sky — feeling safe within our homes and our little corner of the world. Many of us enjoy such peacefulness and safety, but not all. In too many of the homes of our neighbors the dark sky nights are filled with violence and fear.

Every so often the damage of such domestic violence rips the quiet night apart and becomes tragic enough to become a story in our local papers. The headlines read something like, "Woman raped after party" or "Woman killed by ex-husband." The headlines are impersonal, and I know for my part, in the past, I have read them with a similar lack of personal urgency. My thoughts would be something along the lines of, "What a senseless tragedy," or "Why would a woman be in a relationship with that kind of guy?" Rarely, did I take the internal dialogue to the next step and ask, "What can I do to prevent such violence?" Never did I, as a man, deeply analyze the fact that the vast majority of domestic violence and discrimination of women is acted out by my fellow men. Never that is until now.

This past spring, as our seasons transition from ice to blossoms, I along with Bill Wilson, MA, LPC, was honored to facilitate group conversations with other men in our community about men's perceptions of domestic violence. The group conversations were part of the recent Women's Resource Center's "A call to the men in our community" effort. The purpose of the focus groups was to hear well-meaning men's current perceptions of discrimination and violence against women by men. It was powerful to sit in a room full of men and discuss such an important and emotional topic. What I heard changed me.

After my conversations with the men in our community, I am confident that my fellow well-meaning men do not condone violence and discrimination against women. But I do believe that as men in this culture we have been buffered by the entitlement of our gender from the true extent of the damage of physical and mental violence that occurs daily at the hands and mouths of our fellow men — and so have not been forced to become part of the solution. For more than 30 years women have been leading the effort to stop the violence against women and children perpetrated mostly by our fellow men. It is time for the well-meaning men in our community to take the time to honestly reflect upon our attitudes about such violence and then take action along side women to stop such discrimination and violence in our community.

To this end, I urge all the men in our community to consider joining the effort to stop the violence by attending one of the Women's Resource Center's "A call to our community" sessions either from 1 to 4 p.m. or 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 25 in the library at North Central Michigan College. Ted Bunch, a co-founder of the national "A Call to Men" effort, will facilitate the sessions. I have heard Mr. Bunch speak, and his message is compelling and important.

It is time for each of us to look around our community and to look within ourselves to determine what we can do to end violence and discrimination against women and children. It is time for a transition of men and women working together to ensure all of us who live in this beautiful corner of the world enjoy quiet nights beneath dark skies. If not now, men when?

OBAMA'S PRIMARY DECISION

Editor:

Michiganders for Obama would like to clarify a troubling situation regarding the Michigan Democratic presidential primary election. We can understand why everyone is saddened by this, however, this has been a confusing and a distressing situation for all Michigan voters and we hope voters will understand what prompted Senator Obama, along with most major Democratic candidates to remove his name from the Jan. 15 primary ballot.

Senator Obama removed his name from the January 15th Michigan Democratic Primary because he, like all the candidates, had made a pledge to respect the primary calendar that was established by the Democratic National Committee (DNC). This is why three other Democratic presidential candidates also removed their names from the Michigan Democratic Primary ballot.

Senator Barack Obama is a man of character and integrity, a man of his word. This is why we are convinced he is the person to elect the 44th President of the United States. When Senator Obama makes a pledge, Senator Obama keeps it. Voters in Iowa have become convinced of this, which is why polls are showing Senator Obama ahead or running a very close second depending on the poll.

Unfortunately, Senator Obama was placed in a position where he felt it necessary to remove his name from the Michigan Democratic Primary ballot because of the current problems with Michigan's presidential nomination process.

All Democratic presidential candidates signed the pledge to follow the rules of the Democratic National Committee. It has been reported in the media that Iowa and New Hampshire put additional pressure on the Democratic candidates to remove their names from Michigan Primary ballot. Only two candidates kept their names on the ballot, despite having originally pledged to honor the Democratic National Committee rules.

Senator Obama respects the voters of Michigan and Michiganders for Obama hopes that the Michigan Democratic Party (MDP) will set aside personal interests and get Michigan's nominating process back on track. We stand by Senator Obama. We believe he presents our best opportunity for change. Therefore, Michiganders for Obama will remain focused on our goal — which is to get Senator Obama elected as the 44th President of the United States. We will be ready to move forward, once a decision is made by state Democratic leadership and the Michigan Democratic Party.

Sheriff's office offers fall cleanup to seniors

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office will once again offer fall cleanup services to senior citizens.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater will assign county jail prisoners, supervised by a sheriff's officer, to assist senior citizens with raking and general cleanup of their yards.

This program also includes townships in Charlevoix County where prisoners may be assigned, under supervision, to clean cemeteries, parks, etc.

Sheriff Lasater advises only prisoners who are not a security risk to the community will be assigned to this detail.

Senior citizens must call the Commission on Aging office at (231) 237-0103 to sign up for the yard cleanup program.

PAWS reading sessions on Saturdays at the library

The PAWS reading program meets from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Saturdays at Charlevoix Public Library.

Fifteen to twenty minute reading time slots are available. Call the Youth Information Desk at (231) 237-7350 to sign up.

When the children arrive for their reading session, they get to choose a book to share, and then curl up and read aloud to an adoring listener — a dog. The owner is there at all times but is usually silent. The goal of PAWS is for the child to be able to practice reading aloud in front of a non-judgmental, happy audience, gaining confidence. Reading practice like this has shown an increase in both reading scores and a willingness to read.

The READ. (Reading Education Assistance Dogs) program began out west and programs are spreading throughout the country. The Charlevoix Public Library began their READ program in the new library, last fall. Children are excited to visit and read to "their" dog.

"They love having a furry friend to listen to them tell a story," said youth services assistant, Sandi DiSante.

Dog owners interested in learning more about the program and how to be a certified PAWS team, can contact the youth information desk at the library, (231) 237-7350.

OBITUARIES

Eugene Saenger: March 5, 1917 - Sept. 30, 2007

Eugene Saenger

Eugene L. Saenger, M.D., a lifelong resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, Professor Emeritus of Radiology at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine, and philanthropist died of natural causes on Sunday, Sept. 30 at the age of 90.

Dr. Saenger was an internationally renowned physician, scientist, investigator and teacher who made fundamental contributions to medicine and the specialty of nuclear medicine, yet described himself as "just a simple country doctor."

Devoted to his family and to his community, Dr. Saenger was also a noted admirer and supporter of the arts and education in Cincinnati. He was always proud of his multi-year direction of the successful countywide tax levy campaigns to support indigent patient care at both university and children's hospitals. He was a board member of the Cincinnati Ballet and the Cincinnati May Festival, an early contributor to WGUC and WCET, and a contributor to and involved for decades with the United Way, its predecessor, and many other local eleemosynary institutions and arts organizations too numerous to mention.

Dr. Saenger was born on March 5, 1917 in Cincinnati, Ohio, the son of Therese and Eugene Saenger. His maternal uncle, Sidney Lange, M.D. was Professor of Radiology and the first chairman of the Department of Radiology at the University of Cincinnati and was Dr. Saenger's mentor and partner in their medical practice. Dr. Saenger attended Walnut Hills High School, was accepted to college after his junior year, and received an AB degree Cum Laude from Harvard University in 1938 and his MD degree from the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine in 1942. He completed his internship and residency at the Cincinnati General Hospital and was certified by the American Board of Radiology in 1946. A pioneer in the field of nuclear medicine, he was in 1972 among the first persons in this field to be certified by the American Board of Nuclear Medicine.

Dr. Saenger devoted the bulk of his professional career to the University of Cincinnati. He rose through the academic ranks to Professor of Radiology (1962), the same year he left private practice. He served as vice-chairman, Department of Radiology, from 1975 to 1987. Dr. Saenger established the Hospital's Radioisotope Laboratory in 1948 and it was named in his honor in 1979. He was its director until his retirement in 1987, at which time he was appointed Professor Emeritus, and the Eugene L. and Sue R. Saenger Professorship in Radiological Sciences was established.

Dr. Saenger was an avid outdoorsman and fly fisherman and a member of the Zanesfield Rod and Gun Club. In Cincinnati he was a member of the Queen City Club, the Optimists Club, the Literary Club and the University of Cincinnati's McMicken Society. He was also a member of Washington D.C.'s Cosmos Club and the Ocean Reef Club in Key Largo, Fla.

The entire family loved summering in Charlevoix, boating, fishing, playing golf and tennis and visiting with friends from all across the country who gathered in Charlevoix each summer. The Reis and Saenger families expressed their gratitude to the Charlevoix community through regular gifts to Charlevoix Area Hospital.

His wife of 54 years, Sue Reis Saenger, and a daughter, Katherine Soodek, preceded Dr. Saenger in death. Also preceding him in death were his father-in-law James J. Reis, stepmother Suzanne Grate Reis of Charlevoix, and brothers-in-law James Reis Jr. and John Reis.

Survivors include his son, Eugene L. (Ellen) Saenger Jr. of Cincinnati, four grandchildren, Eugene L. Saenger III and Nicholas J. Saenger of Cincinnati; Caroline Soodek of Chicago, Ill.; Andrew (Rika) Soodek and two great-grandchildren, Spencer and Ella Soodek, of Evanston, Ill.

(Tori Fisher) Inglis Jr. of Charlevoix; grandchildren, Suzanne Beth Inglis, Carrie Inglis, Jenelle Buchanan; stepgrandchildren, Sloan Fisher, Taylor Fisher, Tanner Fisher. He graduated from Arthur Hill Trade School. Frank was a pro boxer from 1930 until 1938 and was the Michigan State Lightweight Champion. He was ranked 18th in the United States. He then entered wrestling from 1939 to 1951 and was ranked 11th in the nation.

Nazarene church parishoners raise funds for mission

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Who knew soda bottles and rummage sales could save lives?

Parishioners of the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene know and that's why they are raising funds any way they can to pay for a mission trip to Nicaragua next spring.

"So far we have five teens and three adult chaperones including myself going," said Nazarene pastor Dan Gilmore. "We may build a new trip or new building or renovations when we get there."

One of the teens attending next spring's trip is Nazarene parishioner and Charlevoix High School junior Veronica Shull, who said mission work has had a profound affect on her life.

"You get to see how other people live," she said. "It really changes your perspective on what you have."

According to fellow student Ashley DeVries, helping others live better through Christ is personally rewarding.

"People should definitely do it (missionary work). If they're not, they're missing out on the best thing that could happen to them," she said. "I hope to accomplish a lot of things. I definitely want to bring somebody to Christ and I hope we get as much done on the construction site as they hope we do and as much as we need to do."

Gilmore said this, "work and witness" mission trip serves several purposes.

"It gives people awareness of the mission work and it certainly gives direction to young people, especially in seeking where the Lord might be leading them. It's also a good avenue for personal investment in the mission field," he said.

Gilmore, who has traveled to destitute regions of the world in years past said, "It's a life changing experience and it's amazing to see the simple joys and peace, but also the destitution they're dealing with.

"What often grieves me is the corruption at the government level in many of these countries. It's sad to see the ineffectiveness of governments," he said. "I think Americans should travel abroad. I think they would have a far greater appreciation of our government at all levels."

Gilmore added, "It's amazing how many of these government agencies are operating under the assumption that bribes will come and that everything is done by bribes. That is a great obstacle for churches because we don't participate in that, so many times there are delays because the proper people weren't paid off."

However, Gilmore said, he doesn't want to dwell on the negative aspects.

"It's amazing in many respects to see the work of the Lord going on," he said. "Often times in these areas the church is blossoming and exploding under hardship and that is always refreshing."

The cost to send one volunteer on the mission trip to begin over Easter break is $1,200, not including the cost of the project.

Past mission trips have included helping people in the Bahamas, Honduras, Costa Rica and Belize.

Anyone who wishes to help send Gilmore and his fellow missionaries may send a check or money order made out to the Nazarene Youth International Mission Trip, 12023 Waller Rd, Charlevoix or call pastor Gilmore at (231) 547-5711.

Four weeks on Chantix and no new vices

Kim
commits to quit

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Last week the Courier gave readers a glimpse into the life of our 41-year-old advertising manager Kim Taylor after three weeks on a new prescription pill from Pfizer called Chantix.

The pill, which she started taking on Sept 24 to quit smoking, contains no nicotine and helps reduce the urge to smoke by keeping nicotine from reaching key receptors in the brain.

This third installment of "Kim commits to quit" will focus on life changes she's noticed since dropping her pack a day habit and what she needs to do to stay with the program

THE PROGRAM

When did you start?

Sept 24 Quit smoking entirely on Sept 30.

How does it work?

Kim takes two one milligram pills daily. Chantix literature recommends continuing to take the pill for 12 weeks.

How are you feeling?

"Good. I haven't had any noticeable increase in my sense of taste or smell."

Have you gained any weight?

"I haven't weighed myself I was overweight to begin with so I don't do that "

Any new vices?

"No. I'm not eating any more. I'm not keeping my mouth or hands busy by munching."

How sure are you that you will succeed?

"It's going to be hard not to, especially in this town. Everyone knows. Strangers are walking up to me and saying, 'Are you Kim?' It's been neat how the community's rallied behind me."

Do you think you will have to change your life long-term to make it work?

"I don't think so. I'll probably have to diet soon. But I needed to do that anyway."

THE TRUTH

How many cigarettes have you smoked since Oct. 17?

"I haven't smoked a full cigarette, but I've bummed a lot of hits "

The community had a chance to hang with you at Fright Night on Oct. 19 at Castle Farms, did you come away smoke free?

"No. I had to sell raffle tickets in the smoking section. Smokers never get things like that (a chance to buy raffle tickets). People don't think about them. I was out there bumming hits."

How do you feel when you smoke with Chantix in your system?

"I would have to try (smoking) without drinking to know for sure But I don't want one then."

What has surprised you at this stage?

"A difference in perception. After leaving the Flight Deck Friday night (Oct. 19) my clothes smelled bad I wouldn't have noticed that before. I was still smoking."

Battling breast cancer one cookie at a time

BY KRISTINA HUGHES
PETOSKEY NEWS-REVIEW
STAFF WRITER

The aroma of fresh baked sugar cookies permeates the kitchen.

Bags of flour, cartons of eggs and containers of pink icing line the counters. Karen Kirschner of Petoskey smiles as she packs cookies made with love during the cookie drive for breast cancer.

"I feel normal again," Kirschner, a breast cancer survivor, said as she laughs and shares memories with friends.

Last year her friends helped her cope after her mastectomy surgery. Looking back, she remembers the afternoons spent in radiation, her friends who stood by her side when her hair fell out in clumps, and their acts of kindness.

"My friends would say, 'We love you just the way your are,'" Kirschner said.

Marla Kay Houghteling stirs the batter and remembers their efforts to lift Karen's spirits. She would bring meals over and helped with house chores.

"We would do normal life activities that took her away from the medical regiment. So much of her life revolved around chemo," Houghteling said.

Nearly two years after her diagnosis, Kirschner's eyes dance and her hair has grown back in curly waves. She is optimistic about the future and her efforts to increase awareness about the realities of breast cancer.

"There are no doom and gloom days," Kirschner said. "I'm hopeful and strong."

Kirschner is ready to start giving back to area breast cancer support groups. Instead of donating cash, she hopes to raise awareness about breast cancer and funds by baking cancer cookies.

The idea was sparked by her friend Jim Simonsen, who did a similar fundraiser in Naples, Fla.

On a recent afternoon, Jim and his mom, Elaine Simonsen, were busy making dozens of sugar cookies at the Truffles Bakery and Deli. The old-fashioned sugar cookies decorated with a pink breast cancer emblem will be sold at the Truffles Bakery and Deli in Charlevoix. Jim, the owner of the bakery, is donating all the ingredients.

Jim, a close friend of Kirschner's, is proud of her positive attitude and desire to give back.

"We knew she'd be better," Jim said. "We stayed focused on getting better and helping people."

All the proceeds from the sales will benefit Just for Us, a support group for breast cancer survivors, and the Circle of Strength, a cancer support group's cancer library project at the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Kirschner a member of both the groups said the support played an instrumental role in her own recovery.

"They gave me hope and something to look forward to," Kirschner said. "I didn't feel alone."

East Park project begins to take shape

The $7 million overhaul of East Park is beginning to take shape. Work on the park project started in late February 2007 with demolition of the former Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce building, the Odmark Pavilion commonly called the "bandshell," the portable bathroom trailer and the fish pond. These photos were taken recently and depict work currently underway including construction of the new performance pavilion and harbormaster's facility as well as site work and underground excavation. The Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority is paying for $5.2 million of this project, the Michigan Waterways Commission is funding the balance. The complete project which is about two weeks behind schedule is expected to be unveiled on May 26, 2008.

(Above) This stone facade on display in East Park which aims to replicate the Earl Young stone work in Charlevoix will be used as the exterior finish on both the harbormaster's building and the performance pavilion. The stone came from a quarry in Onaway. (Left) Cones placed along the marina promenade mark where light poles will be installed. Each light pole will have a speaker mounted on it to pipe concerts through the park.

This is a view of the harbormaster's building under construction. The footings were poured in mid-July and last week, a 16 inch concrete roof was poured over the protruding aluminum joists. The roof will be covered in grass and will have bench seating and viewing opportunities of the interactive fountain and the trout pond which will run along the south side of the building, shown above at right.

Excavation is underway for tiered seating at the performance pavilion. The seating will be a combination of grass and concrete. In digging out the four tiers, workers with Hallmark construction, the project's general contractor, were surprised to find the foundation from the Parkside, a restaurant that used to sit at the site. The pavilion is seen here under construction in the background.

Charles Merriman charged in brother's murder

BY STEVE ZUCKER
PETOSKEY NEWS-REVIEW
STAFF WRITER

An East Jordan man accused of killing his brother who has been missing for more than a year was bound over to face trial on a charge of open murder following a marathon preliminary examination Thursday, Oct. 18.

Charles "Chuck" Merriman Jr., 58, is accused of killing his brother William Merriman, then-54, on or about June 15, 2006, at their parents' home near East Jordan.

Despite the fact that William Merriman's body has never been found, the day before Merriman was arrested in late August, the 7th Probate Court granted a motion by Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema to have William Merriman legally declared dead.

The most lengthy testimony Thursday came from Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office Det./Lt. Michael Wheat, who was in charge of the year-long investigation.

Wheat explained he first learned of William Merriman's disappearance on Sept. 5, 2006, when he received a message from a concerned friend.

According to Wheat's testimony, William Merriman had lived in Hudsonville for some time where he worked as a graphic design artist. William had traveled to his parents' home on Phelps Road (where the defendant has lived for many years) around the time their mother died around June 11 or 12. Their father had recently been admitted to a Charlevoix nursing home and William had been making arrangements for his father to come home.

Charles Merriman

The last evidence of William being alive is a debit card transaction at the Charlevoix Glen's at about 8 p.m. on June 15, 2006.

Wheat said there has been no trace of William since. There has been no activity in any of his bank accounts or his Internet service. He abandoned his apartment and all of its contents. He has had no contact with any family, friends or co-workers. Checks of hospitals and clinics in northern Michigan and the Grand Rapids area and alerts on police information networks have all turned up empty.

Wheat said when he went to the Phelps Road home, Charles Merriman Jr. said he last saw his brother on the night of June 15, 2006, when he left with a man named "Ed" to travel to Indiana to answer a call for help from his ex-wife.

But, Wheat said Merriman's story kept changing.

When police executed a search warrant at the house and found blood inside. Wheat said Merriman explained that when he and his brother were removing carpet from the house in anticipation of their father coming home, William had cut his hand and bled extensively.

Police said they found William Merriman's blood in numerous locations throughout the first floor of the house. Wheat said Merriman explained that the blood was spread around the house both by his brother as he moved around following the injury and by the blood-soaked carpet when he removed it from the house.

Wheat said deputies later made several trips to a landfill near Pinconning when they learned that a garbage company had hauled away a six yard load of items from the Phelps Road home in early July. During one of those visits police recovered a sofa cushion that Charles Merriman Jr. later identified as having come from the house and having a large spot of his brother's blood.

Merriman hearing wraps after 12 hours of testimony

Wheat said police did a foot search of the area around the Merriman home, searched a pond nearby and did an aerial search by helicopter using infrared scanners but did not find William Merriman's body. Wheat also said Chuck Merriman admitted that shortly before William's disappearance "there had been a lot of friction between William and Chuck regarding Chuck's inability to hold up his end of the family finances in getting a job."

Thursday's hearing, which included testimony from more than a dozen witnesses, began at 9 a.m. and wrapped up around 9 p.m.

Others who testified Thursday included William's landlord and business associates, all of whom described William as very dependable, responsible and organized. His landlord said he had never been late on a rent payment in 10 years.

William's ex-wife testified that she hasn't had any contact with William since their divorce in 1982.

A orthopedic surgeon testified that the injury to his brother's hand the defendant described to police would be very unlikely to cause the amount blood loss as indicated by evidence collected at the scene.

Preliminary examinations are hearings held in district court in felony cases. At such hearings the prosecutor must convince a judge that probable cause exists to show that a crime was committed and that the defendant committed the crime before the case can be sent on to circuit court for trial. "Probable cause" is a much lower standard of proof than the "beyond a reasonable doubt" standard at trial.

Because William Merriman's body has not been found, Jarema's biggest hurdle at trial may be proving to a jury that William died and that he died as a result of criminal activity.

The case will be set for a scheduling conference in the coming weeks. Merriman has been denied bond.

Merriman requests a new attorney

BY STEVE ZUCKER
PETOSKEY NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

STORY HIGHLIGHT

At the beginning of his preliminary examination Thursday, Oct. 18 Charles Merriman Jr. asked 90th District Court Judge Richard W. May for a different court-appointed attorney saying that he was not satisfied with the work his current defense attorney Kerry Zahner had done to-date on his case. The request was denied.

At the beginning of his preliminary examination Thursday, Oct. 18 Charles Merriman Jr. did something unusual.

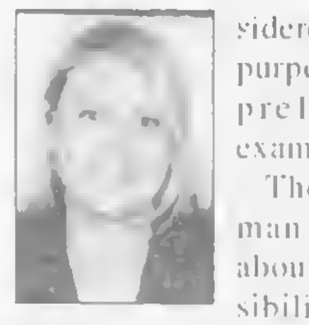
He asked 90th District Court Judge Richard W. May for a different court-appointed attorney saying that he was not satisfied with the work his current defense attorney Kerry Zahner had done to-date on his case.

Merriman said he felt like the court proceedings were being treated as just a formality on the path to spending the rest of his life in prison.

Following what appeared to be her client's unexpected request of the judge, Zahner detailed the work she had done to prepare for Thursday's hearing.

Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema came to Zahner's defense saying that he knew Zahner to be a competent attorney and that he had already had several meetings with her on the case that of which Merriman was likely not aware.

Judge May denied Merriman's request saying that he, too, knew Zahner to be a competent attorney. He added many of the things Merriman was complaining that Zahner had not done were things that she was not permitted to do under the rules of ethics or were not matters to be considered for the purpose of the preliminary examination.



Kerry Zahner

Then Merriman inquired about the possibility of being allowed to represent himself. Judge May also denied that request, pointing to Merriman's own in-court statement that he had little understanding of legal proceedings.

Artist Gathering exhibit at the Jordan River Arts Center

Area artists who participated in this summers' Artist's Gathering paint outs, sponsored by the Jordan River Arts Council now have their works exhibited at the Jordan River Art Center in the lower gallery during the Davies—Staffel Exhibit.

The Artist's Gathering began two years ago when barn painting works were needed for the Barn and Folk Art Exhibit. Several arts council member painters were contacted and a schedule was set up for the summer with different sites with an artist hostess at each site. The project was so successful that it was continued during the winter at the art center with still life and life drawing as the focus.

This summer the focus was on water landscape. Artists participating this summer were Juli Rumberg, Pat Tinney, Cayla Tinney, Howard Ellis, Jane Diller, John Stevens, Richard Cunningham, Prudy Barber, Joan Tebo, Susan Sheets, Trish Morgan, Rosie Evans, Carol Johnson, Phyllis Childs, Lynn Carson, Mary Ann Polchlopek, Raechel Alberts, Pat Terry, Karen Kimmel, Diane Strezlinski, and Gail Innes. Those having works on display are Barber, Tebo, Sheets, Alberts, Diller, Evans, Strezlinski and Stevens. All works are for sale.

10 things you never knew about Werewolf Bob

Bringing you closer to your neighbors ...

The Charlevoix Courier recently caught up with Werewolf Bob while he was doing some last-minute Halloween shopping. Bob became a werewolf while traveling along the West Coast during the summer of 1969.

The Charlevoix Courier recently caught up with Werewolf Bob as he was preparing for Halloween

1. How did you become a werewolf?

"It was the summer of '69." Me and some friends were cycling down the West Coast, camping each night, when one evening we were attacked by what we though was a large dog. I've been hairy and scary ever since."

2. What do you do for fun?

"Chase livestock, bark at the moon, scare small children, anything that involves a howling good time."

3. Is there anything else you would liked to have done with your life?

"I always wanted to try interpretive dance, but look at me, I'm a werewolf."

4. If you could change one thing about yourself or your world what would it be?

"I wish I had a better dental plan. My canines are killing me from all this biting and snarling."

5. What do you do when you're not out terrorizing the countryside?

"My training is in political science, but with the economy the way it is I've been making ends meet with odd jobs. I do roofing, lawn care, no job is too small. Call me."

6. If you could meet anyone, living or dead, for an hour lunch, who would it be?

"Lon Chaney Jr. who played Larry Talbot in the 1941 classic, The Wolfman. I just love his work."

7. What is your favorite food to eat or prepare?

"Goats, sheep, horses, cows, people, but they have to be alive because they taste better when they're scared."

8. What really makes you angry?

"Guys with silver bullets. They think they're so smart."

9. What is something people do not know about you?

"Every time I hear the song 'Wind Beneath My Wings' I break down and cry."

10. What is your favorite time of the year?

"Oh, definitely fall. I love Halloween. It's the one time of the year when I can leave the house and no one freaks out."

Frightful fun

Lindsey Carland and Brian Hater dressed as Dog the Bounty Hunter and his wife Beth, won best dressed couple at Fright Night on Oct. 19 at Castle Farms, a costume party and fund-raiser attended by about 150 people to benefit the Charlevoix Children's House. While official numbers have not been calculated, initial numbers show about $7,000 was raised.

Halloween safety tips and times

Here are some Halloween safety tips:

Choosing your costume:

- Make sure you can breathe inside your mask – If the eye and nose holes are not big enough, make them bigger. a
- Make up is generally a safe alternative to masks
- Costumes should fit loosely to allow for free movement and warm clothes under it, but not so loose that the child might trip over it.
- Avoid using weapons or sharp objects with costumes — plastic props or weapons made from cardboard and tinfoil are a safe alternative
- Make sure costumes are flame-retardant as lit jack-0-lanterns may ignite fabric
- Be seen — if your costume is dark in color, apply reflective tape to it and carry a flashlight

Know where you are going:

- Discuss route to be taken
- Travel in groups
- Chaperone younger children
- Only visit homes which are well-lit
- Never enter a home
- Young children should carry a paper containing their address and phone number in the event they are lost

Trick-or-treaters should check each piece of candy before eating it.

Other tips:

- Walk, don't run from house to house
- Obey traffic signals
- Trick-or-treat in familiar areas
- Avoid strange pets
- Remind kids not to eat any candy before they get home
- Check each piece of candy before allowing kids to eat it
- Eating a small meal before heading out will help reduce the temptation to snack on treats while out and about
- Discard any treats you suspect were tampered with

Official trick-or-treating hours in the City of Charlevoix:

6 to 8 p.m. on Oct. 31

File photo

At around 12:30 p.m. on Oct. 31 Northwest Academy students will trick-or-treat down Bridge Street, to the Charlevoix Public Library and up Park Avenue before heading back to school. Charlevoix Elementary School students will follow at 1:15 p.m.

Careful carving

Paige Bradley and Rylynn Sladek of Charlevoix carve pumpkins on Oct. 19. Pumpkin safety tips include using artificial lights instead of candles, supervising the use of cutting tools as it's hard for little hands to cut through the tough flesh of a pumpkin. Choose pumpkins which are firm, not dried out, and carve them two to three days before Halloween for the best look. (Below) Aidan Webb, 4, of East Jordan picked out this fresh pumpkin at Bolt's Farm on Sunday, Oct. 22.

Cider party

On Sept. 30, Terri and Dave Parsons hosted the 30th Annual Apple Cider Party at the Parsons' Centennial Farm. The Parsons' Farm was established in 1898. The antique cider press used today was used by the Parsons family in days of yesteryear. Dave Parsons' father restored the press in the 1990s. This community event was attended by over 100 family members, friends and neighbors who enjoyed a cheerful hay ride to gather apples, the pleasurable pressing of the cider and a potluck.

Rayder football ends season with a loss

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

The Rayders ended their last game of the season the same way they began, with a loss.

Charlevoix's varsity football team was beaten 28-7 by Grayling on Friday, Oct. 19.

"The Rayders led the game 7-0 at half-time," said Rayder coach Don Jess. "Cliff Jones scored Charlevoix's only touchdown on a four-yard run."

He added, "Our kids gave it everything they had. They never gave up. Grayling was just more physical than us."

Cliff Jones kicked the extra point.

Kyle Jones led the defense with eight tackles and Justin Klooster had two interceptions.

Jess said he will miss his senior players debarking for bigger and better things next spring.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for them because, even though they didn't win a lot of games, they kept trying," he said. "I think that is the reason they'll be successful in life."

Jess added, "As for next season, our weightlifting has already started at 6:20 a.m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday."

Program for heart attack survivors offered at Harbor Health and Fitness

What? Harbor Health & Fitness Center will host a free seminar to launch the first-of-its-kind fitness program designed by world-renowned cardiologist, Dr. Mehmet Oz, and celebrity fitness trainer Bob Greene, specifically for heart attack survivors.
When? From 7 to 8 p.m. on Nov. 8.
Where? At the Harbor Health and Fitness Center, 110 Clinton St. in downtown Charlevoix.

Harbor Health & Fitness Center will host a seminar to launch the first-of-its-kind fitness program designed specifically for heart attack survivors.

Heart attack patients as well as those who suffer from certain heart-related conditions, may be hesitant to exercise for fear of worsening their condition.

Research shows that exercising — along with not smoking and controlling your blood pressure — can cut the risk of having another heart attack by 15 percent. However, before beginning any program heart patients should talk to their health care provider about developing a full treatment plan designed specifically for their individual needs, including proper exercises, appropriate medications and a healthy diet.

The "Heartfelt for Life: Strengthening Your Heart" programs offer fitness focused activities and lifestyle choices that can help those at-risk patients learn how to achieve and maintain heart health. The program was designed by a world-renowned cardiologist, Dr. Mehmet Oz, and celebrity fitness trainer Bob Greene, along with experts from Cedars-Sinai Hospital in Los Angeles.

The Heartfelt for Life seminar and fitness program will take place from 7 to 8 p.m. on Nov. 8 at the Harbor Health and Fitness Center, 110 Clinton St. in downtown Charlevoix. This free educational fitness program provides real-life routines from a person's own home or office. During the seminar, attendees will receive a free copy of the program instructional video along with a list of questions they can ask their health care provider to determine if this program is right for their individual heart-health needs. Attendees will also be provided information about the signs, symptoms and causes of heart problems. In addition, heart attack survivors can get tips to help them live a heart-healthier lifestyle.

For more information and to reserve a spot for the upcoming seminar, call (231) 547-8000. To learn more about the Heartfelt for Life program, visit www.Heartfeltforlife.com.

Karl Redmer, a social studies and art teacher at Northwest Academy of Charlevoix, shows off his students' handiwork. Each art student was required to create a portion of the larger canvas with the theme of what art symbolizes for them.

The Swirl returns to Crooked Tree Arts Center

The Thursday evening Swirl picks back up on Oct. 25.

Swirl mixes wine, art and energy at Petoskey's Crooked Tree Arts Center. Esperance of Charlevoix presents a wine tasting with creative hors d'oeuvres while community members mingle in the galleries, sway to music or enjoy "live art" demonstrations.

Each month will embrace a different seasonal theme and bring flavors from around the world.

The following is a list of Swirl dates:

Oct. 25, "Harvest Moon. Fall Flavors"

Jan. 10, "Chill Factor: Warm Winter Reds"

Feb. 7, "Pure Love: Wine and Chocolate"

March 6, "Early Thaw. Wines of the Southern Hemisphere"

April 10, "In Bloom: New Wine Horizons"

May 1, "Garden Party Summer Entertaining"

Tickets are $10 in advance and $12.50 per person at the door. Galleries open at 6 p.m. and the refreshments begin at 6:30 p.m.

For more information, contact the Crooked Tree Arts Center, (231) 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org. For more information about Esperance, call (231) 237-9300 or visit www.esperancewine.com.

Nov. 12 Paths to Peace precursor to upcoming Peace Conference

The Northern Michigan People for Peace and Little Traverse League for Peace and Freedom is announcing their conference from 7 to 9 p.m. on Nov. 12 at Charlevoix Public Library.

As the world gears up this fall for the U.S.-sponsored Peace Conference with Israel, Palestine and other nations of the Middle East, activists in northwest Michigan come together, sharing visions and ideas in frank discussion of the issues.

The speakers include Chave Bahle, rabbi and story-teller, Suttons Bay; Gina Aranki, a Palestinian-American activist, Traverse City; Raad Amer, a peace activist, from Petoskey and Masha, West Bank; and Pam Ovshinsky, a sociologist and civil rights activist from Petoskey.

A social time with a sampling of ethnic foods will follow the program.

'Four Directions' Native American exhibit opens at Crooked Tree Arts Center

The 2008 Native American exhibition at the Crooked Tree Arts Center is entitled "The Four Directions" and is based on the different parts of the calendar year represented on the Native American medicine wheel.

The medicine wheel represents the life of the Anishnaabe. The West Gallery at Crooked Tree Arts Center is separated into the Four Directions with each direction representing one of the four seasons, the four stages of life, the four medicines and the four elements.

"In this exhibition one can learn more about the Native American culture that is so rich in northern Michigan," said Gail Hosner, visual arts/education director at Crooked Tree Arts Center. "The calendar year is divided in four parts, east (waabinong) representing birth, south (zhaawonong) representing youth, west (epangishmok) also representing adulthood and north (giiwedinong) representing the elders. The four parts of the calendar year are also coupled with the four medicines, elements and seasons. For the Odawa, winter (biboon) faces north and is a time when the elders (kikaa) of the tribe teach and tell stories so that traditions can be passed on to the youth" Hosner continues. "It is a sublime and beautiful way to honor and welcome the different seasons of the year, as well as life from birth to old age and "walking on."

A Quill Box created by Yvonne Walker-Keshick. It is on display in conjunction with the 2008 Native American exhibition at the Crooked Tree Arts Center entitled "The Four Directions."

During the run of the exhibition a DVD created by the Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians entitled: The Four Directions and the Waganakising Odawa will be playing in the gallery. The video was created with such excellence that it has been selected as the Official Selection Bell South Native American Film Festival 2006. Different items from local Odawa collections will be on display in the gallery to bring the traditions of the culture to life; baskets, house wares, plants, hides, carvings will all be part of the Four Directions experience.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center is located at 461 East Mitchell St. in Petoskey. For more information, call (231) 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org.

Plan for the future at open space workshop

A workshop entitled "Farmland and open space protection: options for Charlevoix County communities" will take place from 7 to 9:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 7 at Charlevoix Public Library.

The program is sponsored by Michigan State University Extension and the Charlevoix County Planning Department, Conservation District and County Farm Bureau.

"Many leaders recognize that our beautiful water, forests and farmland are keys to our economic future. Deciding just how to protect those resources is complicated and sometimes controversial," said Dean Solomon, Charlevoix County Extension Director."

The goal of the workshop, according to Solomon, is to step back and explore the full range of policy options available to townships and counties for farmland and open space protection. It is specially designed for elected officials, planning commission members, professional planners and interested citizens.

The featured speaker will be Dr. Patricia Norris, Michigan State University professor and Guyer-Seevers chair in Natural Resources Conservation. She is a highly-regarded natural resources and local land use policy expert, and an engaging speaker.

Although the focus will be on Charlevoix County issues, Solomon indicated that participants are welcome from anywhere.

The workshop fee is $15 per person and the registration deadline is Nov. 2. For more information, contact the Michigan State University Extension office at (231) 582-6232 or www.msue.msu.edu/charlevoix.

City goes green with $48,000 LED tree lighting project friendly and use less than 10 percent of the electricity required to power traditional incandescent lights. The switch from incandescent lights will save thousands of dollars in energy costs annually.

LED

LED tree lights always remain cool to the touch. Because tree lighting is often used in close proximately to combustible materials this feature can greatly reduce the risk of fires.

"Not only will we be using a cool, new tree lighting technology, but we'll be saving money while doing it," said Keith Carey, executive director of the Charlevoix DDA. "LED lights cost more to purchase, but we'll realize savings on our overall lighting program in just three years. And this includes extending our lighting season to the summer months."

The purchase bid of the LED tree lights was awarded to low bidder Michigan Decorations LLC of Traverse City for the amount of $32,960. This cost will be split evenly by the Charlevoix Electric Fund and the DDA. Michigan Decorations LLC was also the low bidder on the installation of the lights, submitting an installation bid in the amount of $15,200. The DDA will pay for the removal of the old incandescent lights and the installation of the new LED strings. Michigan Decorations LLC anticipates having the new lights installed and operational by the end of November, weather permitting.

What? The Charlevoix Electric Fund and Downtown Development Authority will split the costs of acquiring 107,000 new energy efficient light emitting diode, or LED, tree lights for the 71 trees located on both sides of Bridge Street between Dixon Avenue and Hurlbut Street

How much? $32,960 to replace the lights with LED strands and $15,200 to install them.

The Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority has partnered with the City of Charlevoix Electric Department to relight the streetside trees with LED light strands to save money and energy.

Saltonstall calls for new Commission on Aging director

Connie Saltonstall

In the wake of an unfavorable assessment of the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging's ability to provide services for area seniors, a former county commissioner said she is working to make things right.

Former First District county commissioner and current Commission on Aging board member, Connie Saltonstall attempted to request Margo Johnson, a two-term Commission on Aging board member who serves on several senior citizen committees, not be re-appointed during the board of commissioners' Wednesday, Oct. 24 meeting

Saltonstall was told by Shirley Roloff, chairman of the board of commissioners that her comments were inappropriate.

"I think it was wrong of her to deny me the right to speak," Saltonstall said. "The agenda said we could speak for three minutes on any agenda item and that is what I was doing."

Roloff said Saltonstall had every opportunity to make her displeasure known at Commission on Aging meetings.

"At the beginning of the year, I said no one is going to come in and attack someone else if they were not present and when she started criticizing and attacking Margo and Joan (Blanchard, also a Commission on Aging member) I was not having that," Roloff said. "If she wanted to come in and state her position,

Is the DNR doomed?

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT

Will Fisherman's Island State Park and the Department of Natural Resources Charlevoix Fisheries Research Station dodge the budget cut bullet?

Dave Clapp, manager of the Charlevoix Fisheries Research Station, said he thinks so. At least for now.

"At this point I feel pretty confident we'll be around," he said.

But if the Department of Natural Resources doesn't find a way to address its budget woes, the future looks bleak.

For the fiscal year 2008 which started on Oct. 1, the department is staring down a $2.5 million deficit in its Game and Fish Fund which is used exclusively for game and fish management and has forecasted a $13 million deficit for the fiscal year 2009 in that fund. The Game and Fish Fund accounts for 25 percent of the Department of Natural Resources budget.

According to Mary Dettloff, a public information officer for the DNR, the department has been living off the Game and Fish Fund's balance since 2000 when budget cuts happened and that surplus is now gone.

According to a press release disseminated last week, the deficit in this fund will lead to the closing of two of the state's six fish hatcheries,

State budget cuts could close local DNR fisheries station and state park

the elimination of creel clerks who conduct fish surveys and the closure of a research station, among others.

When asked if the Charlevoix station was one of the two proposed to close, Dettloff said, "I don't know. We still have to do analysis on which should close."

Clapp said if the local station was to close, the impact would be felt in Charlevoix.

"The community loss as well as the loss to the Great Lakes would be tremendous. We employ 20 people, do education work for the schools and help run the (Medusa Creek) weir. There are a lot of local benefits and educational benefits to having the station here. The state of Michigan is critical in assessing the health of the Great Lakes," he said.

While the station's role may be critical, Dettloff said the department was told on Monday, Oct. 22 their state general fund allowance will be cut and now fisheries stations aren't the only program under the gun.

Funding from the general fund, the state's primary checkbook, accounts for about 4.5 percent of the department's total budget which for the 2008 fiscal year is proposed at $280 million. Their revenue target from the general fund for 2008 is $23.7 million, down from the $24 million allocation they received in the fiscal year 2007 which ended on Oct. 1.

"But we have to reduce it (the $23.7 million proposed for 2008) by $1.05 million," Dettloff said.

The Department of Natural Resources uses the general fund allocation in three areas: state forest recreation, i.e. campgrounds; wildlife surveillance, including bovine tuberculosis testing; and to pay for conservation officers to assist with non natural resources related incidents, like car accidents.

The answer to the general fund allocation shortfall is closure of two more of the state's 97 campgrounds, a reduction in disease surveillance for bovine tuberculosis and elimination of general conservation law by conservation officers. This news follows the closure of 20 state campgrounds in July that resulted from general fund reductions in the fourth quarter of the 2007 fiscal year.

"If you close parks in northern Michigan, it's an economic loss for northern Michigan. A lot of people come up here for that. State park users contribute over $500 million to the state's economy. That's money they're spending outside the park," Dettloff said.

While the fallout is complex and potentially devastating, Dettloff said the department's solution to the budget crisis is simple, increase revenue at the source of the department's primary income — licenses and fees for activities — which account for 75 percent of the department's budget. But as it turns out this "simple" approach is being met with resistance from the legislature.

"The legislature isn't interested right now in increasing license fees and if they don't, we'll experience these deficits in the Game and Fish Fund," Dettloff said. "What we're hearing is the state just increased taxes on people and doesn't want to increase licenses too."

She said the last time a comprehensive fee package passed was 1996.

STORY HIGHLIGHT
The Department of Natural Resources has proposed license and fee increases to offset major deficits in its 2008 budget. But these increases are being frowned on by the legislature. If the increases aren't approved major cuts to DNR services across the board will be initiated included closing of two state campgrounds and two of the state's six fish hatcheries, one of which is in Charlevoix. Official decisions as to where cuts will happen will be announced after Nov. 1 when the state budget is decided.

The most popular license applied for is "firearm deer." The cost is $15 and according to Dettloff is one of the lowest of its kind the country. The last time it was increased was 2003 when it went up $1. A "restricted fishing" license (which does not include salmon and trout) is also currently $15. The proposal is to increase both to $18.75.

Also proposed is an increase in motor vehicle permit fees at state parks.

Official decisions as to where cuts will happen will be announced after Nov. 1 when the state budget is decided.

Commission on Aging sets goals to improve service to local seniors that would have been fine, but I think she just stepped out of bounds and crossed the line."

While Saltonstall hoped Johnson would not remain a board member, she also has issues with two others at the top of the commission's pecking order — Blanchard and director, Sue Bergmann.

"They've had that (senior) millage money for nearly seven years now and they haven't provided services, proper training or proper supervision," Saltonstall said. "I don't know why they haven't done what was needed in the past, but these people were in charge when the problems were created."

In response to Saltonstall's concerns with the Commission on Aging and lack of faith in its leadership, Johnson said Saltonstall is focusing only on the negative.

"When we got the assessment back, it was pretty shocking," Johnson said. "Some of it we expected, but the degree of dissatisfaction was not expected."

She added, "But, I stand by the fact that we now have information to work with and thank god we know what the issues are so we can address them."

But Saltonstall isn't buying it.

"The survey completed in 2000 had the same results and nothing was done to fix the problems," she said. "We need a new administrator who, number one, has the interests of the seniors and number two, is trained as an administrator. Responsibilities and the client base has gotten larger and I don't think she (Bergmann) has taken steps to provide the proper organization that will provide the services needed."

Saltonstall said she feels it was dishonest of some Commission on Aging board members to say at public meetings that the fund balance was in the red while there was actually more than $1 million in the commission's investment fund.

"She is speaking of the investment fund, not the operating fund, and that's what was in the red at the time," Johnson said. "I don't believe taxpayer money should be given or spent to the first entity that walks in and asks for it. It needs to be spent where the information says the needs are."

She added, "I think we are at very different philosophies."

Saltonstall said she fears things, such as Bergmann receiving a glowing evaluation last year in the face of so many unhappy clients, will not change unless those at the top are replaced.

"Information is control, which is why they are upset with me, because I have made information available not only to the committee (Commission on Aging board) but also to the public," she said. "Just recently the COA board voted on a motion to add an 11th member. The vote was 4-3 in favor and Joan Blanchard then said an absent member was voting against it which made it 4-4. There is nothing in county policy which allows for proxy voting. Joan Blanchard then said she was voting to break the tie so it was defeated 5-4. I think that is a perfect example of the attitude that they can control what the COA does."

Johnson said she isn't in the business of bragging, but claims it was her idea to establish the senior services committee and to perform the assessment.

"If someone wants to say because the (assessment) came out that I don't care about seniors, that is ridiculous," she said.

Johnson added that, on Oct. 22, the commission and selected stakeholders including members from local housing commissions, agency on aging, medical facilities, sheriff's department and transit authority participated in a meeting to prioritize potential actions to address concerns made clear in the senior services assessment.

The 25 commission members and stakeholders voted on which issues they thought were the most pressing to resolve.

The top issues included changes and additions to programs, transportation, adult day services, marketing and outreach.

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Yes I made them cry and, given the chance, I'd do it all over again.

My younger five brothers and sister to this day won't forgive or forget the torment I delivered during their formative years. Whether I was jumping out of closets clad in rubber horror masks or locking them in the unlit rooms of our musty basement at 618 West Midland Road, their cries of terror were equaled only by my squeals of delight.

While Halloween was always a good excuse for my malicious endeavors, our unique dwelling made every day a scary day. After all, you stick seven bored kids in a rundown mansion straight out of Amityville Horror and the script pretty much writes itself.

The 100-year-old, two-story farmhouse's dilapidated exterior with crumbling siding and overgrown shrubbery was enough to make Van Helsing walk on the opposite sidewalk, but it was the depths of the wooden beast where the evil lived.

The large stone basement was divided into three rooms, one large and two small. It was dimly lit, dank and filled with cobwebs. One wall was covered with cupboards large enough to hide human bodies and there was a small doorway under the basement steps which I never opened for fear of what I might find.

The small, dust covered windows allowed just enough light to see abstract shapes from the archaic furnace, coal chute and homemade work bench.

Even as a teenager I found myself avoiding the basement except when necessary. If I was forced to descend for laundry or a tool, I did so with apprehension and palpitations, praying I would not feel an icy hand touch my shoulder, before shooting back up the stairs fast as my legs would carry me.

I'd like to say I have outgrown my cowardice, but knowing a zombie, ax murderer or Vincent Price is down there still, perhaps lurking just beyond the washing machine or in one of those back rooms with the Texas Chainsaw Massacre decor, is enough to turn me yellow.

My hypersensitivity to all things horrific probably began when I was 6 and I begged mom to let me watch "Poltergeist." This, of course, only slightly worse an idea than her making me stay up to watch "The Fog" shortly after my parents divorce the following year.

Blend my addiction of horror flicks with the house's appearance and a stepfather who claims to have heard noises and voices coming from the basement at night and his account of a strange little girl peering from an upstairs window while we worked in the yard one summer day, I was one anxiety riddled child.

Granted, knowing dad's colorful childhood and propensity for psychoses, these episodes could have been self-induced hallucinations of the Heineken variety, but having firsthand experience with Hell House, he may have been on to something.

Legend has it that the man who built the house died of a heart attack while watching the city forcibly remove an outhouse from his property. I cannot be sure about the alleged ghosts residing there, but I have witnessed several aberrations including unexplained noises, exorbitant numbers of flies and frogs in the basement. And by frogs I do not mean one or two, I'm talking can't step without hitting one, Old Testament, "We're all going die" type stuff.

Perhaps it was merely coincidence, but the house's presence seemed to be known even around Christmas when carolers would place luminary bags on the sidewalk of every home except ours.

I remember one morning, after my sib's and I overheard our parents talking about the latest extraordinary episode, we spent the day ghost hunting in the basement.

It has been years since I spent a night at the house in Auburn. But, despite some sleepless and sweaty evenings, I kind of miss the excitement of the old place.

To my chagrin, the Halloween season these days garners little more excitement than watching some Alfred Hitchcock or John Carpenter flicks and helping the kids choose just the right pumpkin.

The house today has been pretty much reclaimed by the earth and only my parents and three brothers, two of whom soon plan to move, live there.

The hedges are now as tall as the roof of the porch, which collapsed from old age a few years ago, and climbing ivy covers most of the walls.

If you ever find yourself passing through Auburn, slow down and have a look for yourself. You may not believe in ghosts and goblins, but the that old house is enough to induce goose bumps and shake even the stoutest skeptic.

Last curtain call for a special lady, Connie Ford

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

It was the fall of 1974 and I was the brand new kid on the block at Charlevoix High School.

I was fresh out of graduate school, attired in my plaid bell bottoms that complimented my air of authority on everything and nothing at the same time. The man at the helm of my new job took great pride displaying the well polished hallways of the high school, talking endlessly without taking a breath. Vane Smith was going to show me the ropes of what I was expected to do in this building that housed approximately 640 of Charlevoix's finest youth.

After explaining the history of the Carey family and looking over the various trophies on display he took me by the arm and led me directly into her classroom.

"Now, this woman knows how to teach, compete and get the job done," he boasted.

I stared in awe at the altar of trophies and plaques that lined the entire wall of a classroom. This case was at least three times larger than the one I had just viewed moments before in the hallway.

While gazing at the bronze and gold ornaments glistening in the afternoon sunlight, I felt a bit overwhelmed. I knew without a doubt that I had arrived at a school that took sports and performing arts seriously. My new boss was pleased with how this woman, who usually kept to herself and her students, had made arrangements with parents and anyone who would listen and transport them to places that many of us had never heard of. She instilled in her future protégé's confidence and stimulated their ability to think on their feet. Mrs. Ford or "M.F." as she was often referred to, let them know that they could compete with the "big guys."

In all the years I worked at Charlevoix High School, Connie Ford was a force to be reckoned with. She rarely spent time in the lounge or even in the school lunch room. Her life was dedicated to her students and the next performance she'd take on the road. Many a student can claim that they were brought out of their shell and could feel comfortable speaking to a group with conviction after spending time in her class.

I remember her classes were some of the larger ones at the high school. Students might have conjectured that her speech class was going to be easy. On the contrary — she put you to work the moment you entered. She reminded me of a grilled cheese sandwich-crusty on the outside and soft in the middle. She had a heart of gold for the student who was willing to work hard but if you slacked off she was quick to let you know who was boss.

I remember her excitement over the new auditorium. It was like manna from heaven. The sound booth was sacred and only students who were dedicated to taking care of it were given the chance to give it a spin. She expected nothing less than the best and her students gave it their all.

Connie Ford never complained about pain — work needed to be done. With the assistance of her daughter, Beth, things continued on course and the program didn't miss a beat. I spent time with her in the hospital and at Sunnybank Assisted Living. Nurses would turn to me and say, "Doesn't she know she is dying?" Her cancer began to spread and she needed the special nursing care that Boulder Park could offer. Her former students who visited those last few days saw a woman who continued to think of ideas of what to do next and rarely spoke about the disease that was ravaging her body. She had a high tolerance for pain and was not afraid to meet her maker.

There will be a presence missed at Charlevoix High School but believe me when I say, her spirit lives on in all the lives she has touched, including mine.

LETTERS to the editor

MEDIATE DON'T LITIGATE

Editor:

I strongly support your editorial entitled, "Stop the bleeding with frivolous lawsuits" which appeared on page 4 of the Oct. 24 edition of the Charlevoix Courier. In addition to the, so far, $50,000 that the Norwood property owners have had to pay in response to the lawsuit against Wayne Wynkoop and his mining operation and the untold amount of money the defendant, Wayne Wynkoop, and the plaintiff's, the Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety, have had to spend, the litigation has brought significant disharmony and divisiveness to our village and community.

I, publicly, at two township meetings, and in private telephone conversations with both parties encouraged them to use mediation as a means to resolve the dispute. It has been my experience and knowledge that using a mediation process, such as Northern Community Mediation, where two parties and a trained mediator(s) get together and discuss the issues is frequently a very successful way of resolving differences without an adverse lawsuit process where, generally, one party "wins" and the other "loses."

Instead of mediation, a lawsuit was filed and a circuit court decision rendered to require that Mr. Wynkoop obtain a special use permit from the Norwood Township Planning Commission. That process was followed, and with some personal knowledge, I am aware that the planning commissioners spent many hours and diligently applied special use restrictions to the mining operations in accordance with the township ordinances and facts presented to them. At the October township meeting, the zoning administrator made his report that he had received complaints on noncompliance with the special use permit, however, his investigation indicated that all restrictions were met.

Now, I understand, the plaintiffs have filed another suit and included one or more planning commissioners in it. My fellow friends and neighbors in Norwood Township, I encourage all of us to accept the initial court decision and the subsequent planning commission findings, and for Mr. Wynkoop to restrict his mining operations in accordance to the Special Use Permit. To do otherwise, in addition to the legal expenses that we can not afford, it will build more disharmony and it will discourage, if not eliminate candidates to voluntarily serve on Norwood Township boards and committees, including yours truly.

SUPPORT JOHN ELZINGA FOR CITY COUNCIL

Editor:

Running our city is managing a sizable business with a $25 million budget. John Elzinga has had over 40 years experience successfully running his own business which he sold and is now Friske Orchards and Farm Market. In that time he has served on numerous boards, both business and nonprofit.

I have found John to be a consensus builder and always professional even if disagreeing on a subject. John realizes change can be good when done properly. There is a saying that change and development are like cholesterol. There is good and bad and it is dangerous to not know the difference. John's opponent led the charge against rebuilding the park but was in favor of the marina. In retrospect, can you imagine doing one without the other? It would be like putting new siding on your house when you have huge holes in the roof.

John and his wife, Phyllis (Williams) have spent their entire lives here. They understand the heritage, the history and what it takes to keep our community vibrant in tough economic times.

John Elzinga's business experience, positive attitude and desire to be involved make him an ideal candidate for City Council.

Please vote for John Elzinga for Third Ward City Council.

SURVEY SURPRISE

Editor:

We have just returned to Florida and received our Oct. 3 issue of the Courier. We were very surprised by the article on the preliminary appraisal of the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging Seniors Survey. I have no idea of the total scope of the Commission on Aging and can only relate our personal experience. It has been totally opposite to the survey results.

My wife, Ellen, has a moderate level of Alzheimer's disease and can no longer comprehend many things. As such, boredom is her biggest problem.

All summer long she attended the commission's activity program in East Jordan three full days a week. I cannot say enough good things about the people operating this program. They were kind, caring and innovative. We left on Oct. 5 with many hugs and good wishes.

Without these people, we never could have spent an enjoyable summer in Charlevoix.

SAD TO SEE MERTA GO

Editor:

As someone who has worked on various festivals and events in our area for many years, I am sad to see Jacqui Merta leave as Chamber director. Jacqui was always open to consider an event or activity that would drive tourism for Charlevoix. Her suggestions and input were always constructive, and made for a better event. She could be counted on to do whatever was necessary to make things a success. I hope you replace her with someone as knowledgeable and cooperative.

CARE ABOUT CLIMATE

Editor:

As the Executive Director of CARE (Conservation and Renewable Energy) Committee, the Executive Administrator for WATCH (Water and Air Team for Charlevoix), a member of the Charlevoix County Recycling Committee, an educator, a mom and an outdoor enthusiast who enjoys and recreates in our beautiful northern Michigan area with my family, I was involved directly in the written presentation to our Charlevoix City Council regarding the Mayors Climate Protection Agreement.

Of the 12 goals outlined and presented to the City Council, CARE cited eight of those goals currently being worked towards in the City of Charlevoix.

I would like to briefly address goal eight, "To increase average fuel efficiency, reduce the number of vehicles; launch an employee education program including anti-idling messages; and convert diesel vehicles to bio diesel."

As we have been told, Pat Elliott, city street superintendent, is researching the use of a fuel additive to save on gas consumption. WATCH and CARE would like to applaud these efforts and will be anxious to hear what information, plan for implementation and cost savings Pat comes up with for the city.

Dealing with the issue of anti-idling messages, WATCH began an effort 10 years ago to promote the SOS campaign (Save OUR Shoppers). We encouraged idle cars at the bridge to turn off their engines, and lessen the impact of air pollution on our downtown shoppers. We would be happy to assist in an employee education program regarding the anti-idling message and encourage the conversion of diesel vehicles to bio-diesel.

As previously stated, the Mayors Climate Protection Agreement has been adapted by over 691 mayors including our northern neighbors, Traverse City, Suttons Bay and Marquette. If we are truly going to call ourselves a "Cool City," let's be a "Cool Green City," leading the way for our other neighboring communities, showing our children we care about keeping Charlevoix Beautiful and adopting this agreement. It just makes sense economically, environmentally and (eco)logically.

I'd like to encourage the citizens of Charlevoix to contact your city council members and encourage their adoption of this agreement. Change won't happen overnight, but we can start today to keep our area healthy for our children and grandchildren. For a review of the 12 steps in the Mayors Climate Protection Agreement, visit www.seattle.gov/mayor/climate.

A 40th anniversary surprise party was held on Oct. 27 for William (Bill) Ormsby and Shirley (Pahl) Ormsby of 104 West Hurlbut St., at the Soaring Eagle Resort in Mt. Pleasant. The hosts were their children, Terry (Ellen) Ormsby, Carol (Thomas) Ochs, and Linda (James) Willis, for the private family event.

The couple was married on Nov. 1, 1947 in Buckley and they lived in the Charlevoix area for 40 years and before that lived in Traverse City. The couple has seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Bill relocated his family to Charlevoix to manage the Kroger store. He worked as manager for several other area stores. Currently he is semi-retired, working the early morning shift at the Next-door Store for over 10 years.

Shirley retired from Hoskins Manufacturing after over 20 years of employment.

City Council candidate forum is Nov. 4

A public opportunity to meet and question the candidates for Charlevoix City Council will take place at 2 p.m on Sunday, Nov. 4 in the community room at Charlevoix Public Library, 220 West Clinton St.

An election for candidates will take place on Nov. 6.

Council candidates are:

First Ward – Dennis Kusina, Mary Eveleigh, Bob Timms

Second Ward — Kim VanMeter, D.J. Way, Gabe Campbell

Third Ward — Jill Picha and John Elzinga

Each candidate will offer his or her reasons for seeking office and then answer two prepared questions.

Additional questions will come from the audience and be organized with the assistance of Charlevoix High School government students.

Orchestra to perform Nov. 3 at First Congregational

The Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra will perform a concert on Nov. 3 at First Congregational Church in Charlevoix. The orchestra is pictured above at a prior performance at the church.

The Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra will perform a concert entitled "Seasonal Differences," at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 3 the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix.

The 40-piece orchestra under the direction of Maestro Matthew Hazelwood will open with Tchaikovsky's Andante cantabile and will end with Schubert's Symphony #3 in D major.

Tchaikovsky's Andante cantabile, though composed specifically and originally for a quartet, is more often played today by a full orchestra as it will be played as the opening piece in this concert of the Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra. The final piece is Symphony #3 in D major, by Franz Schubert, another extraordinary teacher of music.

The body of the concert will feature the exciting virtuosity of violinist Paul Sonner, soloist in two of Vivaldi's violin concertos, "Autumn and Winter from the Four Seasons."

Sonner is a staff member at Interlochen Arts Academy where he mixes teaching the violin with his professional life as an artist, serving as concert master for both the Traverse Symphony Orchestra and Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra.

Tickets are $15 for adults and $8 for students. Tickets will be available at the door but advance tickets are available now at the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, located at 109 Mason St.

Notice to Voters: New Voter Identification Requirement in Effect

Due to a recent court ruling, every Michigan voter who offers to vote in the polls must comply with the requirement by showing picture identification or signing and affidavit attesting that he or she is not in possession of picture identification:

Voters with picture identification: Voters can satisfy the picture identification requirement by showing a Michigan driver's license or a Michigan personal identification card.

Voters who do not possess either document may show any of the following forms of picture identification as long as they are current:

- Driver's license or personal identification card issued by another state.
- Federal or state government-issued photo identification
- U S passport.
- Military identification card with photo.
- Student identification with photo from a high school or an accredited institution of higher education.
- Tribal identification card with photo.

Voters without picture identification: Michigan election law anticipates that not all voters will have picture identification. Voters who do not bring picture identification to the polls or do not possess picture identification can vote like any other voter by signing an affidavit.

Questions regarding the picture identification requirement can be directed to your local city or township clerk's office.

Teacher taught more than theater

Locals learned life lessons from Connie Ford

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Like the chance encounter in a Hollywood picture, she was headed through the area on her way to a new job in another city.

But, Connie Ford never made it to Boyne City. Instead, the matron of Charlevoix's performing arts programs spent the next 38 years living and teaching in the land of petunias.

"She was on her way to sign a contract in Boyne City when she drove through Charlevoix and saw the drawbridge. She went down to the central school office and went to see if they had a job opening," said Beth Sherman, Ford's daughter. "By the end of the day she had a job."

Sherman, who was inspired by her mother to become a performing arts instructor, said Ford's students were her life.

"She didn't feel it was necessary to want to be an actor or to go into the profession, she thought performing arts was something that would make you a better communicator," she said. "It was not just about teaching her students the knowledge of the class, but how people need to accept themselves for who they were."

And, judging by the outpouring of kind words from former students and friends, Ford's career will be a hard act to follow.

"She impressed me from day one with her dedication and drive for success," said former student Mike Czerkes of four years, now an OB/GYN resident in Portland, Maine. "It was truly an incredible experience, and I owe it all to her amazing direction. She instilled a sense of confidence in all of us that is difficult to put into words."

He added, "Somehow she managed to help us believe that we could get up on stage and be our best. She will be missed by so many people, but she lives on in all of her students' accomplishments."

Former student Troy Bonar said he was just a kid with low self-esteem when he first got involved in Ford's program.

"Performing arts was my only real happiness in school. It was a safe haven," Bonar said. "The life skills and the growth that she helped develop led me down a very successful path. When times were hard for me I always remembered how she would point out that we needed to share the lead, it was not always our time to be in the spotlight. This has helped significantly in my leadership skills."

Bonar said, thanks to the debate team, he is now a master at negotiations.

"My political party has nominated me to represent them in the Texas House of Representatives in the 2008 election. I can get up in front of any group of individuals and speak without hesitation," he said. "These skills I would not have if it were not from the encouragement of Mrs. Ford. I have taught martial arts for 14 years and I try to implement some of the same psychology she used on us helping us to discover ourselves and be proud of our abilities."

Bonar added, "She made all of us stars for a day so that we would shine throughout our lives. May her influence on our lives continue to touch generations."

Former student Kyle Bremmeyr said Ford helped him on both a scholastic and personal level.

"She always put her students first. If I ever had a problem she would sit down and talk with you," he said. "She was the type of person you wished could live forever."

Connie Ford (1982)

Sherman said she will miss the simple act of talking to her mother most of all.

"She was my best friend, and I think I finally realized that when I was on the airplane yesterday and wanted to call mom to find out what to do and I couldn't," she said.

Sherman recalls a time when she and her mother were in a dorm during a musical event when their almost sister-like relationship was made obvious.

"My favorite color is purple. It always has been ever since I was born and we were wrestling around on the floor over some ankle socks because she was teasing me saying, 'I want the purple ones, I want the purple ones,'" Sherman said. "Someone walked in and saw what was happening and started yelling, 'Mother-daughter fight! Mother-daughter fight!' We just started rolling on the floor laughing."

Sherman said her mother who lost her battle with breast cancer and passed away on Friday Oct. 19 at Boulder Park Terrace nursing facility at 67 probably could have survived had she had regular checkups.

"Breast cancer is so curable and so treatable that I encourage people to get checked out so this does not happen to you," she said. "Make it an open discussion because this is a discussion I never had with my mom."

A celebration of life in honor of Ford is scheduled for 10 a.m. on Saturday, Nov. 3 in the Charlevoix High School auditorium.

A group of Charlevoix Public Schools alumni is currently considering several ideas to further pay tribute to Ford.

The Connie Ford Memorial Scholarship, designed to reward gifted performing arts students, has been created. A dinner theater designed to raise funds for the scholarship is being planned for February 2008.

Donations to the scholarship should be made out to the Connie Ford Memorial Scholarship c/o Shawn Biddle, Charlevoix Public Schools, P.O. Box 67, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Lois enjoyed playing cards, swimming, fishing, golf and playing the piano.

Connie Ford: Nov. 23, 1939 - Oct. 19, 2007

Connie Ford

Connie Grace Gould Ford, 67, of Charlevoix, died Friday, Oct. 19 in Charlevoix after her battle with breast cancer.

She was born Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 23, 1939 in Colfax, Wash. She was the only child of Wayne Dallas and Constance Amy (Scott) Gould. Connie grew up in Kellogg, Idaho and moved to Midland her senior year where she graduated from Midland High School. She then graduated from Michigan State University.

Connie moved to Colorado where she taught speech and began her coaching career in forensics and many of her students competed at the state level. In 1968, she was on her way to Boyne City to sign a teaching contract and never made it there. She saw the Charlevoix bridge go up and immediately went to the school to apply for a job. She signed a contract with Charlevoix Public Schools that very day and never left. Over her 38-year career, she taught journalism, yearbook, English, speech (later to be known as performing arts) and world history and geography. Her goal was to guide her students into being better communicators and to be the best person they could. She taught them through the arts. She helped many discover themselves and be confident individuals. She truly believed that each student was our future — a future of communicators in whatever professions they choose.

She was an active member of the Michigan Interscholastic Forensics Association and was on committees for debate, theater and individual events. She made sure that the small northern schools were represented as well as the big schools. She made Charlevoix a powerhouse in forensics. There was never a year that Charlevoix didn't go to the state finals. She received the Theatre Coach of the Year award, was inducted into the Speech Coaches Hall of Fame as well as other recognitions. She has had the Charlevoix High School yearbook dedicated to her, and just recently received the eddi Award for Arts in Education. Connie also spent summers working for the Young Americans and the American Musical Theatre.

She is survived by her daughter, Elizabeth (Chuck) Sherman; son, Michael (Brenda) Ford; grandchildren, Charlie, Dallas and Ashlynn Sherman, and Brendyn Ford.

A celebration of her life will take place at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Nov. 3, in the auditorium at Charlevoix High School. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Connie Ford Performing Arts Scholarship at Charlevoix High School, attention: Shaun Biddle, 05200 Marion Center Rd., Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Sally Bennett: Aug. 13, 1930 - Oct. 27, 2007

Sally A. Bennett, 77, of Charlevoix, died Saturday, Oct. 27 at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

She was born Aug. 13, 1930, in Charlevoix, to Samuel A. and Eva (Davy) King. Sally graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1949. She worked in banking, having begun her career in Charlevoix. On March 21, 1953, she married Alvin B. Bennett of Charlevoix and he preceded her in death on Aug. 5, 1983. She was a member of the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix.

Sally was a loving mother, grandmother and devoted wife, and is survived by her sons, Tom Bennett, Lee Bennett and Evan Bennett, all of Charlevoix, Lyle (Charman) Bennett of Oak Ridge, Tenn., Chris (Barbara) Bennett of Topsham, Maine; grandchildren, Sydney Bennett, Stephanie Bennett Pridemore, Robert Bennett; brother, Lyle (Marilyn) King of Charlevoix; sister, Janet Hardy of Colorado Springs, Colo. Sally's brother, Robert King also preceded her in death.

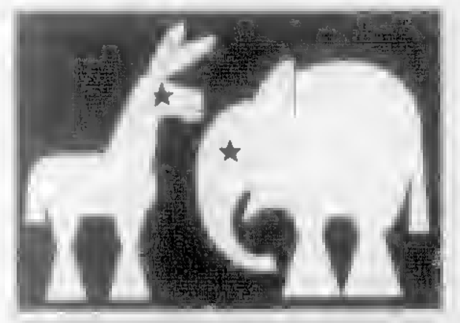
Two file as write-ins for City Council seats



ELECTION 2007

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Gabe Campbell

Bob Timms

Two men who said they planned a hiatus from politics have thrown their hats in the ring for Charlevoix City Council seats.

Former Second Ward councilman Gabe Campbell and current First Ward councilman Bob Timms filed to run as write-in candidates at the Nov. 6 general election. The deadline to file as a write-in was Oct. 26.

In November 2006 Campbell, 74, who has spent 10 years as a councilman and two as mayor, said he would end his political career after losing by nine votes to newcomer on the political scene, Greg Stevens.

"I was content where I was, but I go to the meetings anyway," Campbell said. "And I had people approach me and ask that I run. They weren't happy with their choices."

Second Ward candidates whose names will appear on the ballot are Douglas "D.J." Way Jr. and Kim VanMeter.

"I like both candidates running in the Second Ward. I worked with Kim (VanMeter) on the Board of Review and D.J. (Way) has taken an interest. I have nothing personal against either one of them," he added.

In May, Timms who is currently ending his second consecutive term, announced he didn't plan to run for reelection telling the Courier, "I've been on 23 years off and on. I think I'll let it slide this time. I'll let someone else try it."

He said his write-in campaign is more of a political statement than a run for office.

"I'm not really looking to run. What it is, is the legislature in all their wisdom requires write-ins to sign up. I think everyone should sign up for write-in to show the legislature this is baloney. At one time you could write anyone's name in and if there were enough you got the seat. You shouldn't have to file to run as a write-in. It's bull crap. I feel it's ridiculous," Timms said.

Aside from the political statement he's making Timms said he takes his role as a councilman seriously and if elected would serve First Ward residents to the best of his ability.

This isn't the first time Timms has traveled the bumpy write-in road. About 10 years ago he was elected on a write-in campaign.

"It's a tough road," he said.

Timms is up against fellow First Ward candidates Mary Eveleigh and Dennis Kusina.

First Ward voters who would like to cast a ballot for Timms are instructed to write "Bob Timms" in the blank space below other candidates' names and fill in the circle beside it.

Second Ward voters who would like to cast a ballot for Campbell are instructed to write "Gabe Campbell" in the blank space below other candidates' names and fill in the circle beside it.

City clerk Carol Ochs said those who don't understand the write-in procedure should ask an election official on election day.

STORY HIGHLIGHT

Bob Timms has filed to run as a write-in for the First Ward City Council seat and Gabe Campbell has filed to run as a write-in for the Second Ward in the upcoming Nov 6 general election To vote for a write-in, voters must write the candidate's name in the blank space below other candidates' names on the ballot and fill in the circle beside it.

City Council candidates face off at Nov. 6 election

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

It's all about choices for City of Charlevoix voters at the Nov. 6 general election.

All three ward seats are contested and voters in the first and second wards will have three choices as write-in candidates have filed in both.

First Ward candidates whose names will appear on the ballot are Dennis Kusina and Mary Eveleigh. Robert Timms, who currently holds the seat, has also filed as a write-in candidate. (See related story on page 10).

Second Ward candidates whose names will appear on the ballot are Douglas (D.J.) Way Jr. and Kim VanMeter. Former Second Ward councilman Gabe Campbell has filed as a write-in candidate. (See related story on page 10). Current Second Ward councilman Gene Beer who in November 2005 unseated former councilman Bill Bellows is not running for a second term.

Vying for outgoing Third Ward council member Shirley Gibson's seat are Jill Picha and John Elzinga. Gibson, who was first elected in 2001, said her leave from council isn't a permanent one and she may run for mayor in 2008.

City clerk Carol Ochs, who was first elected in November 2004, is compensated $34,000 a year for her full-time position and is running unopposed.

FIRST WARD

Mary Eveleigh

Mary Eveleigh

Age: 54

City of Charlevoix resident since 1986.

Occupation: Bookkeeper for Eveleigh Tile and Stone

Past political experience: Member of the City of Charlevoix Zoning Board of Appeals since 2004.

What do you think is the number one issue facing the City of Charlevoix?

Eveleigh: "The park is an issue but I believe we have that under control we've been assured it will be done in May.

"I feel getting a planner hired is really important to deal with our zoning issues and planning as a whole. I see a lot of good changes going on. Our city manager is excellent. He's very in tune with what the community wants.

"And we need businesses to stay in town and that's our number one goal — that's jobs for people."

How can you as a member of City Council address that?

Eveleigh: "Being on the Zoning Board of Appeals, what I want to present to city council is my knowledge — knowing what it takes to follow the laws according to the Michigan Enabling Act. We need to be in line with our ordinances to make sure everyone is protected. Our ordinances need to be in line with state laws.

"And going green is really important too. I would support green initiatives."

Dennis Kusina

Dennis Kusina

Age: 58

City of Charlevoix resident since 1964.

Occupation: Head of Kusina Farm Bureau Insurance Agency

Past political experience: Presently on the City of Charlevoix Planning Commission, has also served on the Downtown Development Authority.

What do you think is the number one issue facing the City of Charlevoix?

Kusina: "Right now it's to get the park done and make sure that when Memorial Day rolls around next year the city is all done and looking great. It was torn up all this past summer. People knew what was going on and understood you have to go through the pains to get to the end. The summer people and boaters knew when they come back, it's supposed to be ready."

How can you as a member of City Council address that?

Kusina: "By making sure that the city manager and the people on the committee are staying on top of everything."

Robert Timms (write-in)

Age: 73

City of Charlevoix resident since 1957

Occupation: Appliance service.

Past political experience: Currently finishing his second consecutive term as a First Ward Charlevoix City Councilman and has been on and off council for the past 23 years.

What do you think the number one issue facing the City of Charlevoix is?

"Probably the budget and being able to pay for everything the people want. We were debating the other night about trash pickup. It's four times the price it was in previous years. The trash hauler was bought out by someone else. (The refuse millage will continue to cover trash pickup)."

How can you as a member of City Council address that?

"I threw it out to discontinue it (trash pickup) and people were up in arms. I wasn't saying we should but that was a possibility. We have to trim back some of the spending. It's really difficult but with parks and recreation being the big slice that it is, that's one place that can be cut back. The parks are wonderful and beautiful and people enjoy them but they cost money and we don't have any income from them."

SECOND WARD

Kim VanMeter

Kim VanMeter

Age: 42

City of Charlevoix resident since birth

Occupation: Realtor for Coldwell Banker Schmidt Realtors

Past political experience: Served on the City of Charlevoix Board of Review

VanMeter was unavailable to comment.

Douglas Way Jr. (D.J. Way)

Douglas Way Jr.

Age: 45

City of Charlevoix resident since 1994.

Occupation: Chief Financial Officer of Way Transportation

Past political experience: Way ran for the Second Ward city council seat two other times. In 2002, he lost to Karen Campbell by 10 votes and in 2000 he lost to Bill Bellows. Way is currently a member of the City of Charlevoix Planning Commission and the Northwest Academy School Board. He is a former member of the Jordan Valley Trails Council.

What do you think is the number one issue facing the City of Charlevoix?

Way: "Businesses closing and leaving downtown. People are being driven out. The economy is bad, taxes are high. Perfect examples — the coffee shop and book store. We have a few landlords that own the buildings and they are charging high rents."

How can you as a member of City Council address that?

Way: "I would like to find a way to give a tax credit to businesses that stay open 12 months out of the year. There

Gabe Campbell (write-In)

Age: 74

City of Charlevoix resident since 1967.

Occupation: Truck driver for 15 years and former employee of the Medusa Cement Plant where he worked for 20 years in production repair, labor and the electric shop.

What do you think is the number one issue facing the City of Charlevoix?

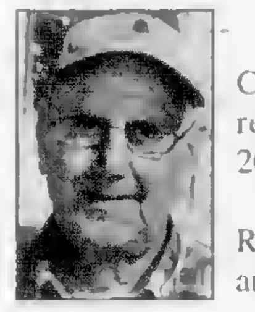
Campbell: "Living within our means. With the property being devaluated its going to be a real challenge coming up. The tax base is coming down."

How can you as a member of City Council address that?

Campbell: "I think the projects we're currently doing are good and good for the town. But we are going to have to stop and take a breather. When you have projects they should be sold on their merit and all major projects should be decided by a vote of the people."

THIRD WARD

John Elzinga



John Elzinga

Age: 75

City of Charlevoix resident since 2000

Occupation: Retired farmer and fruit grower. Owner and operator of Elzinga's Centennial Farm, a 200 acre farm market that he sold to Friske's seven years ago.

Past political experience: Spent 20 years as the Banks Township treasurer in Antrim County. He ran in a primary election for a Sixth District Charlevoix County Commissioner's seat in August 2002 against current commissioner Shirley Roloff and Richard Gillespie, a former commissioner. He took 141 votes, Roloff took 286 and Gillespie took 276. Treasurer for Bay Winds Federal Credit Union Board of Directors.

What do you think is the number one issue facing the City of Charlevoix?

Elzinga: "Planned growth for the city. To plan it so the growth will be reasonable and there's still green space for the park and everything else. It's going to be an exciting year next year with the marina and park opening."

How can you as a member of City Council address that?

Elzinga: "Get the job done with a common sense approach so it benefits everyone in town. Things have been going smoothly lately. We are pretty well built out in town and we have to know where we're putting different buildings."

Jill Picha

Jill Picha

Age: 68

City of Charlevoix resident since birth.

How can you as a member of City Council address that?

Picha: "By encouraging council and Cool Cities to move in that direction."

Commission on Aging question's Charlevoix Senior Center's budget

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Earl Muma on behalf of the Charlevoix Senior Center Inc asked the county board of commissioners during their Wednesday, Oct. 24 meeting for $12,519.99 to amend a shortfall from his 2006-2007 budget and to accept next year's budget of over $180,000.

"Based on our contract with the County of Charlevoix, we feel that the COA should not be able to dictate the number of hours our employees work, although we have been following the county guidelines so far, how much we pay our employees, or who we can or cannot hire. They should not be trying to micro manage our center. Their main role is to oversee that we are spending the millage monies appropriately and within the law."

Though $154,670 was approved by the board of commissioners, Muma will likely ask for nearly $188,000 at the county's next Personnel/Internal Government Committee meeting at 9:30 a.m. on Nov. 7 in the commissioners' meeting room.

The senior center's 2006-2007 approved budget was $145,945.40. The shortfall Muma claims is $12,519.99.

In previous years, the senior center predominantly funded itself through grants and fundraisers and Muma said there was no way for him to know how much money the senior center would need.

"Everything was done, prior to that, on the spur of the moment," he said. "Before receiving monies from the (Commission on Aging) I had to rely on month-to-month donations."

The jump from around $145,000 to a request for nearly $190,000, is due to increases in salary for Muma (40 hours per week), a secretary/bookkeeper (25 hours per week) and a nutritionist (over 60 hours per week).

The Commission on Aging also has a staff nutritionist who Muma said he is unwilling to use because of concerns as to "the quality of meals" he would get.

"It wouldn't really be a $50,000 increase if you add the $12,519.99 shortfall. It would be somewhere around $30,000," he said. "Most of that is wages. One is a $6,000 raise in my pay — I've only been paid for the last four years I've been in the position. And, I added Tony Swann, our nutrition coordinator, at $17,000 and our bookkeeper and secretary, she jumped from $14,500 to $16,500."

Earl Muma

Muma said even if the county commissioners do not OK the budget amendment, the senior center will live on.

"We're going to go ahead and keep going the way we're going, but why should I take the seniors' money and apply it to a deficit when that should be paid out of COA funds?" Muma said.

However, according to Commission on Aging board member Margo Johnson, the Charlevoix Senior Center's budget was established through an agreement between the center and the commission.

What happened? Earl Muma director of the Charlevoix Senior Center Inc asked the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners during their Wednesday Oct 24 meeting for $12,519.99 to amend a shortfall from his 2006-2007 budget and to accept next year's budget of nearly $188,000.

What's next? Muma will likely ask for nearly $188 000 at the county's next Personnel/Internal Government Committee meeting at 9.30 a.m. on Nov. 7 in the commissioners' meeting room

"We said we'll go ahead with the increase last year, but that they (Charlevoix Senior Center) have to live within their budget, and when it's gone, it's gone," she said.

Fifth District County Commissioner Bob Drebenstedt, said he's willing to hear Muma's requests, but that an increase is in no way a done deal.

"If Earl (Muma) can show us he's this $12,000 short, we need to go back and re-negotiate his budget, but when they pounded out that budget last year he said OK and then came back a few days later saying he shouldn't have agreed to it," Drebenstedt said.

Muma said he thought he could raise the funds to cover any shortfalls in last year's budget, but was unable to. He also noted a desire to know what the operating budgets of the Boyne City and East Jordan Senior Centers.

When asked for the numbers, Johnson said they are unavailable because the centers' budgets are combined, until next year when they'll appear as separate entities on paper.

She added that the 53.3 percent budget increase requested by Charlevoix Senior Center Inc. is a not-so-subtle warning sign.

"Once it was clear they (Charlevoix Senior Center Inc.) were going to be fully funded by the taxpayers, they increased their salaries and wages significantly," she said.

Muma countered by saying the commission needs to stop boarding millage money.

Bellaire man charged in death of local motorcyclist

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

STORY HIGHLIGHT
Russell Steven Mitchell, 19, of Bellaire, was charged with driving while intoxicated causing death, a 15-year felony, for his role in the death of Charlevoix motorcyclist Eric Deane Perrine, Mitchell was arraigned on Thursday, Oct. 25 in Antrim County's 86th District Court.

What's next? Mitchell remains free on bond. His preliminary exam has been scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 20 in Antrim County District Court.

Russell Steven Mitchell, 19, the Bellaire man charged with a 15-year felony for his role in the death of Charlevoix motorcyclist Eric Deane Perrine, was arraigned on Thursday, Oct. 25 in Antrim County's 86th District Court.

According to police reports, the Aug. 18 incident occurred shortly after midnight when, heading down Derenzy Road in Kearney Township, the 31-year-old Perrine collided with Mitchell's pickup truck as Mitchell exited Eddy School Road.

Grand Traverse County Prosecuting Attorney, Alan Schneider, who was appointed to this case after Antrim County Prosecutor Charles Koop recused himself citing a possible conflict of interest as an acquaintance of the father of Mitchell, would not comment on specifics in the case, but said, "We are still investigating it."

According to Antrim County Sheriff Department records, Mitchell was given a breathalyzer test at 12:35 a.m. which registered .09 and again at 12:37 a.m. which registered .078.

Schneider said he is not aware of the presence of any other drugs in either man's system.

Perrine's autopsy report, prepared by medical examiner Dr. Stephen D. Cohle: showed a blood alcohol level of .166.

The crash was witnessed by at least three people including Bellaire Police officer William R. Drollinger, who recorded the accident via the dashboard camera in his squad car.

An investigation by Antrim County Sheriff Detective Edward P. Smith shows Perrine had been drinking at the Bellaire Bar & Restaurant in the hours prior to the crash.

However, while both men had been drinking, according to Drollinger, Perrine did not appear to have done anything to lend to the crash.

"I observed this (Perrine's) cycle turn north on Derenzy Road and observed the driver of the cycle traveling at what appeared to be normal speed," he stated. "I noticed a vehicle in the distance traveling west on (Eddy School Road) and observed this vehicle approach the intersection of Eddy School Road and Derenzy Road. It appeared the vehicle on Eddy School Road stopped. I then noticed the vehicle on Eddy School Road pull forward into the path of the motorcycle."

Mitchell remains free on bond. He faces a charge of driving while intoxicated causing death. This charge carries a possible 15-year prison sentence. His preliminary exam has been scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 20 in Antrim County District Court.

County commissioners pass $12.3 million budget

No wage increase for county employees

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney and board of commissioners' civil counsel John Jarema advises the board on a technical matter before their vote to approve the county's $12,277,470 budget for fiscal year 2007-2008. The wages of county employees were not increased due to rising health care costs except for those whose contracts were previously negotiated and some law enforcement employees whose contract is in negotiations.

Elected and appointed salary schedule for Charlevoix County employees for 2008:

Circuit judge	$45,724
District judge	$19,661
Probate judge	$139,919
Friend of the court	$50,880
County clerk	$49,414
Equalization	$52,936
Prosecuting attorney	$84,000
Register of deeds	$44,730
Treasurer	$44,422
Maintenance	$38,822
Sheriff	$55,581
Drain commissioner	$2,400
Planning director	$47,741
GIS coordinator	$45,942
Veteran's affairs	$24,403
Building official	$47,513

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners passed the $12.2 million 2007-2008 budget — an increase of 1.13 percent from last year.

According to Charlevoix County Clerk Jane Brannon, keeping the budget within reach took compromise and careful planning.

"We were able to keep the health care we have because we've had no raises this year," she said.

While the fiscal year for the county's health care begins in February, she is generally able to ballpark what the increase will be.

"Ten percent is kind of an average. Some years it's slightly higher than anticipated and some years it's lower," she said.

Brannon has previously expressed gratitude that Charlevoix County, unlike other governmental bodies in the state, has escaped layoffs and wage reductions.

Increases in the budget include a jump in the Veterans Affairs office from $39,497 in 2006-2007 to $56,354 in 2007-2008.

"The amount of people requesting payment to drive to the VA hospitals has increased," Brannon said. "In the past, they really haven't done that, but with gas so expensive, and many of these people are on limited incomes, they do need the help."

She added, "The increase in deaths of World War II veterans has also affected the numbers."

Veterans Affairs pays $300 toward funeral costs for each World War II veteran who passes.

Outlay for retirement increased from $750,000 to $815,000.

"That is a pretty hefty amount in retirement they pay for us," Brannon said.

Social Security went from $343,000 to $375,000; Contingency funds were reduced from $62,808 to $33,200 to cover shortfalls elsewhere; election monies were increased from $21,800 to $70,000 as this is a major election year.

All in all, Brannon said, "A 1.13 increase is not a big increase in a $12 million budget."

A complete copy of the approved budget can be acquired from the clerk's office located at 203 Antrim St. in Charlevoix.

Health department chief receives Manty Distinguished Service Award

Courtesy photo

Gerry Chase (above, right), health officer for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan, recently received the Roy R. Manty Distinguished Service Award. He is pictured above with Linda Yaroch, deputy health officer, who has worked with Chase since 1977.

Gerry Chase, health officer for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan, recently received the Roy R. Manty Distinguished Service Award.

Named for his early mentor, the award is presented to an individual who exemplifies the values, dedication, and spirit that Roy Manty brought to public health. According to the Michigan Association of Local Public Health, Manty's philosophy was "helping the helpless, correcting the correctable, and assisting all people to fulfillment through service."

"Having known Roy Manty personally, this award is a great honor for me," Chase said.

Over 30 years ago, Chase came to northern Michigan for what was supposed to be a temporary position. He had been working in the Michigan Department of Civil Service, assessing local health department organizational structures across the state with a man named Roy Manty from the state public health department. Manty encouraged him to take a two-year position leading the district health department for Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties.

Chase took the job, moved his young family to Charlevoix, and except for a one-year leave of absence to earn a master of public health degree at the University of Michigan, has been at the helm of the health department ever since.

"We are so proud of Gerry," said Linda Yaroch, deputy health officer, who has worked with Chase since 1977. "He really deserves recognition for all of the good work he's done — not just in our four counties, but for public health across the state. Early on, in his work with Roy Manty, he literally laid the foundation for public health in Michigan. Since those days, he's been a key participant in preventing disease and promoting health, particularly access to health care. These public health initiatives save both dollars and unnecessary illness and pain.

He's implemented and evaluated programs for maternal and child health, adolescent health, communicable disease prevention, and home care and hospice. With our board of health and county boards of commissioners, he's developed regulations to assure safe food and water supplies and to protect lakes and streams from septic waste. He just keeps working at public health problems."

Colleagues who nominated Chase noted his accomplishments in improving access to preventive, medical, and dental care and lauded his efforts spearheading a workplace tobacco regulation, leading sanitary code revisions, and advocating for environmental protection at Bay Harbor in Petoskey, Wicks TCE plume in Antrim County, and Tar Lake EPA Superfund site in Mancelona.

Rayder volleyball heads into districts flawless in conference

BY ANDY SNEDDON
PETOSKEY NEWS-REVIEW
SPORTS EDITOR

> "One of our goals was to be undefeated in the league and we accomplished that goal. The other team goal is to win districts."
> Liz Grunch
> HEAD COACH CHARLEVOIX HIGH SCHOOL VOLLEYBALL

Charlevoix repeated the right kind of history.

Now, it wants to change a trend.

The Rayder volleyball team topped Harbor Springs and Grayling last week to complete its second straight perfect Lake Michigan Conference season.

Charlevoix finished 14-0 in the league, and is riding a 35-match win streak dating to the 2005-06 season. It was the Rayders' four league championship in five years under seventh-year coach Liz Grunch.

"One of our goals was to he undefeated in the league and we accomplished that goal," Grunch said. "The other team goal is to win districts."

And that hrings us to the trend part of the equation. In order to win the district, the Rayders will probably have to beat Suttons Bay, and the Norse have been a thorn in their side this year, and in the recent past.

The Rayders' Class C district is Saturday, Nov. 3, at Maple City Glen Lake High School.

Charlevoix is 1-6-1 against Suttons Bay this season. The Rayders are 39-7-8 overall, so all hut one of their losses have come to the Norse.

"Most of the games we've played with them, we've lost by two or three points," Grunch said. "They've been hattles every time. I think we're at the point where we know we can beat them ... it keeps fueling the fire."

Grunch isn't looking past anybody — "Anything can happen in districts," she said — hut if all goes according to Hoyle, the Rayders and Norse should end up in the final. Charlevoix opens with the host Lakers, then would play East Jordan in a semifinal match. Suttons Bay opens with Traverse City St. Francis, when would play Mancelona in a semi.

The Rayders and Norse have a history, not only in the 2007 season, hut in district tournaments. Charlevoix beat Suttons Bay to win its last district title, in 2004, and in the ensuing two years, lost to the Norse in district title matches.

Three times this season, the teams have met in a tournament championship match, and the Norse have won twice.

"So it's our turn now," Grunch said.

Charlevoix closed its regular season last week hy sweeping hoth Grayling and Harbor at Harbor Springs. The Rayders downed the Vikings, 25-11, 25-3, 25-16; and beat Harbor, 25-10, 25-19, 25-18.

Lauren Mielke had eight aces and 13 digs for Charlevoix in the two matches, and served 21 consecutive points in the game-two victory over Grayling.

Also for the Rayders, Murphy Gillespie finished the night with 25 kills and 92 percent in serve reception. Desi Faust added 24 kills, eight digs and three aces; Tammy Potter had 14 kills, three aces; Michelle Burke had 13 digs; and Shauna Speneley added six kills.

Setter Aubrey Way finished with 60 assists in the two matches, and enters the district tournament with 1,110 on the season, believed to be a school record.

Gillespie has been Charlevoix's most productive offensive player this season with 491 kills and a .409 kill percentage. Faust had 395 kills and a team-high 80 aces, and Potter has compiled 61 blocks.

Charlevoix's JV team beat Grayling, 25-11, 25-22, 15-12; and lost to Harbor, 25-12, 25-17, 8-15. For the Rayders, Nikki Spiegl had eight aces, 10 digs, three kills; Bobbie Molter had five kills, three aces; Katie Mays had four kills; and Bailey Chamberlain added eight digs.

If Charlevoix wins the district, it advances to the regional at Kingsley on either Friday, Nov. 9, or Saturday, Nov. 10.

STORY HIGHLIGHT

The Rayder volleyball team topped Harbor Springs and Grayling last week to complete its second straight perfect Lake Michigan Conference season.

What's next? The Rayders' Class C district is Saturday, Nov. 3, at Maple City Glen Lake High School.

Soccer team ends season with a conference win

Matt Klooster and Brian Whitley scored the goals Monday, Oct. 22 as Charlevoix closed an 11-8-1 season with a 2-0 Lake Michigan Conference makeup victory over Kalkaska.

Boog Nitchman had an assist from the Rayders, and Colin McDonough posted the shutout in goal.

"I've been coaching for 14 years now and this is the first time now that we've had one more shot to play at home after the state tournament started, and end with a victory for the seniors," Charlevoix coach Josh Block said. "That really helps end the season on a good note."

The team lost to Grayling 6-4 in the district semi-finals on Oct. 24.

They finished second in the Lake Michigan Conference with a record of 7-4-1.

0710 IN MEMORIAM

Fallen... but not forgotten & sadly missed.

After Doug's death and throughout the year, so many people gave prayers, food, moral support, flowers, attended the Veteran's Day Services, the funeral at Arlington National Cemetery, visited his grave site, donated to charities, organizations, and the Charlevoix State Bank Children's Fund. Our family also realized we did not receive all the names of you wonderful giving people. We would like to take this opportunity to personally thank everyone who assisted us in our time of grief. Our heartfelt thanks go out to each and every one of you.

MICHIGAN DRIVER ALERT!

Insure Against the Uninsured

Many Michigan drivers believe that their "No Fault" auto policy will cover everything—no matter who is at fault. This is not entirely true.

Some losses are intended to be covered by the at-fault driver. But, what if their policy coverage limits are too low, or they drive with no insurance at all?

Not all companies offer protection in these situations, but Auto-Owners does. Let us show you how to protect yourself and your family with Uninsured and Underinsured Motorist Coverages from Auto-Owners Insurance.

City voters elect Kusina, Campbell and Picha

The story of the Nov. 6 Charlevoix City Council general election is one of close races and beating the odds.

Gabe Campbell proved you can get elected on a write-in campaign and Dennis Kusina and Jill Picha successfully edged out their competition.

At the election, 531 city voters turned out, choosing Kusina for First Ward councilman, Campbell for Second Ward councilman and Picha for Third Ward council member.

Windy cold fall weather characterized election day, when 22 percent of the city's 2,370 registered voters cast a ballot.

City clerk, Carol Ochs, who ran unopposed to retain her seat, said voting was steady throughout the day in spite of the wicked wind.

"It (turnout) probably would have been better if the weather was better," she said.

Turnout was strong in the Second Ward where Campbell pulled off a surprise win on a successful write-in campaign.

When asked to what he attributes his success, Campbell joked and said, "I don't know, it must be my charm."

Then the 74-year-old who has spent 10 years as a councilman and two as mayor got serious and said, "I just work for the people. I don't have an agenda and I think people know that."

While he may not have an agenda, he does have a to-do list and at the top is the Charlevoix Municipal Airport and the East Park project.

"I want to see the airport not run as a monopoly. I want Fresh Air (Aviation) in the same terminal as Island Airways. And I'd like to make sure there's no more interruptions in the (East) park. We can't afford that," he said.

Of the 740 Second Ward voters, 160 cast a ballot. Of those, 56 percent voted for Campbell.

Cannabis busts in Norwood

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Five Norwood residents have been arrested in connection with marijuana grow operations ranging in size from 14 to 66 plants.

"This is the best year since I've been here making cases on individuals. We've had more success based on tips," said detective-lieutenant Kenneth Mills of Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement (SANE).

Tammy and Leo Kleiber, David Farmer, Kirk Wilson and Michelle Bratcher, all of Norwood Township, are facing charges related to a major marijuana eradication effort this summer by the Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement Team (SANE) which unearthed 99 marijuana plants grown on their private properties.

"They (growers) think it's (an arrest) not something that's going to happen to them," Mills said. "Typically people won't grow on their own property. You take the risk of it easily being tied to the house. But it's easier to tend to the plants and they (growers) think it's harder to spot from the air."

Mills said of all of the Norwood Township busts on private property, the largest was on the Kleiber property located off Parsons Road where 66 plants were found. Of those, 25 plants were discovered growing in the basement and another 41 were

Severe weather

Charlevoix resident Shelley McCullough was driving down Michigan Avenue around 9 a.m. on Nov. 6 when she heard a loud "crack" and saw this large group of trees begin to fall across the road. She slammed on her brakes, barely avoiding the large pine and maple trees from falling on the roof of her van. High winds caused damage and power outages across Charlevoix County that day.

Campbell succeeds with write-in campaign

The final vote was 91 in favor of Campbell, 47 for Douglas "D.J." Way Jr. and 22 for Kim VanMeter. Campbell replaces outgoing councilman Gene Beer.

While Campbell won by a landslide, things were tight in the First and Third Wards.

Of the 827 First Ward voters, 156 cast a ballot. Of those, 47 percent voted for Kusina.

The final vote was 74 in favor of Kusina, 70 for his opponent Mary Eveleigh and 12 for write-in candidate, Bob Timms, who is currently ending his second consecutive term, and has served as a councilman on and off over the past 23 years.

Kusina said phone calls on election day urging First Ward voters to head to the polls may have edged out Eveleigh. He will have to resign from the City of Charlevoix Planning Commission to accept his council seat.

His plans during his City Council term are to, "Sit back, study, listen and observe."

"I'm not going in with any agenda to try to set the world on fire or make any major changes," he said.

In the Third Ward, Picha said persistent campaigning was the secret to her successful run against John Elzinga.

Picha said she's honored to be chosen by the voters to replace outgoing Third Ward council member Shirley Gibson.

"Shirley was wonderful. They're big shoes to fill," she said.

Picha who ran on a campaign that touted her as an "independent thinker" said she wants to see council focus on the looming realities of deregulation on the city's electrical system.

Of the 803 registered voters in the Third Ward, 215 cast a ballot, 55 percent of who favored Picha.

The vote breakdown is 119 for Picha and 93 for Elzinga.

Elzinga, 75, said he won't likely run again for City Council.

"Only time will tell," he said.

Voters also cast ballots for Ochs who was first elected in November 2004 and ran uncontested in this election. She was reelected by 444 votes.

Each of the elected council seats carries a two-year term. Council members will take office on Nov. 19. The clerk will take office Jan. 2, 2008.

The November 2008 City Council election will see First Ward councilman Lyle Gennett, Second Ward councilman Greg Stevens and Third Ward councilman Sherm Chamberlain's seats open up.

The results from this election will be reviewed by the Charlevoix County Board of Canvassers on Nov. 7 before being finalized.

SANE seizes 99 pot plants, arrests five in Norwood

SANE

outside.

"These were nice plants. And with the quantity we believe it to be a commercial operation," Mills said.

As far as quantity goes, Mills said SANE estimates about a pound of pot being gleaned from each plant.

Tammy, 44 and Leo Kleiber, 43 are being charged with one count of manufacturing marijuana, maintaining a drug house and possession of marijuana.

They were arraigned on those charges on Nov. 6 along with fellow Norwood Township resident David Farmer, 44. Mills said SANE officers seized 14 plants in pots near Farmer's residence off U.S. 31 south in Norwood Township.

Kirk Wilson, 52 and his housemate, Michelle Bratcher, 43, were also arrested in connection with SANE's marijuana eradication effort. SANE officers pulled 19 plants from their residence on Norwood Road, four of which were hanging to dry in the basement, 10 that were growing indoors and another five planted behind the home. In late October, Bratcher pleaded guilty to use of marijuana and was given nine months probation. Wilson was bound over to circuit court on charges of delivery and manufacturing of marijuana, maintaining a drug house and possession of marijuana.

Penalties for growing marijuana range from four to 15 years in prison depending on the number of plants seized. A charge for 19 plants or less is a four-year felony. A charge for 20 plants or more but less than 200 is a seven-year felony. And a charge for over 200 plants is a 15-year felony.

The final outcome for these local growers likely won't be a prison sentence.

"We rarely see people go to prison on marijuana charges. But, it's up to the judge," Mills said.

Those wanting to report narcotics activity are encouraged to call SANE at (800) 621-8651.

STORY HIGHLIGHT

Five Norwood residents have been arrested in connection with marijuana grow operations ranging in size from 14 to 66 plants. These arrests stem from a marijuana eradication effort launched by Straits Area Narcotics Enforcement (SANE) in August.

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Never one to let the untimely passing of the horse cease my pummeling, this special edition of the Crying Towel is the second in recent weeks to cover the state of this state's budget.

Of course, when I say special, I'm not talking about donning a crash helmet to finger paint kind of special, I'm talking 13 cents off per pound of yak loin, special.

All right, so maybe I've had too much coffee this morning, but that doesn't mean my most recent river of rage over the actions of our so-called public servants is any less quantifiable.

"So where are we at?" you may be asking yourself.

Well, the increase in personal income tax from 3.9 to 4.3 percent is in effect; the six-cent services tax, while now questionable whether it will pass on Dec. 1, still has a chance for implementation; more than half of the those served by the W.J. Maxey Boys Training School, a rehabilitation center for juvenile offenders, will be out of luck as 80 of 150 spots in the facility are to be eliminated; supposedly there could be an increase in per pupil funding to schools of $48 to $96, though anyone around for last year's tomfoolery knows the schools will be lucky just to escape proration; the cost of hunting and fishing licenses will likely increase, though officials are holding off on telling us by how much for now; two state police crime labs will be closed; and the DNR will be forced to close 37 state parks and recreation areas by October 2008.

And what to my wondering eyes did appear when looking over the state's final budget? Not a penny pinched from current corporate welfare giveaways, after all, they've done such a bang-up job in luring business to the Great Lakes region; not one cent removed from the public service announcement budgets, after all, what would we do without TV and radio commercials which tell us not to get fat, smoking is bad for us and placing nude pictures of ourselves online could come back to haunt us in this perennially prudish society.

As if the barely balanced budget wasn't enough to make me buggy, I came across a Lansing State Journal piece which gave the rundown on what our legislators earn: Governor Granholm — $177,000 with a $60,000 expense account; Lt. Gov. John Cherry — $123,900 with a $20,000 expense account; Supreme Court justices — $164,610; state senators and representatives — $79,650 with a $12,000 expense account; lawmakers in leadership positions earn as much as $27,000 in addition to yearly salary; Attorney General Mike Cox — $124,900; Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land — $124,900 — these figures do not include the $9,000 per person we spend for their benefits.

Michigan, one of nine states with full-time legislatures — and I use the term "full-time" loosely — had the second highest paid legislators in 2005 with average salaries of $79,650, just under California with $110,880. Wisconsin pays its public servants the least with an average of $45,569. (Source Stateline.org)

What gets me the most isn't the amount of money they earn, it's the amount of money they earn in spite of the fact that Michigan is 50th in personal income growth, 50th in employment, and 50th in employment growth. In fact, the only thing Michigan is number one in is the number of unemployed workers.

The 2004 numbers show 60 percent of families of four in Michigan earning $41,002 with single individuals averaging $21,321.

And it only gets worse from there.

Tom Clay, a former Michigan Department of Treasury official and director of state affairs for the educational organization Citizens Research Council of Michigan, said if things don't get any worse than they are now, Michigan will face an annual deficit of $6 billion.

So what does it all mean?

Every politician I ever interviewed told me, when asked why they were running for office, that they wanted to give back to the community, to Michigan. Well, I couldn't agree more. What better way to give back to the overtaxed populace then by voluntarily cutting your salary.

After all, when the master earns, on average, one-fifth to one-third of what the servant makes per year, perhaps it is time rethink the system.

I urge anyone fed up with the high levels of tax and the low levels of satisfaction to contact your royal representatives and ask them how they justify breaking the collective backs of the citizenry while living high off this dwindling hog.

Don't look to science for absolute truths

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Two weeks ago I received, unsolicited, a mailing including three items: a reprint of a paper published in the Journal of American Physicians and Surgeons, a copy of a Wall Street Journal article from January 2000 by the same authors as the previous paper, and a petition to sign and send to my national representatives in Washington urging them to ignore concerns about human caused global warming.

The reprint is described as a review of the research literature concerning the environmental consequences of increased carbon dioxide levels in the atmosphere. It is 12 pages long and includes 28 graphs and charts and a reference list of 132 books, papers, speeches and Web site listings. It details the positive effects of increased carbon dioxide in the atmosphere on tree growth, agricultural plant growth and animal diversity.

The paper concludes that, "There are no experimental data to support the hypothesis that increases in human hydrocarbon use of in atmospheric carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases are causing or can be expected to cause unfavorable changes in global temperatures, weather or landscape. There is no reason to limit human production of carbon dioxide, methane and other minor greenhouse gases as has been proposed."

Clearly the paper deserves careful reading. If nothing else, it suggests strongly that the lament of some people that the scientific establishment ignores or suppresses contrary views, is untrue.

The information in the mailing also casts important light on the nature of science and of scientific truth. Al Gore, among others, has stated that there is broad consensus in the community of climate scientists that global warming is partly caused by human activities like burning of fossil fuels, and that changes in our behavior can affect the future of the earth in positive ways. The authors of the review that I received in the mail, Arthur Robinson, Noah Robinson and Willie Soon clearly disagree with that conclusion. Both Al Gore and the Robinsons are relying on the information available about the climate of the earth and how it is changing, even though their conclusions are very different. No one is lying or attempting to deceive. Science is like that. Jacob Bronowski some years ago said that scientists are almost unique among humans in that they can consider someone wrong without concluding that they are evil. Science is like that.

Science at its best does not make value judgments, but many people, politicians and others, use science to make value judgments. We should recognize that scientists are responsible to collect accurate information and make the best effort at understanding it. We should not look to science for absolute truths, since it is totally unequipped to determine such truths.

Finally, it is historically important to know that consensus, even among scientists, is no assurance of truth. There was a time when all the best scientific minds were in consensus that the earth was a flat disc with edges. There was a time when the best minds were in consensus that the biblical account of creation of the whole earth and all its creatures in six days was the best available explanation of what we saw around us. Both those positions are at least in serious doubt today. Only the future can show whether the present consensus on human caused global warming is true. Our obligation is to read the reports of science as carefully as possible, and wait as long as possible before making any irreversible choices based on those reports. Additional accurate information is always valuable. We must not ignore any real information just because it does not coincide with our established beliefs, no matter what we believe. Science can help us make decisions, but it cannot make them for us.

The Robinsons and their conclusions are not the last word, nor are they the most accurate word. Unfortunately, people with strong beliefs often use what seems to be science to support a point of view that can be misleading.

Is global warming the result of human activity? Most probably. Will such warming cause serious problems for human life? Almost certainly. Absolute certainty based on the information of science is not possible. Get used to it!

LETTERS to the editor

THANKS FOR CARING KEVIN

Editor:

Last April, my husband had a total knee replacement. When the insurance statements began coming in, we were horrified to learn that through an error, his Medicare Advantage supplemental insurance coverage that was to start March 1, 2007, did not begin until May 1, 2007. Therefore he wasn't covered at the time of his surgery.

After months of getting the run-around from various agencies, an acquaintance suggested I contact my representative in Lansing. The day after I e-mailed Representative Kevin Elsenheimer, I received a response from him. Within one week, the effective coverage date was changed. The problem was solved.

It is gratifying to know that there is a representative in Lansing that really cares about his constituents and actually takes action for their benefit. Thank you again, Kevin.

LAWSUIT COST UPDATES

Editor:

The article on Norwood Township (entitled, "Citizen group takes Norwood mining operation back to court") published (on page 1) of the Oct. 17 edition of the Courier has generated considerable interest in the status of the lawsuits filed against the township by Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety (NTCHS).

During the regular township board meeting in September, I was asked to make available the amount that the township has spent in defending claims made by the Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety.

While the amount continues to grow, it will be reported at board meetings and become a part of the meeting minutes.

Anyone can subscribe to a monthly copy of the minutes by e-mail or request a hard copy by e-mailing me at foia_chele@yahoo.com or by telephone at (231) 547-5861.

At the October meeting, I reported that to date the lawsuits filed by the Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety have cost the township approximately $54,000.

On behalf of everyone at U.S. Coast Guard Station Charlevoix, I would like to thank everyone who helped make our First Annual Haunted "Station" a success. In addition, we would like to thank the nearly 406 people from the local community who came out to the station to support a worthy cause.

Specifically, I would like to thank Janice Harig from the Charlevoix Community Food Bank for setting me "straight" and helping us complete the project. Additionally, local business contributors all deserve a big pat on their backs for their support of the Charlevoix Community Food Bank and in their help to make this event successful.

BEAR KILL DOESN'T FIT WITH YOUTH HUNT

Editor:

Pages 18 and 19 from the Oct. 3 edition of the Charlevoix Courier include photos from this year's Michigan special youth firearm deer hunt. There is a photo included of an adult and youth "with the black bear shot during a dog run."

The harvesting of white tailed deer helps control our overpopulation of deer. What was the purpose of shooting the black bear – which would never hurt people, except to defend itself?

Can you please explain how you feel shooting this black bear, fits into the Youth Hunt's theme of "instilling in our young people a respect for animals and their habitat?"

COMMISSION ON AGING: A RECIPIENT'S VIEW

Editor:

As a rule, I try not to let money and politics influence my disposition any more than necessary. But attacks on good people who do good work really does.

I'm an individual who's benefited greatly from their wisdom and direction in my time of need. I want to personally thank Sue Bergmann, director of the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging and Marge Krchak, Medicare specialist, for their unwavering support. A special thanks to Kathy Leitner for caring so much about the elderly. Your services — including nursing home and Medicaid paperwork — is invaluable.

This recent fiasco amongst board members reeks of greed and power. An abomination by the few to access funding. $188,000.00 for the Senior Center? Is this a country club? What's wrong with having a surplus in these times of uncertainty?

Those responsible are giving the rest a black eye. Undeservedly so. Sit down and shut up.

COUNCIL SHOULD SIGN CLIMATE PROTECTION AGREEMENT

Editor:

At a recent city council meeting I listened with dismay as city council voted against a proposal to sign the Mayors Climate Protection Agreement.

The City Council and our mayor now have a chance to take a leading role by signing on the Mayors Climate Protection Agreement to make Charlevoix not just a Cool City but a Green City.

The facts and numbers are in — informed people know that our lifestyle does in fact contribute to global warming. The agreement has already been adopted by over 690 mayors. What are we waiting for? Our small but beautiful city is a trendsetter in so many ways, our trees, flowers, parks, lakes, beaches and "recycled" library. Let's also join the other enlightened communities who have made a commitment to work for a better environment.

You don't have to be big to do big things.

As a caring member of this community as well as a member of the CARE committee I'd propose two small steps we all can take to contribute to energy savings and cleaner air:

Whenever possible walk or ride a bike (your body will thank you too). A few more bike racks in town would help.

If you must take a car, please don't idle for more than a minute. Turn off the engine as you wait for the bridge or in the parking lot. You will save gas and release less carbon dioxide.

I would also suggest to the City Council to study the agreement this time and you'll see that we already comply with eight of the 12 points on the agreement. So, it's a no brainer.

Who will argue that it is a bad thing to work for a better environment? Now is the time to act. Let's be a trendsetter here as well. There is no glory in being last to sign on.

Donations requested for 'Chairity Auction'

Joan Robinson and Joyce Herbert look over this year's First Congregational Church "Chairity Auction" items. The two are co-chairing the event and recently announced they are accepting donations.

Many people believe charity begins at home. But the members of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix would like you to think charity begins with them.

The church parish will host its annual Chairity Auction on Friday, June 27. Planning for the event is currently underway and organizers are looking for donations of furniture items. The workers at the church will take the donations, bring them back to life and sell them to the highest bidder at the spring auction.

Items can be dropped off from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday at the church, located at the corner of State Street and Park Avenue in downtown Charlevoix.

Those unable to bring donations to the church may request a pickup by calling (231) 547-9122.

Daniel Riley earns Eagle Scout Award

Daniel Riley

Daniel Riley, a 16-year-old member of Charlevoix Boy Scout Troop 11, was presented the Eagle Scout Award in a formal ceremony on Oct. 14 at the First Baptist Church in Charlevoix, the location of Riley's Eagle Scout project.

Approximately 20 friends, family members and fellow Scouts attended the ceremony which began with the color guard presentation of the flags, led by Troop 11 Life Scout Casey Riley. Present on stage were Troop 11 Scout Christian Morrison and Scoutmasters Scott Stehe, Chris Snabes and Tim May. Morrison led the seminary and the Pledge of Allegiance. Scoutmaster Tim May read The Legend of Eagle Mountain and letters of congratulations by Senator Jason Allen, who is also an Eagle Scout, Senator Barack Obama, Vice-president Dick Cheney and others. Riley then gave a speech and presented troop leader Vincent Currier with a plaque of appreciation. Fellow Eagle Scouts Nicholas Cook and Trevor Currier joined Riley on stage as he received his Eagle Scout medal and the three recited the Eagle Scout Law. Riley was presented an Eagle Scout plaque and a golden pocket watch; Morrison then led the closing seminary and the color guard dismissed the flags. A reception followed the ceremony along with an informal PowerPoint slide show of Riley's project in its various stages.

To obtain the rank of Eagle Scout, a scout must earn 21 badges and 10 non-required badges and put in at least 100 hours of work toward the project. Riley's project consisted of renovating the front gardens of the First Baptist Church including installation of irrigation, extensive landscaping and creating a concrete walkway. The project took about 800 hours of work. Riley received assistance from fellow scouts and Scoutmaster Currier.

After completing all requirements, Riley received the Eagle Award certificate on June 13.

Riley is the first member of his family to receive the Eagle Scout Award and the third in his troop. Casey Riley, Daniel's brother, is also working toward receiving this prestigious honor.

In 2010, Michigan voters will have the right to decide if a constitutional convention should be called to reopen and rewrite Michigan's constitution. A distinguished group of experts experienced in Michigan government and the law has identified 63 areas for possible change, including term limits, school funding, & super-majority votes for tax and banking issues. Two leaders of the study group will be on hand to debate the topic with the audience. Tragic ending to Olympic dream

Ryan Shay (center in the Notre Dame jersey) a 28-year-old marathon runner from Central Lake tragically died on Nov. 3 during the U.S. Olympic men's marathon trials in New York City. Shay, one of the state's top distance runners and the 2003 U.S. marathon champion, collapsed about 5-and-a-half miles into the trials race in Central Park. The cause of his death is unknown. He is pictured here leading the 2001 Charlevoix Venetian Games Drenth Memorial Foot Race.

OBITUARIES

Ralph Cross: July 22, 1934 - Oct. 27, 2007

Ralph Marcus "Bruz" Cross, 73, of Charlevoix, died Saturday, Oct. 27 in Charlevoix.

He was born July 22, 1934, in South Haven, the son of Ralph E. and Alice (Beadle) Cross. He graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1952. Bruz was a commercial fisherman his entire life and had fished all over the Great Lakes. One achievement he was proud of was the 50-foot steel tugboat, the "Colleen Sue," he built with the help of his family. He also refitted the tugboat, the "Lucille" to utilize trap nets when gill nets were phased out. Bruz enjoyed being a fireman, and was a charter member of the Charlevoix Township Fire Department. In fact, he was in the community with the fire department promoting fire safety to children when he died. He has served as the fire chief and assistant fire chief.

Ralph is survived by his children, Judy Speigl of Charlevoix, Thomas Cross of Dillingham, Alaska, Gary Cross, Larry (Cathy) Cross all of Charlevoix, Colleen (Butch) Smith of Allegan; grandchildren, Tracy Gilland, Tammy Speigl, Ben and Tim Cross, Brad and Sarah Smith; brother, Charles "Billy" (Donna) Cross of Alpena; his valentine, Swanee Alden of Charlevoix, and her children, Chris, Darby and Jeff; former wife, Shirley (Gallagher) Cross of Charlevoix.

A funeral took place on Thursday, Nov. 1 at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. Pastor Dan Gilmore of the Charlevoix Church of the Nazarene officiated. Burial will take place in Brookside Cemetery in Charlevoix. Memorial contributions may be made to the Charlevoix Township Fire Department.

Alice Green: Nov. 4, 1932 - Oct. 30, 2007

Alice Joy Green, 74, of Beaver Island, died Tuesday, Oct. 30 at her home on Beaver Island.

She was born Nov. 4, 1932, on Beaver Island to Lloyd and Eva (LaFreniere) McDonough. She graduated from high school there and then from Mercy Central School of Nursing in Grand Rapids. Joy was a registered nurse and assisted island doctors with many deliveries. She owned and operated her own business, Joy Green Bakery, supplying homemade breads, pies and doughnuts to local stores and restaurants for many years. She was a member of the Beaver Island School Board, the Holy Cross Altar Society, and was chairman of the Holy Cross Cemetery.

Northwest Academy student prepares for overseas experience

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Lisa Russell

Lisa Russell of Northwest Academy will be representing the Charlevoix area on People to People's annual overseas trip scheduled for next summer.

Founded by President Dwight D. Eisenhower 51 years ago, People to People International's Web site states a goal as a group is to, "Enhance international understanding and friendship through educational, cultural and humanitarian activities involving the exchange of ideas and experiences directly among peoples of different countries and diverse cultures."

"I'm excited, I'm a little nervous, but I'm excited," Russell said. "We'll be visiting the Vatican and one of the oldest cities in France."

The 16-year-old junior will repel down a rock wall, learn how to prepare meals from various European regions, stay with a host family for approximately three days and spend the rest of the 20-day trip traveling abroad.

"People to People International is dedicated to enhancing cross-cultural communication within each community, and across communities and nations," the site further states. "Tolerance and mutual understanding are central themes. While not a partisan or political institution, People To People International supports the basic values and goals of its founder, President Dwight D. Eisenhower."

While nervous about the long flight, Russell, who hopes to study art and travel abroad after school, said she looks forward to better understanding other cultures while seeing the sites of Europe.

Russell needs $7,000 to make the trip.

To help Russell amass the dollars needed to participate in next year's trip, visit freewebs.com/lisa4ambassador or send your donation to 805 State St., Charlevoix MI, 49720 C/O Lisa Russell.

Kim lays out game plan to stay smoke free

Kim
commits to quit

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Over the past five weeks, the Courier has given readers a glimpse into the life of our 41 year-old advertising manager Kim Taylor who is taking a new prescription pill from Pfizer called Chantix.

The pill, which she started taking on Sept. 24 to quit smoking, contains no nicotine and helps reduce the urge to smoke by keeping nicotine from reaching key receptors in the brain.

This fourth and final installment of "Kim commits to quit" will focus on what she needs to do to permanently kick her pack a day habit and how she feels as a nonsmoker.

THE PROGRAM

When did you start?

Sept. 24. Quit smoking entirely on Sept. 30.

How does it work?

Kim takes two one milligram pills daily. Chantix literature recommends continuing to take the pill for 12 weeks.

How are you feeling?

"Just ducky. I've got no issues medically (light headed, nausea). It cuts the craving. It's completely gone. You don't even think about it."

Have you noticed your sense of taste or appetite have changed?

"Not necessarily. It might have but nothing jumps out at me."

How do you feel when you are in close proximity to someone smoking a cigarette?

"It doesn't bother me and doesn't trigger anything if I'm sober."

What has been the best part of this process for you?

"My husband likes to kiss me more and he comments on it."

What has been the worst part?

"I don't have any negatives on it which is really hard to believe."

What are three things you will have to do to remain a nonsmoker?

"(1) Stick with the program for at least for the next 60 days. I have it in my mind after those two months I'll probably get it (Chantix) again just to keep it in my system. Knowing my personality, the longer I can go, the better the chance is I'll succeed. (2) Not buy cigarettes and (3) try not to get myself in a position where I know I would smoke."

THE TRUTH

How many cigarettes have you smoked since Oct. 24?

"One, a 100 on Oct. 25. It lasted all night and tasted terrible every time."

What circumstances are you in when you think to yourself, "I need a cigarette?"

"Social cocktailing and stressful situations."

If you had to tell someone about the goods and bads of Chantix, what would you say?

"I haven't found a bad. I'd say, 'Do it now. It's the most amazing thing.'"

Health department offers two flu clinics this month

Public health officials are urging parents to schedule flu shots for their children.

In general, anyone who wants to reduce their chances of getting the flu can get vaccinated. However, certain people should get vaccinated each year. They are either people who are at high risk of having serious flu complications or people who live with or care for those at high risk for serious complications.

In addition to children, people who should get vaccinated each year are:

- At high risk for complications from the flu, including pregnant women, people 50 years of age and older, people of any age with certain chronic medical conditions, and people who live in nursing homes and other long-term care facilities.
- Living with or caring for those at high risk for complications from flu, including household contacts of persons at high risk for complications from the flu, household contacts and out-of-home caregivers of children less than six months of age (these children are too young to be vaccinated), and health care workers.

According to the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention, every year in the U.S., an average of 5 to 20 percent of the population gets the flu. More than 200,000 people are hospitalized from flu complications and about 36,000 people die from flu.

"The single best way to prevent the flu is to get vaccinated each year," Meyerson said. "There is plenty of vaccine available this flu season. With no vaccine shortages this year, everyone who wants a flu shot should be able to get one."

Cost for flu shots is $25. Pneumonia shots are also available for $30. Medicare and Medicaid are accepted. Appointments are required for all clinics. Call 800-432-4121 during business hours to schedule a flu shot appointment.

The following is a list of flu clinics in Charlevoix:

Nov. 12 at the Charlevoix Middle School, 108 East Garfield St.

Nov. 27 at the health department Charlevoix office, 220 West Garfield St.

For additional information about seasonal flu vaccination, contact the health department at 800-432-4121 or visit www.nwhealth.org.

Schools turn to foundations for the extras

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

STORY HIGHLIGHT

The Charlevoix Schools Foundation which was established in 1987 aims to raise funds to pay for special projects to enhance academics. Donations may be sent to P.O. Box 730, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Armed with a new name and a renewed sense of purpose, the Charlevoix Schools Foundation hopes to build their coffers to a million-plus dollars.

At the time of the 20th anniversary of the foundation's inception on Sept. 28, the foundation had approximately $150,000 to $160,000 and nearly $200,000 has been donated over those two decades.

"Our goal is to grow that amount. We haven't officially set that campaign goal, but we would like to bring the endowment to at least a million dollars," said superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Chet Janik. "People say, 'Why does a school need a foundation?' It's not that uncommon with the cuts to funding."

He added, "Private and parochial schools almost all have endowments and most colleges have endowments. With the state's cuts and reductions in resources people are looking to alternative ways of funding various programs."

There are more than 3,000 such foundations in the United States with more than 200 of those in Michigan alone.

"Schools are struggling financially. Every district, including Charlevoix, has reduced finances that has led to cuts in staff and services and it's got to the point where school supporters, community members are looking at what we can do to be proactive instead of reactive."

President of the foundation board, Pam Barnes said grants have been given for instrument purchases, multimedia projectors, courses at Camp Daggett, graphing calculators and backpacking equipment among other items.

"We all know schools in Michigan are in a very tight budget crunch such that they can barely afford the basics, much less the special projects our fund provides," Barnes said. "All gifts to the Charlevoix Schools Foundation will build the endowment and directly affect the academic life of students today and for years to come."

She added, "Every gift whether large or small, will facilitate academic success for all students."

Janik said the fundraising efforts of the foundation have been relatively low-key in the past, but that the foundation board members are in full support of a more aggressive campaign because of all the good programs for which it could be used.

"Let's say we have an endowment of a million dollars and we have conservative growth of five percent a year," he said. "We could give away $50,000 a year in grants. It could be for anything from music, to supplies, to a field trip."

Janik added that, while people are willing to give to help education, they will likely be more apt to give if they know their gift will go to a program about which they are passionate.

"The key is we are in the very beginning stages of planning," he said. "If you are a potential donor, I should be able to explain to you in just a few minutes what the options are and we are working on fine-tuning that so hopefully when people are looking at their giving options they will think about Charlevoix Public Schools."

Some of the options Janik hopes to implement are short and long-term gifts including one-time cash donations, setting up a way for people to leave a percentage of their estate in their will upon passing and even an investment fund which offers a return on a predetermined amount of money which will go to the school while the annual earnings would go to the donor.

For example, Janik said, an individual who donates $10,000 could ensure the foundation may give a $500-a-year scholarship in perpetuity.

"I know of a school down state where the foreign language program is funded completely by a foundation," he said. "The foundation board wants to maintain our high quality of education. Many people are feeling frustrated with the financial situation of education. So, we either have to make budget cuts, program reductions or generate revenue."

"We think this area has been very supportive of education and we feel this goal is achievable," he added.

The foundation reviews grant requests twice a year, in the spring and fall, and this last cycle gave nearly $11,000 to staff for various programs and supplies.

Gifts to the foundation may be sent to P.O. Box 730, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

Local jeweler's work does more than sparkle

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Local inventor and sculptor of all things bejeweled, Glenn Wachler, has gone to the dogs — or at least the whisperer of dogs.

Wachler, nationally renowned for his 18-karat gold and diamond encrusted trees customized for such high profile clients as Bob Seger and Bill Marriott of the famed hotel chain, was given the honor of presenting one of his new custom bracelets called "Life Links" to National Geographic Channel's Cesar Millan, Dog Whisperer.

"He was very moved as are most people when I make something for them," he said. "It's not your typical gift. I studied him, read his book, watched his shows and designed a bracelet specifically for him."

Wachler was recruited by Home for Life, a Minnesota charity which focuses on finding homes for dogs and cats as an alternative to having them euthanized.

"This is very different from what people normally do in the gift buying experience," he said. "Most people don't go into it thinking, 'How can I honor my wife or children?'"

Wachler's business began with his grandfather who came to America in 1922 and founded the family jewelry business.

"I worked in my father's business until I was about 25 years old," he said. "I didn't happen to love the restrictions of working with people in that setting. I have certain visions of what I want to accomplish and that wasn't always supported by my family members so I decided to go out on my own."

Wachler added that, while his parents were not against his plan to create high-end jewelry, they just didn't think there would be as big of a market as there has been.

"Living the life of an entrepreneur has good times and bad times financially, but I really believe in what I call ultimate expressions or the idea that you would take your feelings and meanings and translate them into something so profound," he said. "The gold and diamonds may catch their eye, but the meaning would overwhelm them."

Wachler likens the concept of his sculptures to the eggs Faberge once created for royalty. And, while Wachler's sculptures may go for many thousands of dollars, his bracelets can be had for less than $200 depending on the number of links and the style of bracelet.

For more information or on how to obtain an ultimate expression, visit www.ult-exp.com.

Pump system allows McSauba to open by Christmas

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT

STORY HIGHLIGHT
With two new snow guns and a new water source and pump house to feed them, the only thing Mt. McSauba needs to open fast is cold weather. Under the old system it took 800 hours of snow making to produce the base skiers need to open the slopes. With the new pump house that time will be cut in half, to 400 hours.

Kids drafting letters to Santa with requests for snow to ski at Mt. McSauba this holiday season will have their wish fulfilled.

The City of Charlevoix has invested $90,000 into a new water pump system at the ski hill to allow for advanced snowmaking. The white cinder block pump house built by McSauba employees can be seen from McSauba Road.

According to City of Charlevoix recreation director, Ike Boss, inside the pump house is a system that feeds water to the snow guns and improves water pressure. In the past, the resort has relied on a three inch waterline with two booster pumps to help create snow.

"This will quadruple our snow making capacity," he said.

Christmas 2006 was the last time Mt. McSauba will come up on the losing end of the weather war. Last year, warm, rainy weather delayed opening until mid-January.

Mt. McSauba manager, Bo Boss, who is moving into his thirty-second year as manager said with two new snow guns and a new water source and pump house to feed them, the only thing the local winter sports park needs to open fast is cold weather.

"We can guarantee skiing for Christmas without a doubt," he said.

Under the old system it took 800 hours of snow making to produce the base skiers need to open the slopes. With the new pump house that time will be cut in half, to 400 hours.

Ike and Bo said they are hoping to get a new well on line by the 2008-2009 winter season to cut snow making time to 150 hours.

Not only does the new pump system speed up the park's opening, it also reduces wear and tear on the seven gently used snow guns they bought from Nub's Nob. The goal is to purchase 12 total, adding one each year.

"With the old system we were wearing out snow guns eight times faster than we should be," Ike said.

The facility is also saving money by using an on-site well. The annual bill to pay for city water was $15,000 in 2006-2007.

Not only does the new system allow McSauba operators to do the job faster, they can also do more. This will be the first year that snow will be blown on the sledding hill where about 50 additional parking spaces have been made available.

Overall, McSauba offers six runs accommodating skiers and snowboarders of beginner to intermediate skill levels. The snowboard park is classified at the black diamond "advanced" level because of the rails, jumps and obstacles it includes and offers a deck equipped with benches, a fire pit and a sound system. The facility also encompasses 1.2 miles of lighted cross country ski trails and a sledding hill. This season will be the first that the city ice skating rink will also be located at McSauba (see related story on page). Equipment rental is available.

Mt. McSauba is owned and operated by the City of Charlevoix. It is located in North Pointe, off McSauba Road, north of the City of Charlevoix. For more information about programs, call (231) 547-3253.

City ice skating rink moves to McSauba

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

STORY HIGHLIGHT

This winter, the City of Charlevoix ice rink will move from its former location at Charlevoix Middle School to Mt. McSauba. The rink will be located on an open two acre piece of city land that adjoins the ski hill area at the base of "Suicide" a defunct ski run that's been closed for 10 years. Proposed hours of operation are from 4 to 9 p.m. weekdays, noon to 9 p.m. Saturdays; and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday. Skate rentals and lessons will be available. Admission is free.

Seasons of struggling to create a usable ice rink are expected to end this winter as the city rink moves to Mt. McSauba.

"It's the place to be," said Bo Boss, manager of Mt. McSauba. "We have a vision. This needs to be a total winter sports park. We added the sledding hill 10 or 12 years ago and this goes hand-in-hand. Bring on the ice rink."

The rink will be located on an open two acre piece of city land that adjoins the ski hill area at the base of "Suicide" a defunct ski run that's been closed for 10 years.

"There won't be interference between skating and skiing," Boss said. "And it's protected by trees on three sides from the wind. It's a fantastic place."

Workers are now developing plans to install a clay base to hold the water for the 15,000 square foot rink. A berm will also be built up along the rink's edges. Boss described it as a shallow pond, about a foot deep.

The City of Charlevoix skating rink has traditionally been located at the corner of East Carpenter and May streets on Charlevoix Middle School property. It was nonexistent last year as fluctuating temperatures made it impossible to create and keep a decent layer of ice.

In the past, creation and maintenance of the rink as well as staffing has fallen under the umbrella of the City of Charlevoix Street Department. Those responsibilities will now be passed on to the recreation department.

The McSauba snow making crew will also be in charge of ice making. The lodge will be available to skaters and porta potties as well as a warming hut will be open at the skating site. A 50 car parking lot will adjoin the rink property. The rink will be lit and is expected to be open by Christmas.

Proposed hours of operation are from 4 to 9 p.m. weekdays, noon to 9 p.m. Saturdays; and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday. Skate rentals and lessons will be available. Admission is free.

For more information, call (231) 547-3253.

Local veterans remember years of service

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

> "I always celebrate the two big days, Memorial Day and Veterans' Day. I guess it's part of our duty to carry on those memories."
> Ed Linse
> RETIRED AS SENIOR MASTER SERGEANT FROM THE AIR FORCE IN 1970

Officially established in 1919 as Armistice Day to honor those who served and fell in World War I, current commemoration of the sacrifices of America's warriors as Veterans Day began in 1954 when Congress changed the name and then President Dwight D. Eisenhower gave that holiday's first proclamation.

"In order to (e)nsure proper and widespread observance of this anniversary," Eisenhower said, "all veterans, all veterans' organizations, and the entire citizenry will wish to join hands in the common purpose."

Like his predecessor, President Woodrow Wilson, who 35 years earlier said, "To us in America, the reflections of Armistice Day will be filled with solemn pride in the heroism of those who died in the country's service and with gratitude for the victory, both because of the thing from which it has freed us and because of the opportunity it has given America to show her sympathy with peace and justice in the councils of the nations," Eisenhower understood the importance of honoring and recognizing the biggest sacrifice someone can make — to risk life and limb in mortal combat for the safety of one's home nation.

While the men who served in the so-called war to end all wars have since passed from this earth, veterans of numerous conflicts remain.

Ed Linse, who retired as a Senior Master Sgt. from the Air Force in 1970, enlisted 20 years earlier during what may have been the height of the Cold War and when the Korean conflict was getting underway and Louis McKenzie served from 1943 to 1946 in the Pacific theater during World War II.

Linse, a mobile radar mechanic and electronics expert followed a crew around the U.S. and overseas, first working with the phantom bombing runs in places such as Bay Harbor and then later in hot spots in Vietnam where his radar crew was responsible for directing F105 fighter/bombers into areas where American servicemen were under attack by North Vietnamese troops.

"I can remember we had one night there was a rush mission and it was a green beret camp that was under attack," Linse said. "The enemy was only a few hundred yards out in front of the good guys and we broke it up by hitting the target right on. It made us believe that everything we were doing over there was worthwhile."

He added, "When you get a guy coming in from the green beret camp and looking you up when he was in the area just to thank you, you know yon did your job. And that's how it was. Dropping bombs is war. If you don't kill them, they're going to kill you."

Round the clock shifts, water so chlorinated that it tasted like bleach and the only chance to shower was when it rained were just a few of the unpleasantness Linse lived through during his days in southeast Asia.

"There was good and there was bad, but it wasn't like being a ground pounder like the Marines and the Army," he said. "I don't think my life was in any kind of danger, but it was tough living in Vietnam."

McKenzie also said he saw no direct fighting, but nonetheless had some interesting experiences.

"I was a photograph technician. I developed pictures that they'd take out in the field," he said. "They set up cameras where the guns usually are on the wings and a pilot would go up and they would photograph targets."

While stationed on Guam, one of three U.S. controlled Marianas islands, McKenzie visited the islands of Tinian and Guam.

"My friend from New York and I got a flight to Tinian and Saipan and we told his friend there we wanted to see something. So, we got a hold of this vehicle and we drove over these sugar cane hills where we watched these guys loading this gigantic bomb into a B29," be said. "Now, I had never seen a bomb this big and it wasn't too long before the MPs came and run us out. We found out that night that it was the first atomic bomb dropped on Japan."

He added, "It took us three days to get back to Guam and we almost got in a terrible mess because the military calls it being AWOL (absent without leave). I had four bottles of whiskey saved up and I had to give two of them to a friend of mine to straighten things out."

While McKenzie was born and raised in Charlevoix making it natural that he stay here, Linse, who grew up in Chicago, Ill. stayed here after retirement because of the natural beauty of the place.

"It suddenly dawned on me why this place got so busy in the summer. I found a job working with the ma and pa cable outfit in the early days of cable TV and spent 27 years with them," he said. "I think I ended up with the best of everything und enjoyed the small town luxury."

Both men have lived long lives, raised families and credit their success in part to the positive experiences they had serving their country's military.

"I always celebrate the two big days, Memorial Day and Veterans' Day," Linse said. "I guess it's part of our duty to carry on those memories."

Veterans Day services are scheduled for 11 a.m. on Sunday, Nov. 11 in Veteran's Park in downtown Charlevoix. The annual Veterans' Day Dinner is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. at VFW Post 1153. The charge of $5 per person does not apply to vets.

Veterans work toward new memorial

Fast facts on the Purple Heart, Taps and more

The Purple Heart

— Did you know the Purple Heart, originally known only as the Badge of Military Merit, was inspired by George Washington in 1782 as a way to recognize soldiers wounded in combat. The Purple Heart is the oldest American military award.

— The Purple Heart was discontinued for unknown reasons for nearly 150 years until it was once again used, starting with the 200th birthday of Washington, on February 22, 1932.

— Inscribed on the back of the medal are the words, "Badge of Military Merit."

— The Purple Heart is made of enamel and bronze 1 3/8 inches wide

Taps

— Taps, a 24-note bugle call is thought to originally have been a French signal to soldiers to return to their garrison.

— The American version was born during the Civil War when Union General Daniel Adams Butterfield hummed the French tune to an aide who transcribed it into music.

— Butterfield ordered it played at the end of each day and soon the song caught on.

— Taps, which soon became the U.S. Army's official bugle call, was named "Taps" in 1874.

— By 1891, "Taps" was required music at all military funerals.

Arlington National Cemetery

— A constant vigil is held at the Tomb of the Unknowns

— The cemetery, which draws nearly four million visitors a year, is located on 612 acres of the Arlington Mansion, across the Potomac River from Washington D.C.

— Since its designation as a military personnel burial site in 1864, Arlington Cemetery has had more than 300,000 people, 230,000 veterans and their dependents, interned on its hallowed grounds.

— Beginning with soldiers who fought in the American Revolutionary war, veterans from all America's conflicts to current date have been buried at Arlington.

— Though not the largest or oldest cemetery in the United States, Arlington may be the best known.

— The first soldier buried in Arlington was in 1864

— Once a burial site for poor or unidentified soldiers, Arlington Cemetery now is restricted to those soldiers, and families of the same, who served America for 20 years or who earned special military honors.

POW/MIA flag

— The flag was created by the wife of Michael Hoff, an American officer listed as missing in action while serving in Vietnam.

— The flag was officially recognized by Congress in 1990 as the flag of prisoners of war and those missing in action.

— The law designating POW/MIA flag as the country's official symbol states, "The symbol of our Nation's concern and commitment to resolving as fully as possible the fates of Americans still prisoner, missing and unaccounted for in southeast Asia."

— When both the stars and stripes and POW/MIA flag are on one pole, the POW/MIA flag should be flown below and no larger than the United States flag.

Local restaurants participate in United Way fund-raiser

During the week of Nov. 12–18, local residents can enjoy a nice meal on the town while supporting dozens of local non-profit agencies.

Char-Em United Way is planning a "Dine the United Way" event that week. A wide range of restaurants, cafes, coffee shops and other dining establishments throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties will offer a portion of their proceeds as a donation to United Way.

"With fuel, food, and health care costs rising, with employment rates shrinking, and government support for human services slashed, the role of United Way in our community has never been greater," said event co-chair Robyn Rakoniewski. "We are excited to partner with local restaurants on the Dine the United Way promotion to help raise support for non-profit health and human service agencies in the two-county area. Our goal for this first year is to raise $2,300, of 1 percent of our campaign goal of $230,000."

Each restaurant will donate a portion of its proceeds to United Way. Some have picked a single day or days for the promotion, while others are donating the proceeds of sales of a particular type of food for the entire week.

"The response from local restaurants to help with the event has been terrific," said Julie Voci, United Way administrative/program assistant. "We hope to repeat the event next year and perhaps do it in the spring, as well. Restaurants wishing to be included in future events, should contact us."

For full details on the dates and terms of each restaurant's participation in Dine the United Way, call (231) 487-1006.

Charlevoix restaurants participating include:

Alcove Café – All meals, Nov. 12

Flap Jack Shack, Charlevoix – Lunch and dinner, Nov. 13

Whitney's, Charlevoix – All meals, all week

Dhaseleer runs to 11th place finish

Charlevoix senior Alina Dhaseleer runs to an 11th-place finish Saturday In the Division III state cross country finals at Michigan International Speedway.

STORY HIGHLIGHT
Charlevoix High School senior Alina Dhaseleer placed 11th in the Division III state cross country finals Nov. 3 at Michigan International Speedway. Charlevoix senior Nick Wimmer placed 76th and junior Alex Buday was 86th.

Charlevoix High School senior Alina Dhaseleer wrapped up an outstanding high school cross country career Saturday, Nov. 3 when she placed 11th in the Division III state finals at Michigan International Speedway.

It was Dhaseleer's fourth trip to the state finals in her prep career, and her second straight trip to the all-state podium. Last season, she finished 20th. The top 30 runners earn all-state.

Dhaseleer finished Saturday's race in a school-record 19 minutes, 2.9 seconds. It was the best finish by a Charlevoix girl since 2000.

"It was by far her best race," Charlevoix coach Mary Plude said. "It's been kind of a long season for her. She's so used to having other athletes with her on the team and we had just come to the conclusion that Alina needed to run the race she was always comfortable with, which was run an even pace and just go on."

Dhaseleer was in "80th or 90th place" early in the race, Plude said, but at the mile mark, picked it up and had moved into the top 20 by the two-mile mark. She picked off another eight runners in the final stretch.

"I just have never seen her finish that strong," Plude said. "She said it was just the most exhilarating feeling to go out that way in her senior year. That was a real thrill to send her out on such a high note."

Dhaseleer, who carries a 3.98 grade point average, is likely to again be a first-team Academic All-Stater.

In the boys' race, Charlevoix senior Nick Wimmer placed 76th and junior Alex Buday was 86th.

Ben Meyers named to All-Area Soccer team

Ben Meyers

Charlevoix's Ben Meyers was named to the 2007 All-Area Soccer Team.

The freshman midfielder was named the Rayder team's most valuable player. He scored 11 goals this season and added 18 assists.

Honorable mention went to Meyers' teammates, Scott Haselschwardt, Alex Molter and John Shea.

Harbor Health offers Nov. 8 fitness clinic for heart attack survivors

Harbor Health & Fitness Center will host a seminar to launch the first-of-its-kind fitness program designed specifically for heart attack survivors.

Heart attack patients as well as those who suffer from certain heart-related conditions, may be hesitant to exercise for fear of worsening their condition.

The "Heartfelt for Life: Strengthening Your Heart" programs offers fitness focused activities and lifestyle choices that can help those at-risk patients learn how to achieve and maintain heart health. The program was designed by a world-renowned cardiologist, Dr. Mehmet Oz, and celebrity fitness trainer Bob Greene, along with experts from Cedars-Sinai Hospital in Los Angeles.

The Heartfelt for Life seminar and fitness program will take place from 7 to 8 p.m. on Nov. 8 at the Harbor Health and Fitness Center, 110 Clinton St. in downtown Charlevoix. This free educational fitness program provides real-life routines from a person's own home or office. During the seminar, attendees will receive a free copy of the program instructional video along with a list of questions they can ask their health care provider to determine if this program is right for their individual heart-health needs. Attendees will also be provided information about the signs, symptoms and causes of heart problems. In addition, heart attack survivors can get tips to help them live a heart-healthier lifestyle.

Community Thanksgiving dinner planned

There's a seat waiting for you this Thanksgiving.

"A nice Thanksgiving dinner shouldn't be out of reach for any family," said Charlevoix resident Dennis Halverson who is helping coordinate a community Thanksgiving dinner.

In the wake of tough economic times, a group of Charlevoix residents are starting a new tradition to offer Thanksgiving dinner to the community.

During Thanksgiving 2005, Dennis and Joy Halverson were invited by Janet Potter to help cook and serve Thanksgiving dinner with Dave Behling in Emmet County. Behling had been putting on this dinner for a number of years for people in the community who were either in need of fellowship or could use a little help having a nice dinner.

This year, Potter and the Halversons decided to approach the local ministerial association to see if a similar dinner could be held in Charlevoix.

"The idea was met with a lot of excitement and interest," Dennis Halverson said.

With the support of the association, Potter and the Halversons have been working toward the Thanksgiving Day dinner.

"This year people may not have the money to drive down state to have dinner with relatives, or some people may just not want to be by themselves on this day," Joy Halverson said. "Whatever the reason, this dinner will hope to fill the needs that are out there in our community."

Behling has also been assisting.

The Charlevoix Rotary Club will be buying the turkeys and cash contributions have been offered by the Charlevoix Lion's Club and many other donors.

"It's been an overwhelming response," Dennis Halverson said.

The dinner will be served from noon to 3 p.m. on Nov. 22 at the Charlevoix Reformed Church located at Petoskey Avenue and Meech Street.

For more information, call Joy Halverson at (231) 547-4813.

On Nov. 7, a Traverse City judge stripped a special use permit from Wayne Wynkoop's (above) Norwood Limestone Mine LLC.

What happened? Traverse City Judge Thomas Power ruled the Norwood Township Planning Commission's Special Use Permit to Wayne Wynkoop's Norwood Limestone Mine LLC to be void.

What it means? Wynkoop must cease operating his limestone gravel extraction business immediately.

What's next? Though he has the opportunity to appeal the decision, Wynkoop said it's too early to tell if he will.

Judge shuts down Wayne Wynkoop's Norwood mine

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

The appearance of possible impropriety was enough for a Traverse City judge to strip a special use permit from Wayne Wynkoop's Norwood Limestone Mine LLC.

From Charlevoix County's 33rd Circuit Court, Judge Thomas Power said Wynkoop's position as Norwood Township Supervisor by law gave him the power to appoint members to various committees and boards and that, while no evidence exists showing Wynkoop made deals with those people he appointed, even the appearance of a conflict of interest was enough to void the Norwood Township Planning Commission's June decision to grant the mine an operating permit.

Power cited at least three Michigan court cases where a public official wrongly used his position to influence the decision, of a public body to which said official was involved in his decision but cautioned that he was in no way impugning those members appointed by Wynkoop.

"I do not suggest anyone engaged in impropriety," Power said. "But, you have a series of

Drowsy driver crashes on U.S. 31

At around 6 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 8, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office along with Charlevoix EMS responded to a personal injury accident on U.S. 31 near the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club.

The driver, Corey James Pingle, 36, was traveling southwest on U.S. 31 when shortly after topping the hill near Big Rock, he reportedly fell asleep at the wheel. Pingle's vehicle drifted to the right and ran off the roadway just missing the guardrail. Pingle was unable to gain control of his vehicle as it slid along the wet grassy embankment. The vehicle hit a tree on the right rear quarter panel, then spun 180 degrees and came to rest. EMS transported Pingle to Charlevoix Area Hospital to be treated for head, neck and back pain.

The crash is still under investigation.

'Appearance of impropriety' closes Norwood mine operation

NORWOOD

appointments which changed the complexion of the board."

Power pointed to the positions of three individuals, Chuck Cleland, who resigned from the Norwood Township Planning Commission; Sadie Bartosik, who was removed from her position as secretary of the Norwood Township Planning Commission for dereliction of duty; and Marion Shea-Light, whose term expired and was not re-appointed.

Bartosik maintains she was removed due to her opposition to the mine.

Powers said there was no evidence Wynkoop played a role in Cleland's resignation and said Wynkoop has the right to appoint individuals at his pleasure, but since all three were known to either have questions about the limestone quarry or opposed it, groundwork was laid for the appearance of impropriety.

"I think it goes beyond what the law allows," Power said. "Was there any impropriety (in the appointments)? Probably not. But there appears to be the possibility of impropriety."

Cleland said he was threatened by Wynkoop, but that he resigned due to distaste for how the board was conducting business.

"I told Tom Mielke to shut up at a meeting and Mr. Wynkoop called me and chewed me out for my childish behavior," Cleland said. "I apologized to him (Mielke) after the meeting, it was in the heat of an argument, but Mr. Wynkoop said any repeat of this and he would find a way to get rid of me."

Of the more than 30 people attending last week's court proceedings, the majority were happy with the verdict.

"I think justice was done," Cleland said. "On the other hand, I'm very distressed by the situation in our township. We have a perfect storm of civil dysfunction at the government level."

Norwood Township resident Kirk Wilson said he finally felt like he had a voice.

"If this would have been a private individual applying for a permit I would have had somewhere to go, but I was pretty well shut down at the township boards," he said. "If I was lucky enough to have public comment at (meetings) it was down to two or three minutes. I think it (the verdict) was a long time coming."

Wilson added, "He (Wynkoop) deceived me for the couple years before he ran for office. If he would have been honest with everybody what his intentions were I don't think he would have been township supervisor."

Wilson said he hopes the matter is over, but worries Wynkoop may follow earlier threats to sell his property to a large mining company.

Bill Gnodtke, Norwood resident and chairman of Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety, was pleased with the outcome but is concerned with claims that his group cost the township $54,000 in legal fees to fight the group.

"Some of that $54,000 was spent before we (Norwood citizens group) formed," Gnodtke said. "That number may be factual, but how much of that money was spent on the Wynkoop matter from day one?"

Gnodtke said certain procedures, such as public hearings and legal opinions would be required with any special use permit application, whether the project was opposed or not.

"I hope he (Wynkoop) can find a use for his property that is allowed within our zoning," he added.

Gnodtke said he also resents having his group's actions referred to as "frivolous" in a recent Charlevoix Courier editorial.

"Every time this matter was heard outside of the township (Norwood) we prevailed," Gnodtke said. "The people of Norwood don't want to pay their taxes and then reach into the other pocket to pay to defend themselves against the township."

While no one would go so far as to advocate a recall of the board, the consensus of those interviewed is that some township officials are not serving the citizenry as best they could.

Planning commission chair Tom Mielke said he was dismayed at the judge's decision.

"We're on the board and doing our jobs. We have a responsibility to rule on facts put before us and apply our ordinances to those facts and make decisions based on that," he said. "I don't understand how you could make a decision in a court or anywhere…based on the appearance as opposed to findings of fact."

He added, "I look forward to reading his (Power's) written opinion to better understand the findings of fact he used to make his decision."

Wynkoop declined comment except to say it's still too early to tell if he will appeal the decision.

Thanksgiving birth tradition continues

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

I've adjusted the thermostat for the third time, trying to figure out which direction Mother Nature will take. I prepare myself for the usual morning dog walk — hot coffee, warm gloves, a fuzzy hat and scarf, looking anything but elegant but at least I'll be warm.

As I round the hill and head out towards Lake Michigan my breath dances in the gale force winds. My pace quickens and I'm thinking about the warmth emanating from the fireplace that's lit for me back home. The dawn of winter is quickly approaching and the promises of the holiday that will soon be here. While taking in the beauty of the crested waves on this Great Lake and the pink sky above, I reflect about family, tradition and my favorite holiday — Thanksgiving.

Step back in time to 1949. On a chilly fall morning in late October, I came kicking and crying into the world at Women's Hospital in Detroit. It was an unplanned pregnancy. A young, vibrant, single mother made the difficult decision to give me the gift of a different life by placing me up for adoption. Thanksgiving Day I left the world I barely knew and entered a new one which included a very grateful family. Little did I know this holiday was about to take on a tradition of thankfulness for years to come.

As we gathered around the dining room table for this special holiday, my new family would pause and give thanks to the woman who gave me the opportunity to live in a home surrounded by love. Time flew by and many holidays passed. Twenty eight of them had come and gone when we would welcome another child into our lives who was due to arrive Thanksgiving Day. The birth of my own daughter gave us reason again to give thanks for life.

This holiday was destined to be one of new beginnings. As our lives continued to race by with break neck speed, my father insisted that I begin my search for the woman who gave me life and brought joy into their home. I was encouraged to find my birth mom so the family could personally thank her. The search ended successfully in the summer of 1999. After a celebratory meeting between mother and daughter, an invitation was given to join us in our traditional holiday celebrating the gift of life. New leaves were added to the well-loved, maple, dining room table to welcome all newcomers.

This growing family will come together again this year and visit the large dining room table and pause to reflect and celebrate. Twenty nine years have passed since I brought home my own bundle of joy. As nature would have it, our thoughtful daughter and her husband were told they were to become parents for the first time by Thanksgiving Day. The tradition continues. This week she blessed us not once but twice with twins. So the Thanksgiving holiday brings with it new arrivals into our family and a reason to continuously be thankful. We feel very blessed and realize it's not the number of blessings we count but how we use them that are really important.

Before peace first must come truth

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Oh to be an NSA bug under the table at the upcoming Annapolis Summit.

The idea any conference could lay groundwork for peace between Israel and Palestine seems only less absurd than a peace deal brokered by the U.S.

Years ago, when my old, Irish, train conductor friend told me America plays both ends against the middle, I was shocked. After all, I'd always been told Israel was the hapless victim of Palestinian aggression, but nagged by the Irishman's words, I tried to fill the gaps left by my public education.

I learned the land now called Palestine was inhabited by the Jews thousands of years ago before they were driven away in 135 B.C.E. only to be allowed back en masse in 1947 when the U.N. split Palestine in two.

Zionist leader and supporter of the Jewish state, David Ben-Gurion, put it best when he said, "We have taken their (Palestinians') country. We come from Israel, but 2,000 years ago, and what is that to them? They only see one thing: We have come here and stolen their country. Why should they accept that?"

Now the U.S. feigns concern for both while passing military secrets, cash (one-fifth of our foreign aid budget) and weapons to Israel, and there seems no end to this lopsided arrangement.

U.S. Senator James Inhofe explained why the U.S. should back Israel no matter what: "One of the reasons I believe the spiritual door was opened for an attack against the (U.S. on 9/11) is that the policy of our government has been to ask the Israelis…not to retaliate in a significant way against the terrorist strikes that have been launched against them."

However, the 2006 report "The Israel Lobby and U.S. Foreign Policy" by John J. Mearsheimer of the University of Chicago and Stephen Walt of Harvard University, dispels the myth of Israel as the hapless victim by stating the Israelis outgun with WMD, anyone in the region since only they possess nukes.

Though Inhofe's comments may seem outrageous to those not swept up in anti-Muslim fervor so popular in the post-9/11 world, his sentiments are customary political pablum of the mass media. Therein lies the problem.

From a July 2006 piece on Forbes.com, President George W. Bush, forgetting his microphone was on, "said that a key to defusing the Middle East crisis was for 'Hezbollah to stop doing this (expletive).'"

Whether bias or laziness, the writer omitted the following Bush comments, "But the real irony is that it is Israel that needs to be told to stop its war of aggression against the Palestinians and the Lebanese people."

Then there are headlines like the October 2005 piece by Scott Wilson, "Israel Retaliates for Suicide Bombing."

Use tanks, planes and machine guns to kill, and they call it "retaliation," but when a young man, such as the one in Charlevoix resident Rebecca Glotfelty's documentary "Such a Normal Thing," sees innocent friends shot dead in the street, and retaliates by strapping a bomb to his chest, they call it terrorism.

When Palestinians throw rocks, Israelis throw bullets.

LETTERS to the editor

BEAR HUNTING LETTER RESPONSE

Editor:

I would like to respond to Mr. Freedman's letter (entitled "Bear kill doesn't fit with youth hunt" published on page 5 of the Nov. 7 edition of the Courier) because I am the hunter in the picture he referred to.

In regards to bear hunting, the bears are managed by the Department of Natural Resources just like the deer herd. By managing the bear population we don't have a lot of bear problems with people and the animals are healthy. New Jersey where bear hunting was banned now has a multitude of bear problems. Limited numbers of licenses are issued for certain areas determined by the DNR's research and data. The success rate achieved by the lucky hunters that receive one is actually low. This information is published and given free in the bear hunting guide available at any Wal-Mart or Kmart store. There are many more bears than people think. It takes five to six years to receive a license in this area. Bear hunting is very challenging and a tradition.

As to how this pertains to the youth hunt? Also in the picture is my 13-year-old son. This was a huge day for him and my two nephews. They were able to miss a day of school and spend it with their dads. What a wonderful gift from God to spend the day with these fine young men in the great outdoors. They were able to go on a bear hunt in the morning and deer hunt in the afternoon. Hunting has taught our children to respect and manage the natural resources and wildlife. These boys are learning about the woods first hand by being there, not looking at it on television. They know what different animals eat, where they live, what role they play in the environment, how they interact, relate and depend on each other. Hunting has also taught them about safety, responsibility and self confidence. I'm proud to say they know more about the outdoors than most adults. My son was very proud that his picture was in the paper, this was a team effort where we encourage our young people to join in.

Please take the time to take a child hunting or fishing. It will be the memory of a lifetime.

DON'T DISCONTINUE PRISONER CLEANUP

Editor:

Each year Sheriff Lasater has the prisoners of the Charlevoix County Jail do fall/winter clean up in effort to assist the elderly residents of Charlevoix without incident. This service has been a huge help to many who are unable to handle the job due to health issues and aging.

I'm 75 years old now which makes most of the yard work difficult for me to do. However, I still want my home to look clean and respectable. People of age on fixed incomes have a hard time finding the money to hire help.

Recently there has been some residents requesting the program be discontinued due to the unsightly presence of prisoners in our yard or a danger to the public.

I don't believe Charlevoix County Jail houses extremely dangerous criminals who would be a threat to our residents. Most have been convicted of misdemeanors (back child support, people 18 year olds in possession of alcohol, etc.,) of which some are required to do community service anyway. If we did have a dangerous inmate, I'm sure Sheriff Lasater would not allow them to be released to participate in the cleanup.

If those who are complaining would like to volunteer their time to help the elderly, then please do so and there won't be a need for your complaining.

I personally would like to thank the sheriff for offering this service to us. I also would like him to reconsider any thought of changing the program.

Thank you sheriff Lasater for all the years you have done it.

IT'S TIME TO MOVE FORWARD

Editor:

History has proved, a group of individuals standing up for what is right, will be inevitably scrutinized and criticized — this was not more evident than in the final weeks of the Wayne Wynkoop "sinking ship" in Norwood — as the desperate and empty diatribes against the Norwood Citizens for Health and Safety rang hollow. Victory at last! The righteous have prevailed and a long two year plus battle has ended in resounding victory over a corrupt and unethical government — township supervisor, Wynkoop, the planning commission and the zoning administrator.

Unfortunately the Charlevoix Courier recently posed an editorial depicting this landmark case/battle as a "frivolous" law suit (an editorial entitled "Stop the bleeding with frivolous lawsuits," which appeared on page 4 of the Oct. 24 edition of the Courier). This editorial was both irresponsible and offensive to all those involved in meticulously, exhaustively and responsibly defending this juggernaut of governmental injustice. This case proved to be one of the least frivolous lawsuits in Charlevoix County history. Wynkoop lost every legal battle in a neutral playing field/court, even the overturning of the initial injunction was only a false victory. And in the end, Norwood representing a microcosm of all government, Judge Power's decision embodied a vital lesson for all governmental officers — there may be something left sacred — ethics, integrity and honesty can still prevail over unbridled arrogance and an "old boys" network gone bad. It's time for a clean slate in the Norwood government. Let the curtain fall on the limestone pit. It's time to move forward.

A look at war torn West Bank

WEST BANK

When Palestine kidnapped a soldier, Israel unleashed Operation Summer Rain which killed more than 450 Palestinians and nearly 50 of their children. The Israelis kill 3.4 Palestinians for every Jew lost — but you won't hear about that from your government or your major news outlets, and what do you expect from the same U.S. leaders who recently labeled the actions of a few Muslims as Islamo-Facism?

In a 2001 piece by Joel Greenberg in the New York Times about a young Arab couple and their baby who were murdered, the perpetrators are called "Jewish gunmen" and the writer seems to justify the shooting by writing, "The attack was similar to drive-by shootings by Palestinian gunmen that have killed more than two-dozen Jewish settlers since the outbreak of a Palestinian uprising last September."

How would you feel if the murder of your daughter was referred to as "similar" to murders committed by women who resemble your kid?

Notice that not only was the attack "similar" to Palestinian trespasses, the incident was the result of a "Palestinian uprising."

Kuang-Kuo Chang and Geri Zeldes noticed in their 2006 study in the Newspaper Research Journal that three of four major media outlets, New York Times, Washington Post and Los Angeles Times, are blatantly biased in favor of Israel in their coverage of the Middle East.

Until there is a sincere push for truth about Middle Eastern matters, the idea any Palestinian leader will step foot in America is as miraculous as it is pointless.

Tickets on sale now for 15th Annual Holly Daze

The 15th Annual Holly Daze Gala Celebration "Sparkle" to benefit Charlevoix Area Hospital will take place on Nov. 29 at Castle Farms in Charlevoix.

The committee is busily planning a spectacular evening to kick off the 2007 holiday season. Guests will once again be treated to free valet parking as they arrive, entering to the sounds of Tom Kaufman and will be encouraged to participate in the silent auction during cocktails. Guests will receive a special full color photograph to commemorate the evening.

The live auction will have items that include once in a lifetime experiences and other special and sparkling items for the holiday season. Participants will also have a chance to purchase special items, called "gifts of love," for patients of the hospital.

This year's event is raising money to purchase a digital mammography machine for the hospital. The cost of this technology is $400,000.

Like all aspects and application in the world of diagnostic and therapeutic imaging today, mammography is about to take the next step in it's evolution to digital — filmless creation of images of the breast for diagnosis of breast cancer.

In digital mammography, x-ray film is replaced by solid-state detectors that convert x-ray images into electronic signals (similar to the detectors found in digital cameras). The signals are used to produce images of breast tissue that can be viewed on a computer screen at the same location where the image was taken or at remote locations like a physician's office.

Although there is no evidence that this form of mammography results in better diagnosis of the disease, it does result in efficiencies for the provider and for the patient. Some patients claim quicker imaging and less discomfort during the examination.

At Charlevoix Area Hospital, the goal is to have digital mammography up and running by the end of 2008.

Holly Daze tickets are $100 per person ($60 of which is fully tax-deductible) and include cocktails and dinner. The festivities start at 5:30 p.m. on Nov. 29. Tickets are now available by calling (231) 547-8685.

Reflecting on safety

Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District Transportation Coordinator Chip Coulston guided transporter Pat Schwartz into a mirror assessment station recently. The Char-Em ISD Transportation Department falls under rules and regulations of the U.S. Department of Transportation, which includes the periodic review of mirror positioning. Transporters must be able to see 16 different cones using six different mirrors on the school bus during these assessments. The proper positioning of the school bus mirrors are an important factor in student safety during the loading and unloading process. The ISD has 31 buses and transports 182 students approximately 850,000 miles annually throughout Charlevoix, Emmet and northern Antrim counties. School Bus Safety Week was held at the end of October.

OBITUARIES

Romaine Porterfield: May 30, 1920 - Nov. 5, 2007

Romaine Porterfield

Romaine Porterfield: faithful servant, was called into her Father's loving arms on Monday, Nov. 5 at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

A beautiful, caring wife, mother, step-mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, aunt and friend, she will be sadly missed by all people and pets who knew and loved her.

She was born on May 30, 1920 in Bay City to Walter M. Pawlak and Regina (Leppek). They preceded her in death as did her only sister, Genevieve Dabrowski, brother-in-law, Irvine Dabrowski and nephew, Wally Dabrowski.

She is survived by her loving husband, Glenn, daughters Nancy Hauffe and Maureen Pobalis of Charlevoix; step-sons, Robert Porterfield of Ann Arbor, Steve Porterfield, Doug (Holly) Porterfield and step-daughter Diane Schumann, all of Bay City; grandchildren, Heather (John) Richards, Michelle (Zachary) Bordeaux-Bottenhorn, Brett Porterfield, Brandon Porterfield, Michael Schumann, Haley Porterfield and Hunter Porterfield; great-grandchildren, Anna and Emma Richards.

Glenn and Romaine were married in 1975 and retired to Charlevoix in 1997. They fell in love with the beauty of the area and the wonderful people whom they came to know well. The beautiful surroundings inspired Romaine to write poetry about her supreme Creator's handiwork in all of our lives. Her spiritual legacy lives on in those writings.

A celebration of life service will take place at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 17, at the First Congregational United Church of Christ at 101 State St. in Charlevoix. Memorial contributions may be made to the Charlevoix Food Bank, and/or the family.

Commissioners reject senior center budget increase

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

A Charlevoix Senior Center request for nearly $40,000 died in committee last Wednesday, Nov. 7.

Center director Earl Muma hoped for an allocation of $12,000 for a shortfall in the fiscal year 2006-2007 budget and an amendment to his 2007-2008 budget of $27,090 both of which would cover salaries.

"I have a problem with it being payroll," said District Two commissioner Chris Christensen. "If you said you don't have enough to cover the gas bill or you said we're going to be short on food or you said we're not going to be able to provide to seniors then I understand all day long."

Muma said if the board could OK the $27,090, bringing this year's approved budget from $158,280 to $185,370, he would take care of the $12,000 shortfall.

"I could take care of it with senior citizens fundraising money, but I don't really want to because, why should the senior citizens go out and earn money to pay off the deficit balance of a budget?" he said.

The request for salary increases breaks down as follows: Muma's salary upped by $6,000 to a total of $24,000; an inventory specialist's salary of $15,500; and an increase in the bookkeeper/secretary of $5,590.

Christensen expressed hesitation in Muma's plan to increase the aforementioned salaries and said, "The budget was adjusted once last year already by $9,000. We bumped you from $136,000 to $145,000."

Referencing last year's budget agreement, Muma said, "The direct words came from you Chris. 'You're not going to get that budget through with them wages like that,' so that's why I had to agree with you at that time. I was under pressure."

Board chair Shirley Roloff added that the county employees received not even a one-percent increase and therefore could not in good conscience approve the funding increase.

"I just can't see (a) part-time job (paying) $24,000 when we have people down here working full-time for $24,000," she said.

Muma told Roloff he works between 40 and 50 hours per week.

Christensen said though there is a substantial equity fund in the Commission on Aging's coffers, it should not be spent willy-nilly.

"I'm telling you right now," Muma said. "There's enough controversy around this town and around the county about this whole thing. If you don't get it settled down, you're going to lose that millage money."

Christensen fired back. "Mr. Muma, I don't appreciate being held hostage over the millage money. You just said that millage may fail because I'm not going to give you the raise you're requesting."

What happened?
Charlevoix Senior Center director Earl Muma requested the Charlevoix County Personnel/Internal Government Committee up his approved allotment of $158,280 for fiscal year 2007-2008 to $185,370 to cover salary increases at the center

What was decided?
The committee decided unanimously not to increase Muma's budget

What's next?
Muma said he will not appeal the committee's decision.

During an interview following the meeting, Muma clarified that he was not accusing Christensen of putting the senior millage in danger.

An option, Roloff told Muma, was to make up the $27,090 through fundraising efforts in order to supplement the desired salaries.

"I'm asking for somebody to step in and give us a hand with these wages and make it fair," Muma said. "Bring it out of that money (senior millage money) that's sitting there."

Christensen said to Muma there may be extra money in the Commission on Aging's bank account but, "We can't start spending this money...just for the sake of spending it."

Muma, who said he will not cut anyone's salary, told the Courier he will find a way to get the money.

"Rudy," a 6-year-old, 11 pound daschaund, broke one of his upper bicuspids — a tooth critical to chewing. His veternarian, Dr. Robert Pletcher of Charlevoix, recommended extracting the tooth. Rudy's owner, Dr. John Merrill, a dentist in Charlevoix, opted to place a crown on his busted bicuspid on Oct. 26. Rudy could not be happier.

Council weighs benefits of tax breaks

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

The City of Charlevoix's attempts to attract and accommodate manufacturing business using tax abatements came under fire by outgoing Third Ward council member Shirley Gibson.

At the Nov. 5 City Council meeting Gibson said the city's tax breaks to new or expanding manufacturers should be closely monitored, the process by which they are granted should be revised and fees for processing the request should be levied.

"I think tax abatements are obsolete. I think it's a revenue leak for the city," she said. "The city is built out and we have to find innovative ways to keep our tax base and our services. I think this is a lot of money yearly that the city could use."

Under an approved abatement, a business is exempt from paying 50 percent of an amount equal to the city's millage rate times the taxable value of the proposed expansion or improvement. This same formula is passed on to other taxing entities like the library, schools, county and Intermediate School District — all of whom are giving up 50 percent.

City treasurer Rick Brandi said the total annual tax revenue loss to the community as a whole from these abatements is about $130,000.

The city currently has extended 14 tax abatements to five local manufacturers that during the 2007 summer tax season resulted in the loss of $28,140.02 to the city and $49,074.24 to Charlevoix Public Schools. In winter 2007 the library lost $3,857.05 to city abatements, Charlevoix County gave up $4,246.60 and the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District missed out on $4,463.85.

Manufacturers with abatements include CPI with four, Nu-Core Inc. with two, DCL Inc. with two, Harbor Industries with five and Wojan Window and Door with one.

While Gibson feels the revenue loss outweighs the economic advantage the abatements bring to town, Brandi disagrees.

"We couldn't really eliminate these without being at a competitive disadvantage for the area or for the state right now. Unless the entire state goes along with changing Public Act 198 we would be at a disadvantage. We need a level playing field to compete for new business options," he said.

When vice-president of operations for Harbor Industries, Tim Parker was asked if his company would have done the major renovation and expansion they completed in two phases, the first done in 2000 the second in 2001, without the abatement, he said. "Probably not."

Those renovations brought about 120 new jobs to town.

"The package the state and the city put together for us was critical to us staying in the area," Parker said.

STORY HIGHLIGHT

- Charlevoix City Council is considering revisions to the process by which tax abatements are made.
- Abatements are granted to attract and accommodate manufacturing business.
- In 2006 the city's 14 abatements made to five local businesses cost the community $130,000 in lost tax dollars.

What's next? A subcommittee is being formed to discuss revisions and will bring a recommendation back to City Council

Council decided to form a subcommittee that will consider revisions to the existing abatement granting and maintenance processes.

Abatements are currently granted on a points system. Points are assigned based on the number of jobs created and/or retained, installation of an automatic fire sprinkling system, cost of construction of new facilities or renovation, beautification beyond zoning requirements and a project's energy savings.

There is a possible accumulation of up to 210 points. These points determine the number of years for which an abatement is granted — 70 points is equal to a six-year abatement; 85 points is equal to a nine-year abatement; and 110 points is equal to a 12-year abatement.

Changes that were discussed include a timeline for the company to report the number of jobs they create, targeting specific industries by giving more points to attract certain types of businesses to the community and charging a fee for processing the paperwork.

"I would like to eliminate them (tax abatements) period but I know that's not going to happen. In the meantime it should be more difficult to get a tax abatement," Gibson said.

While Gibson did not run for reelection at the Nov. 6 City Council election, she may sit on the subcommittee that will consider these revisions. She is being replaced by Jill Picha.

While Charlevoix City Council is considering amending its tax abatement policy and process, Tim Parker, vice-president of operations for Harbor Industries, said his company would likely not have done the major additions and renovations they completed in 2000 and 2001 without the tax breaks. Harbor Industries currently holds five abatements in the City of Charlevoix.

on the JOB with Joe West

Courier editor Julie Witthoeft tries her hand at candle making..

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Company profile: In 1985, Bullfrog Light Company founder Bill Stewart moved his candle factory to Charlevoix from St. Charles, a town located near Saginaw. The plant and retail store which serve candle lovers from around the globe are located off M-66 near Loeb Road.

History: Stewart started the business in 1981 after 10 years earlier helping his children with a candle making school project. In the decade between his interest being sparked and a Bullfrog candle wick being lit he perfected the formula for his company's signature top to bottom candle glow.

The factory now produces between 1,000 and 2,000 handcrafted candles a month including personalized screen printed and painted candles. Bill Stewart is the president and his wife, Betsy, is vice-president.

Name: Joe West

Age: 42

Occupation: Bullfrog Light Company candle factory plant manager and maintenance engineer of nine years. In charge of overseeing the plant's nine full-time employees and one part-timer.

Family: Wife, Jane West, who works in the office at Bullfrog; and 16-year-old daughter, Shelby Campbell

Bullfrog hours of operation: Plant hours are from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. Retail store hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. seven days a week.

What do you love about your job?

"The environment, the people and the creativity. If we need a new process, that' my job to create it. So I'm not doing the same thing every day."

If you could change one thing about your job what would it be?

"Better pay I guess. But anyone would say that."

What's a unique aspect of the job?

"I have to know all the processes here. Plus, I have to repair and maintain everything."

There are certain places I can't photograph that are off limits, what's the secret?

"The glow. We are the only candle manufacturer in the world with top to bottom glow."

Employees and visitors to Bullfrog Light Company must sign a waiver and confidentiality agreement before entering the inner sanctum.

What's the hardest part of your job?

"Disciplining people. I have a hard time doing it but I know I have to."

What is the one thing you could not do your job without?

"If we didn't have heat, no one would be able to do their job."

Reporter's experience: I expected to walk into the candle factory and watch as machines spit out perfect candles. To my surprise, what I found were local technicians carefully crafting each one.

While much of Bullfrog's candle making process is top secret, it was obvious that a great deal of care goes into making each candle. The wax is top quality, the staff is skilled and knowledgeable and anyone who has owned a Bullfrog candle knows the final product is truly remarkable.

Advertising manager Anne Golski who has worked there for 19 years, said it best.

"There's truly no other candle like it. Twenty some odd years later, every time I light a Bullfrog candle I gasp. The glow is just astounding to me. Once you light one, you're hooked," she said.

Beth Holloway shares journey of hope and faith

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

STORY HIGHLIGHT
Beth Holloway, the mother of Natalee Holloway, the Arkansas girl who went missing in Aruba two years ago recently shared the message of hope and faith in Charlevoix at Christ Episcopal Church

The disappearance and likely death of a loved one, especially a child, would be enough to push most people off the edge of despair.

But, Beth Holloway, the mother of Natalee Holloway, the Arkansas girl who went missing in Aruba two years ago, recently shared the message of hope and faith in Charlevoix at Christ Episcopal Church.

"I've seen 15,000 high school seniors and college students and delivered to them a personal safety message that can be applied whether traveling at home or abroad," Holloway said at the Nov. 8 speaking engagement. "Secondly I've been speaking at churches sharing a message of hope and faith."

She added, "I was committed to sharing the hard lessons we learned being involved in a crisis while in a foreign country and I just want to give parents the benefit of what I've learned."

Holloway recounted her tale of learning her daughter did not make her flight back to the United States in the summer of 2005 and flying there frantically to find out why.

Holloway said she found her daughter's room in order with her things present and she began searching out Natalee's friends to find out where she was last seen.

Holloway ran into many obstacles including uncooperative law enforcement officials, numerous conflicting tips on Natalee's whereabouts and dozens of explanations by suspects on where they last saw Natalee.

Holloway searched brothels, crack houses and numerous neighborhoods in search of her daughter.

"Nothing ever came of those searches but the images of that night will never fade from my mind," she said. "And in spite of all the tips, Natalee was never to be found and the panic I had been trying to suppress was beginning to take hold. I tried hard to manage it but there's really no way to describe how I felt."

She added, "Reporters would ask me all the time how do you feel and the answer was I didn't, I didn't feel anything."

Holloway said she did not eat, sleep or bathe for the first 100 hours in Aruba.

"I knew what I had to do. It was about 90 degrees at 5 a.m. I left the hotel room to find a taxi. I was in search of a place to pray," she said. "I asked the Aruban cab driver to take me to a church, to take me somewhere. I felt as if I needed to pray harder and ask God louder for an answer."

The driver took her to a small church with many white crosses.

"When I reached the first cross I just fell to my knees clutching the poster that I had of Natalee and began begging God to give her back," she said. "I got up and I made my way to the next cross and the next one and the next. At each cross I repeated the same plea. Making my way up the hillside I repeated the same plea and it was when I got to the fifth cross that I received it. The answer came in the form of complete and overwhelming peace."

She added, "At that moment, my heart began to feel what my mind couldn't comprehend and the weight that I was carrying on my left shoulder was lifted and in an instant I knew Natalee was with God."

Holloway later learned the crosses at the church were 14 in number and represented the stations of the cross which Jesus Christ is said to have traveled.

"I think hope is the most tangible reaction of one's faith," she said. "I don't have to tell you, it's easy to lose when faced with bitter tragedy. People often ask me how I can keep going on this journey to find Natalee and I tell them I simply could not do it without my faith in God through Jesus Christ."

Matt Seaman, a Charlevoix resident and attendee of Holloway's appearance said he thought it was a very inspiring presentation.

"It really inspired us all that hope is never lost and hope is always there," he said. "Hope also brings us together as unity that we can all work together as individuals. God is like our father and he watches over us."

He added, "Hope to me is almost the same as unity. I think faith plays an everyday part of my life whether at work or at home, wherever I go."

Local teens take to the ballroom dance floor

BY AUBREY WAY
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Who? Students 13-18 years old

What? Ballroom dance lessons

When? 6 p.m. on Oct 25

Where? Charlevoix Public Library

Why? To promote ballroom dancing in the younger generations

MEET THE INSTRUCTORS

Roy Tassava

He's been dancing for 20 years. Ever since he was a youngster he's enjoyed dancing, and it's carried over to his profession. Tassava is a dance instructor at Vivace School of Music and Arts in Petoskey. He feels that it's good to promote ballroom dancing.

Judy Wojcik

She's only been dancing for two years, and her interest began when she took a dancing class in college. Although it didn't stick with her after college, she still had a place for dance inside her, and when the opportunity to work along side Tassava at the dance school presented its self she took it. She feels that ballroom dancing is healthy and fun for young people.

Having a great time dancing the Waltz, junior Alicia Valler dances with 8th grader Trenton Bradley. "It was so much fun dancing and I really liked to learn how to dance both styles," Bradley said.

Enjoying each others company senior Sarah Klooster and freshman Jake Lemanski brush up on their dancing skills. "My partner and I had a great time dancing and learning new steps," Lemanski said.

MEET THE DANCERS

Students from eighth through twelfth-grade who attended the dance lessons said they were all there for one reason — to learn the right way to ballroom dance.

"I came here tonight because I wanted to learn how to dance," said Charlevoix Middle School eighth-grader, Blake Schulman. "My favorite dance was the swing dance because it was fast and hip."

Not many students get an opportunity to do fun things after school unless they are involved in sports so by offering this class students were able to do more than watch TV after school.

"This was something new to do," said Charlevoix High School senior, Sam Balasz. "It was a lot more fun than just sitting at home."

There were smiling faces during the dance class, and it seemed everyone enjoyed learning to dance.

"The class was very interesting," Charlevoix High School senior and 2007 Miss Charlevoix, Sarah Klooster, said. "It was fun to change it up and go to a dance class rather than going to the movies or something boring like that, that I do all the time."

The Waltz

"Slow, slow, quick, quick" is the pattern used during the Waltz dance. The dance is exactly how it sounds, you begin slowly and then quick steps get you moving across the dance floor. During this dance the man places his hand on the woman's back and he leads the woman through the steps. The woman places her hand in the man's and her other hand on the man's right arm just below his shoulder.

"The Waltz was really fun to learn," Klooster said. "It's cool to be able to say you know how to do that."

The Swing

This dance is much more up beat than the Waltz, and the pattern you follow goes, "1, 2, 3, 1, 2, 3, rock step." The posture is much more relaxed than the Waltz because the tempo is faster and dancers don't worry so much about their posture.

"My favorite dance was the swing dance," said eighth-grader Austen Lobenherz. "It was faster and we could move a lot better because it was so up tight."

Dating violence Web site launched check it out on the web: www.michigan.gov/datingviolence

Last week, the Michigan Domestic Violence Prevention and Treatment Board unveiled a teen dating violence Web site, www.michigan.gov/datingviolence, to help teens and young adults recognize the signs of dating violence, stalking, sexual assault and domestic violence and how to seek help for themselves or for their friends experiencing violence.

"The seeds of domestic violence often germinate at early ages as young teens experience dating relationships," said Debi Cain, director of the Michigan Domestic Violence Prevention and Treatment Board. "The more we do to educate all ages and help connect individuals with resources and programs, the more we can do to prevent all forms of violence in relationships."

The board, whose members are appointed by Gov. Jennifer Granholm, is charged with efforts to eliminate domestic violence and is housed within the Michigan Department of Human Services. It provides support and grant funding for local organizations that will be hosting individual events through the state to commemorate Domestic Violence Awareness Month (October).

The teen dating violence Web site, developed with input from teens and domestic violence service providers, serves as a companion to the educational materials released in 2006 to all Michigan public, private and alternative high schools. These materials also are available now in Spanish.

A 2005 report from the Michigan State Police Criminal Justice Information Center identified 58 intimate partner homicides and 70,056 domestic violence offenses. One in every five high school students reports being physically or sexually abused by a dating partner.

"Domestic and dating violence affects all ages and all races," said Department of Human Services director Ismael Ahmed. "It impacts every person's humanity. Our partnerships with local community organizations are critical in serving victims of domestic violence and helping to educate people about the devastating impact of abusive behavior."

The national hotline for help with domestic violence is 1-800-799-SAFE (7233).

For more information about domestic violence prevention efforts, visit www.michigan.gov/domesticviolence or www.michigan.gov/datingviolence.

Stupak fights for Michigan's water resources

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

> "We've got to address these concerns of ground water, bottling, diversion of fresh water. If you allow diversion of the Great Lakes water outside of the basin by seven miles today, that could be 70 miles tomorrow."
> — U.S. Congressman Bart Stupak (D-Menominee)

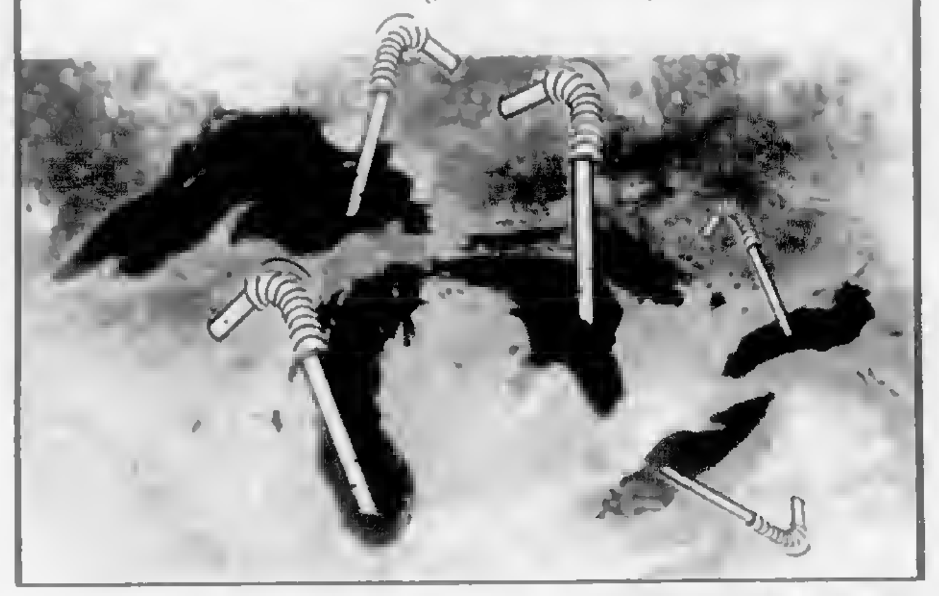

Graphic by Renée Tanner

Officials from several Great Lakes states now say water could soon become the new oil.

With hundreds of beverage bottling companies in Michigan shipping their products worldwide and recent droughts across the United States, rhetoric over who owns America's fresh water is revving up.

"States like Wisconsin are awash in water," said Democratic presidential candidate, Gov. Bill Richardson to the Las Vegas Sun in early October.

U.S. Congressman Bart Stupak (D-Menominee) was quick to send a letter to Richardson for a clarification of his remarks.

"I hope Governor Richardson did not mean to suggest he supports diverting water from the Great Lakes basin," Stupak stated in an Oct. 18 press release. "While it may make good politics in Nevada to suggest that the Great Lakes basin is awash in water, the facts belie that statement. Given the severe drought and record low water levels in our Great Lakes, diverting water from our Great Lakes is the last thing anyone should suggest."

Stupak explained in his letter to Richardson that the Great Lakes have reached their lowest levels since 1918 when records were first kept.

According to the United States Geological Survey, hundreds of cities across America are currently experiencing drought and conditions are not expected to improve anytime soon.

Companies like Nestle, which draws 70 million gallons of water a year from the Muskegon River only add to problems of drought, Stupak said during a telephone interview on Monday, Nov. 5.

"That's ridiculous, because 20 percent of Lake Michigan where the Muskegon River flows into it comes from ground water," he said. "The more water you take the less water is going into the lake."

But, Stupak said, he isn't going to stand by and allow foreign countries or southern states ruin the Great Lakes ecosystem.

"I passed a piece of legislation (H.R. 566) in Congress that says the sale or diversion of water is basically illegal in this country," he said.

In addition to the unquenchable thirst of states like Florida, Georgia and New Mexico, major tributaries such as the St. Clair River, which according to Canadian group the Georgian Bay Association, a not for profit organization founded in 1916 to protect the interests of, "22 resident associations and 4,400 families on the eastern and northern shores of Georgian Bay and the adjacent lakes and water bodies," as the Web site states, has been losing 2.5 million gallons of water a day since the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers stopped work on a project prior to completion in the 1970s, though a recent Detroit News article quotes scientists as saying this theory may not hold water.

"It's creating another lake under the riverbed. Will that cause some (water level reductions) in Lake Huron? Sure. But that doesn't count for the low water levels," Stupak said. "If we had normal precipitation, then no one would know about it or care, but northern Michigan is considered an extreme drought situation."

Trying to keep up with demand isn't easy since less than two percent of earth's water is potable.

Places like Tampa Bay, Fla., which operate the largest desalination plants in the country — where salt water is made fresh — only meet 10 percent of the demand while, according to the Detroit News, 36 states predict they will have water shortages by 2015.

"We've got to address these concerns of ground water, bottling, diversion of fresh water," Stupak said. "If you allow diversion of the Great Lakes water outside of the basin by seven miles today, that could be 70 miles tomorrow."

He added, "The Great Lakes is a unique ecosystem. We are the biggest (source) of fresh water, not only in quantity, but also in quality. We have a right to protect the natural resources in our community."

Senator Patty Birkholz (R-Saugatuck Township), the chair of the Senate Natural Resources and Environmental Affairs Committee has been working on water protection legislation as well.

"We are here today to continue an earnest and expedited debate to move the compact, water withdrawal assessment tool and accompanying legislation," she wrote in a Nov. 1 press release. "Given the well-publicized comments from New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson and others, there is a great urgency in getting our bills before the governor. We have passed measures that created the groundwater inventory, the water withdrawal conflict resolution program, the Groundwater Conservation Advisory Council, and the state's most comprehensive water withdrawal law."

Amazing Scouts

On Nov. 3, nearly 50 Charlevoix Girl Scouts attended the monthly all-troop event at Bolt's Farm. The girls enjoyed the corn maze, pumpkins, cider and donuts as part of their monthly activity that involves all levels of Girl Scouts in Charlevoix. Girls in Kindergarten through 12th-grade may still register for Girl Scouts by contacting Julie Waterman at (231) 588-2190.

Donations sought for Christmas Project

The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project committee is preparing for another holiday season.

Last year, the project committee helped 175 families including 352 children and 254 adults with a budget of approximately $6,500.

The committee's stated goal is the same as when the program started in the early 1980s, "Every child in the Charlevoix School District will have a good Christmas and receive a new article of clothing, a toy or a fun gift along with new mittens, hats and socks."

The project group has also found many needy senior citizens who live alone and would not have a good Christmas dinner without their help.

To donate, send checks made payable to the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project to our treasurer Carolyn Batdorf, 04903 Marion Center Rd., Charlevoix, MI, 49720.

PITCH IN

The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project volunteers will meet at 1 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 15 at the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix, located at U.S. 31 and Meech Street. Project chairperson Bev Boss will discuss with committee members the progress of this year's programs. Each committee head will give reports on their projects and discuss what is needed to make the project a success. Contributions or information can be made or obtained by contacting Bev Boss at (231) 547-2078, or Rosemary Horton at (231) 547-7259. Cash contributions can be sent by mail to Carolyn Batdoff at 04903 Marion Center Rd. Charlevoix, MI 49720

New partner, station updates at Studio South

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Business name? Studio South
Location? In the Secretary of State Building off Loeb Road
Hours of operation? 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturdays by appointment

An established local salon has made changes to better serve its customers.

Studio South, formerly Laural and Company Hair Design, located in the Secretary of State Building off Loeb Road, has renovated its interior and expanded its lineup of stylists to give customers flexibility in comfortable surroundings.

"It was a good time for a change. We've been here 12 years," Sladek said.

In September, the beauty shop's founder, Laural Sladek, welcomed a new business partner, Lisa Nichols, with whom she graduated from Petoskey Beauty Academy in 1995.

The two agreed to change the shop's name to Studio South. With a new name they set out to upgrade the interior including the addition of another service station and updates to those that existed.

The staff includes Sladek, Nichols and fellow stylists Michelle Mailloux, Missy Gregware and Tammy Seese. They offer family hair care, perms, facial waxing and color services including foil.

Studio South is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and Saturdays by appointment. The staff will book after hours weekday appointments.

For more information or to schedule an appointment, call (231) 547-9540.

Restaurants participate in United Way fund-raiser

During the week of Nov. 12–18, local residents can enjoy a nice meal on the town while supporting dozens of local non-profit agencies.

Char-Em United Way is planning a "Dine the United Way" event that week. A wide range of restaurants, cafes, coffee shops and other dining establishments throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties will offer a portion of their proceeds as a donation to United Way.

"With fuel, food, and health care costs rising, with employment rates shrinking, and government support for human services slashed, the role of United Way in our community has never been greater," said event co-chair Robyn Rakoniewski. "We are excited to partner with local restaurants on the Dine the United Way promotion to help raise support for non-profit health and human service agencies in the two-county area. Our goal for this first year is to raise $2,300, or 1 percent of our campaign goal of $230,000."

Each restaurant will donate a portion of its proceeds to United Way. Some have picked a single day or days for the promotion, while others are donating the proceeds of sales of a particular type of food for the entire week.

"The response from local restaurants to help with the event has been terrific," said Julie Voci, United Way administrative/program assistant. "We hope to repeat the event next year and perhaps do it in the spring, as well. Restaurants wishing to be included in future events, should contact us."

For full details on the dates and terms of each restaurant's participation in Dine the United Way, call (231) 487-1006.

Charlevoix restaurants participating include:

Alcove Café – All meals, Nov. 12

Flap Jack Shack, Charlevoix – Lunch and dinner, Nov. 13

Whitney's, Charlevoix – All meals, all week

Chamber sponsors coloring contest

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce and City of Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority are co-sponsoring a coloring contest.

The contest, open to all children ages 3 to 9. Participants color a Christmas scene available at the chamber office at 109 Mason St. for a chance to win gift certificates.

Entrants are allowed to color with any art supply and are required to submit their entry to their school teacher or to the chamber office by 3 p.m. on Nov. 16. Entries will be divided into two age groups, 3-6 and 7-9.

All the entries submitted will hang in Color Wear during the ornament making and Santa photo session from 4 to 6 p.m. prior to the community tree lighting event on Nov. 23.

For more information, call (231) 547-2101.

OPEN SEASON hunters take to the woods

Firearm deer season begins on Nov. 15

Across the state, the final countdown has begun for the nearly 600,000 hunters who will take to the field Nov. 15 in hopes of harvesting a white-tailed deer.

Michigan's 16-day regular firearm deer season runs through Nov. 30.

STATISTICS

Last year, more than 260,000 deer were harvested during the firearm season, providing over 4.3 million days of recreation and producing over 1 million pounds of venison.

According to estimates, the season generates more than $200 million of economic activity in Michigan each year.

"All indicators point to a good 2007 firearm deer season," said Rod Clute, big-game specialist for the Department of Natural Resources. "The deer herd is up slightly from 2006, with a strong fawn crop this spring."

Clute said that deer survived last year's mild winter in excellent condition, and the male fawns of 2006 are sporting their first antlers as yearlings this fall.

U.P. FORECAST

The deer population in the Upper Peninsula overall is at a level the DNR would like to maintain although deer are not evenly distributed across the U.P. with fewer deer along Lake Superior and more deer concentrated in the southern portions.

According to Bob Doepker, Western U.P. Management Unit supervisor, Menominee County still has the most deer in the region, along with the Stonington and Garden peninsulas.

"There are a limited number of both public and private land antlerless deer licenses still available in select deer management units in the U.P.," Doepker said. "We hope deer hunters will utilize those opportunities."

He also reminds hunters that private land antlerless deer licenses are not valid on Commercial Forest lands.

The whitetails' reproductive capability and their ability to adapt to a variety of habitats across the state have resulted in a Michigan deer herd estimated to be over 1.6 million animals. Nearly 600,000 hunters who will take to the field Nov. 15 in hopes of harvesting a white-tailed deer.

NORTHERN LOWER PENINSULA FORECAST

Deer also are not evenly distributed across the northern Lower Peninsula.

Typically, most deer are found on private land. In the northeast corner of the northern Lower Peninsula, the deer population is slightly above the DNR goal for the area.

In the northwestern portion of the northern Lower Peninsula, the deer herd is a little below desired levels. To boost deer numbers in this region, no public land antlerless licenses are available for some counties and fewer private land antlerless deer licenses are available in others.

The counties along the southern edge of this region have deer numbers similar to those in southern Michigan. Private land antlerless licenses are still available for many of these counties.

YOUTH OPPORTUNITIES

Deer season also is an opportunity to mentor youth on hunting.

"In 2006, legislation passed that allows 12- and 13-year olds to firearm deer hunt on private land," said Clute. "We encourage adults to make an extra effort to take a youngster deer hunting. It is the perfect opportunity to teach youth about deer management."

Clute explained there also is an apprentice hunting license available to those who have not completed a hunter safety program but would like to be introduced to hunting. This program was created in 2006 and is great not only for youth but also for adults who are not sure they would enjoy the experience.

The apprentice license allows anyone to purchase a hunting license for two license years before receiving hunter safety certification as long as a licensed hunter 21 years of age of older accompanies them in the field. The mentor must be within sight of the apprentice at all times when hunting.

AFTER THE HUNT

The DNR reminds successful deer hunters to take their deer to a DNR check station and receive a deer cooperator patch.

"At check stations, DNR staff collect important biological data, which helps us evaluate the deer season and monitor the deer herd. Also, hunters enjoy knowing the age of their deer," said Clute.

The DNR encourages deer hunters to report their hunting activity online at www.michigan.gov/dnr once they have finished hunting for the year. Hunters are asked to complete the survey even if they do not harvest a deer.

SAFETY

Hunters should pay attention to the weather forecast and be prepared for serious conditions, such as in 2005 when more than 12 inches of snow fell across the U.P. on the second day of the season. They also should consider their physical limitations and always let someone know where they are going.

Glotfelty goes behind the scenes in the West Bank

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Charlevoix resident and filmmaker Rebecca Glotfelty, who operates Real People Media, recently sat down with the Charlevoix Courier to discuss her new documentary, "Such a Normal Thing."

CC: What inspired you to travel to the Middle East, let alone document life there?

RG: "My background is in social science and international relations and I have a core interest in the Middle East. I studied the Palestinian-Israeli conflict and had two years of Arabic (language) in college. When a friend of mine asked if I'd like to go and document the trip, with all my experience, I couldn't pass up the opportunity.

CC: Public polls show Americans as more apt to be sympathetic toward Israel than Palestine, does this apply to you as well?

RG: "I had misconceptions about what was happening. I didn't understand what occupation meant, that it's a brutal, oppressive apartheid regime. I thought I knew what was going on, but it wasn't until I went there in 2003 and saw what it meant for the Palestinians to be occupied by a foreign power (Israel) dictating everything you do in your daily life whether it's going to school or the hospital or having your land confiscated or inhabited by militant settlers."

CC: What did you learn on your journey?

RG: "People have a personal bias with regard to this situation. I don't think they are deliberately lying. I think they heard the propaganda themselves and they repeat that lie, and once a lie has been told enough times, once it's said over and over again, the people who pick them up and repeat them don't know they're lying. For instance, the 750,000 Palestinians who are said to have fled (in the late 1940s after the U.N. split Palestine between the Jews and Muslims) because their religious leaders told them to and chose not to return, those are lies. There is just a lot of misinformation out there."

CC: What do you think is the biggest misconception?

RG: "I found the majority of people, maybe not a majority, but a great number of people who agree with Israel and you ask them where the West Bank is and they don't even know where it is in relation to a map. How can you say you're right and I'm wrong if you don't even know where the region is?"

CC: What is prompting the apparent misinformation?

RG: "Fear. Before I went there (West Bank) I felt myself developing prejudices against Muslim Arabs, especially after 9/11. I felt myself becoming really afraid and thinking, 'How can these people, these Arabs do this?' That is a racist thought to lump all people into one big group."

CC: The Middle East has never been a place of security and things seem only to have worsened since 9/11, were you afraid to travel in Israel and Palestine?

RG: "I said I needed to go there and see what these people are about and I had to face my prejudices, but there was danger. A guy was shot within a couple blocks from where we were. He got killed on his way home when a curfew was imposed. He died two days later."

CC: What do you want people to take away from your movie?

RG: "They (Palestinians) are just like anyone else. They want their kids to be happy, healthy, get an education. We demonize people all the time, but I don't believe there is a culture or people or country that hasn't committed these atrocities at some time; these are the byproducts of war. I want to put a human face on these people."

CC: What do you say to those so certain the Palestinians are the bad guys?

RG: "Look at how much land Israel has confiscated. Jimmy Carter compared Israeli policy toward Palestine to apartheid and I don't know how you could say it's not. If the Israelis are so afraid of the Palestinians, why are they putting up illegal settlements in the middle of Palestinian villages? And, why are we calling them settlers? We should be calling them squatters. Calling them settlers gives them legitimacy."

Teens inspired by Raven Hill energy lesson

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
EDITOR

Local middle school girls learned an important energy lesson on Nov. 7 at Raven Hill Discovery Center.

Twenty-two seventh grade students in Amy Pott's science class at Charlevoix Middle School participated in a career exploration day at the center sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Garden Club and the Michigan Energy Office through its "Made Possible by the Sun" grant program.

The majority of the attendees wrote essays to qualify for the trip and the balance were selected based on classroom performance.

Pott said the goal is to expose the girls to nontraditional career opportunities in the field of science.

They spent the afternoon working with electricians and alternative energy experts to pull wire and install battery and solar panels in the center's new alternative energy house exhibit scheduled to open in spring 2008. The 460-square-foot building is not connected to anything but the sun and will have an operational radio, fan, lights, refrigerator and microwave.

Extra energy from the sun is stored in a battery energy bank for use when sunlight isn't available.

Cheri Leach, director of Raven Hill, said the purpose of the exhibit is educational in nature and is aimed at giving those who see it ideas on ways to save energy in their own homes.

The group further explored energy by building a telegraph through which they learned about circuits and switches. Their scientific exploration ended with an introduction to the center's animals including turtles and snakes.

SALTONSTALL GRANDSTANDS

Editor:

Your headline article of Oct. 31 (entitled, "Saltonstall calls for new Commission on Aging director" which appeared on page 1) contains several incorrect or misleading quotes by Ms. (Connie) Saltonstall about the Commission on Aging.

Among them — "They've had that millage money for nearly seven years now and they haven't provided services, etc." and "They haven't done what was needed in the past..." and "The survey completed in 2000 had the same results and nothing was done to fix the problems."

She ignores the history of the county senior millage.

In 2000, senior services were extremely limited. The 2000 senior services assessment was conducted to determine whether a senior millage was justified. With the millage, the Commission on Aging director has significantly increased nutrition, homemaker, personal care and caregiver relief services. She has also added many services for our growing senior population, including adult day care, lawn care/snow removal, medication management, in-home foot care, Beaver Island services, activities and kitchens in senior centers, training and financial support for the retired senior volunteer program and senior companion, services to the chronically ill, a county-wide senior newsletter, tax preparation assistance and Alzheimer's support groups. I would not call this "doing nothing."

Expenses have increased from $330,000 to almost $900,000 and are projected to be $1,400,000 this year. The fund balance accumulated for several reasons. First, it takes time to add and build up services. Second, it was uncertain whether that first millage would be renewed. Third, Boyne Area was building a new senior center and the cost of equipping and running a new kitchen was unclear. Fourth, Charlevoix Senior Center should have participated from the beginning but did not want to comply with state and county nutrition and financial requirements until 2006.

The Commission on Aging initiated the 2007 senior services assessment specifically to address the seniors' fund balance with new and expanded programs and to determine what was needed to improve existing services. The Commission on Aging, with assistance from community stake holders, is developing a timetabled plan for aggressive but responsible spending. The county commissioners are very interested and involved with what the Commission on Aging is doing and have expressed support for development of an ambitious plan.

Ms. Saltonstall's comments about secrecy of Commission on Aging financials are incorrect. The information has always been available. Anyone can look at the complete budget at any time. She implies that the Commission on Aging is hiding the seniors' money (an irrational accusation) and has no plan for it. In fact, the Commission on Aging staff and 90 percent of the board are working collegially and diligently on this massive project despite the noisy distraction of one member who chooses to attack reputations and use the assessment as her own personal grandstand. Instead, she should be working constructively for Charlevoix County seniors and taxpayers to develop plans for moving forward.

SALTONSTALL RESPONDS

Editor:

In response to Margo Johnson's letter, I would like to clarify my position about the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging and the senior millage funds.

I have received numerous requests from citizens for help with the current Commission on Aging situation. I do not believe that nothing has been done, but I strongly believe that not enough has been done. Yes, there are many services that are offered. The senior meal program is doing very well, and meals are now cooked at all three centers. The problem with the Charlevoix Senior Center was that the Commission on Aging required them to be County employees and they could not keep their cook under that rule. It was not that they were unwilling to comply with state and county nutritional requirements. John Jarema helped the Charlevoix Senior Center by informing the County Commissioners that the Charlevoix Senior Center could receive millage money for providing senior services.

I know that while the Commission on Aging offers services, clients have been put on waiting lists and treated rudely.

The report states, "Too few homebound seniors receive services due to short staffing, poor intake process...and lack of transportation."

It also said staff needs more training and better supervision. I know that to get services can be daunting and require financial information. For example, one month when there was a lot of snow, no one used the snow removal service. That's because a senior must find the person to do the work, give the Commission on Aging financial information to see if they qualify, sign a contract, pay the person and then possibly be reimbursed. I do not think this is a senior user friendly system. Not surprisingly, no senior had a contract that month for snow removal.

I realize that all the financial information is available, but it is not always given to Commission on Aging board members.

You have to get the information from the county clerk. As a former County Commissioner, I learned how to do that. Most Commission on Aging board members just accept the information they are given, and it does not always give the full picture.

The millage was passed with the belief that the funds will be spent to provide the services. Depositing $500,000 in an investment account, the majority of the millage, three years in a row, is not what seniors expected when they approved the millage. Especially when they were told there were not enough staff people to provide the services they requested.

The Commission on Aging assessment is a perfect example of information manipulation. In the assessment survey seniors were asked "If available at low/no cost, I would pursue this type of assistance." Transportation received the highest positive response (59.6 percent). Also in the report it was stated, "Every single group and individual we spoke to thought transportation for seniors was needed and very important ... in addition to what is available from Charlevoix County Transit." Yet when the stake holders did the priority exercise, the report of all actions in order of importance listed transportation at the absolute bottom of the list, #61 and #62.

Based on that list, the Commission on Aging can say transportation is not a priority, even though it is the #1 priority of the seniors in the survey. The Charlevoix Senior Center is asking the Commission on Aging board and the County Commissioners for millage money to buy a van so that seniors can call the Charlevoix Senior Center and get transportation to medical appointments, etc. I believe the Boyne area and East Jordan centers should also each have a van. That will meet the transportation need that the survey said was most important.

I do not wish to attack reputations. I want the process to improve. Joan Blanchard is chair of the Commission on Aging and the Budget Committee. Margo Johnson is chair of senior services, personnel, audit and Charlevoix Senior Center Task Force Committees. Susan Bergmann is the Executive Director.

My concern is that I believe the Commission on Aging could have done a better job in the past, and the same leadership is still in control. What will be different? Why will they do it now when they didn't do it before? This is not a personal grandstand, it is my job as a Commission on Aging board member to represent the seniors of Charlevoix County so they receive the respect and services that they have voted for and paid taxes to support.

The annual Charlevoix Community Christmas Tree Lighting will be held in Charlevoix's downtown East Park on Friday, Nov. 23.

Beginning at 4 p.m., children may visit Santa Claus at the North Pole (Color Wear, 222 Bridge St.) and have a free photo taken with him compliments of Charlevoix Camera.

Decorate the Community Christmas Tree from 4 to 6 p.m. with handmade ornaments. Children who don't have an ornament can make one at the "North Pole" thanks to the Charlevoix Children's House and Northwestern Bank who will help children create spectacular decorations. The tree is decorated thanks to the City Electric Department crew who provides a bucket truck and places the children's ornaments where they wish on the tree.

Everyone is invited to watch the children decorate the tree and enjoy music by the Keep Charlevoix Beautiful petunia truck. Warm up with free hot cocoa compliments of Stafford's Weathervane Restaurant beginning at 5 p.m.

At 6 p.m. sharp, Santa Claus will officially light the community Christmas tree, which is located at the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets in East Park.

Courier welcomes new editor, Erica Goff

Erica Goff

A new editor officially took the helm at the Charlevoix Courier on Monday, Nov. 19.

Erica Goff, a 25-year-old Custer native, replaces Julie Witthoeft who has accepted the convergence editor's position with the Courier's sister daily newspaper, the Petoskey News-Review.

"I wanted to make a change and Charlevoix seemed like a beautiful area and a great place to give a try," said Goff, who grew up assisting her father and brother in operating a large dairy farm with 400 head of cattle in Custer.

Goff comes to the Courier from Ithaca where she was managing editor for the Gratiot County Herald since December of 2006. She also held a staff writer's position for almost two years at the Herald, a weekly publication with a circulation of 7,000.

"I really like the pace of a weekly newspaper, the tight knit communities, the feel. I grew up in a small town with that friendly atmosphere. And there's so many exciting things going on," she said.

Goff's other professional experience includes a two-year staff writing internship with the Ludington Daily News and a part-time writing position with the Clare County Review.

She said she is particularly interested in writing human interest and feature stories.

"I eventually want to get into magazine writing. I'm a verbose writer and like the in-depth approach to reporting and writing," said Goff, whose editorial duties will include coverage of the City of Charlevoix, including city council.

She earned her bachelor's degree in journalism and a master of arts in composition and communications from Central Michigan University.

Witthoeft will work side by side with Goff until Nov. 28 when she makes the move to Petoskey.

"It's a bitter sweet move for me. Promotions and change are part of my professional evolution but after seven years with the Courier, it's hard to say good-bye," Witthoeft said.

The Courier will host an open house from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. on Nov. 28 at the office located at 112 Mason St. Those interested in welcoming Goff, saying farewell to Witthoeft, test driving the paper's e-edition or sharing editorial insight are encouraged to stop in.

For more information, call the Courier office at (231) 547-6558.

Weekend, holiday plow service suspended

BY STEVE ZUCKER
PETOSKEY NEWS-REVIEW
STAFF WRITER

Following in the footsteps of many other cash-strapped road commissions around the area, the Charlevoix County Road Commission will not be plowing or salting/sanding secondary or "local" roads on weekends or holidays this winter.

At its regular semi-monthly meeting Monday the commissioners voiced their support to the plan as proposed by manager Pat Harmon. The policy is a change from last year when crews would be called in to plow "local" roads if more than six inches of snow fell.

The road commission will plow state highways under its contract with the state. Those roads include U.S. 31, U.S. 131, M-75, M-66 and M-32. Among those roads, U.S. 31 and U.S. 131 are considered "priority 1" roads.

That means on weekends road crews are to attempt to keep the "road surface generally bare of ice and snow … using overtime labor as necessary."

The other roads on the list are "priority 2" roads.

Road commission on track, minor adjustment needed

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

During its annual report, the Charlevoix County Road Commission says it is doing the best it can in a bad situation.

Despite statewide budget woes, the failed 2006 county road millage and a federal government which robs 7.5 cents from every gas tax dollar, the local road commission has managed to maintain most services, but predicts it will be forced to scale back snow plowing this winter.

"I think everybody's aware of our funding problems, which is true throughout the state. Montcalm County Road Commission shut their doors for two weeks. Manistee County Road Commission shut their doors for a week, sent everybody home," said road commission member Keith Ogden. "None of our legislative people want to talk about a gas tax increase, which is really the fairest way of funding roads. In fact the state continues to take money out of our road funds for non-road [sic] purposes."

An audit of the Charlevoix County Road Commission performed by Gardner, Provenzano, Schuaman & Thomas shows the road commission is on track with its spending with one issue raised about the commission's business practices.

"Our fund balance is where it should be and we're still budgeting money into five special funds to help long-term planning and financial obligations. Unfortunately, the last four or five months we had to get into those funds to help with payroll," Ogden said. "Buried in one of the last pages of the report you'll see some (verbiage) on absence of appropriate segregation of duties. What our auditor is saying there is we don't have enough people looking over everybody else's shoulders to make sure we don't mishandle money."

To hedge any potential problems, what the auditors called "deficiencies," Ogden said an extra employee has been hired to change the structure of how duties are segregated.

The road commission's fund balance of $1,862,240 is up from the $1.825 million 2005 fund balance.

With total revenue of $5,445,345, the commission's net assets as of Dec. 31, 2006 were $20,872,046.

While they have maintained current services through tough financial times, Ogden said the county desperately needs a road millage.

"It's going to be the only way to take care of our roads. We can't expect help from Lansing, we can't expect help from Washington," he said. "If we had a countywide millage, that money would go to Charlevoix County. It isn't going to maintain them, but a county-wide millage would fix our roads."

He added, "It's going to be a tough sell."

The road millage turned down by voters in August 2006 would have been levied from 2006 to 2010 and would have improved the following 44.08 miles of county road:

- Year one, 5.59 miles of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, from Nelson to Pincherry Road
- Year two, 6.39 miles of Camp Ten Road and 5.45 miles of Springvale Road
- Year three, 3.79 miles of Ellsworth Road and 3.38 miles of Six Mile Lake Road
- Year four, 4.04 miles of Kings Highway, 3.47 miles of Deer Lake Road, 2.65 miles of Korthase Road
- Year five, 2.20 miles of River Road and 7.12 miles of Marion Center Road

Of the 17 road improvement projects worked on this year, all were funded by township millages.

"We're actually in good shape because we've been watching our money, but we don't have any extra to spend," Ogden said.

Chair of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners Shirley Roloff (District 6) feels the board should revisit the issue of a county-wide road millage.

"We're going to have to do something in the near future," she said. "We just can't continue the way we are going, but we have to get people on board with this."

Roloff said the board will likely look into the matter after the first of the year.

County tweaks plow schedule to save cash

PLOW

Which means on weekends road crews are to attempt to keep the road surface clear in the center portion wide enough for one clear wheel track in each direction with the remainder of the roadway to be cleared as soon as reasonably possible without using overtime.

The plan also calls for the following local roads to be plowed on weekends as "priority 2" roads: Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, Boyne City-East Jordan Road, Ellsworth Road, Marion Center Road, Thumb Lake Road and the portions of Advance and Peninsula roads leading from East Jordan to the Grandvue Medical Care Facility.

Harmon explained that road commission crews will still respond as needed to police, fire and ambulance emergency situations, but said there could be a delay of up to an hour unless crews are already on the road or at the garage.

He noted that the new policy could affect schools as crews may not have time to have weekend snowfall cleared from side roads before school on Monday morning.

Harmon said one problem with last year's plan of plowing after 6 inches of snow fell was that snowfall totals can vary widely throughout the area.

He said the move is intended to help cut costs in the face of tight budget conditions.

"We can't spend money we don't have," Harmon said. "If we can save some costs on material, fuel and overtime now, it hopefully will allow us to avoid having to lay off people later on."

He said he expects at the next meeting the commission will have to borrow money from one of its funds to pay its general fund bills.

In Emmet County, road commission engineer-manager Brian Gutowski said the weekend road plowing policy will be the same as it has been in the past few years.

Similar to Charlevoix County, state highways including U.S. 131, U.S. 31, M-68, M-119 and primary local roads such as Mitchell and Pleasantview roads, will be plowed on weekends. Other local roads will only be plowed following a "major snow event" — generally more than 6 inches of snow. He said weekend local road plowing will be left to the discretion of the on-duty foreman.

Growing up Gohs: A Thanksgiving revelation

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

I'm still trying to get rid of Halloween candy and it's already Thanksgiving. By the time you read this, I'll be up to my armpits in gizzards, gravy and guests as five brothers, a sister and two nephews join my wife and kids for the second of what we hope will be a tradition for many years to come.

Holidays with loved ones may be nothing remarkable to you, but it's a new concept for us.

Sure, there are a couple memories of Christmas at grandma's but, due to family feuds, it was usually the seven of us kids and my embattled parents.

Who knows why? Grandma was angry with mom, mom was unhappy with grandpa, my aunts were miffed at mom for making grandma unhappy and nobody liked my father.

The last dysfunctional straw was the frigid fall day the nine of us made the 200-plus-mile journey to Onaway in dad's old short-box Chevy pickup.

We were at grandma's just long enough for she and mom to argue over who would pay for soda — after all, why should we discuss the real problem when we can stuff it down with food, alcohol and self-loathing until it becomes a stress-induced stroke or tumor the size of a Bartlett pear.

And so it went until I moved out of the house and renewed relations with aunts, uncles and cousins. It was then that brother Hammy and I decided we couldn't go down the same path and we have since hosted holiday get-togethers and camping trips for our siblings.

Nowadays the closest I get to a dysfunctional holiday are the stories my siblings and I invariably swap.

We'll talk about what a tough S.O.B. the old man is by recounting the day in winter '84 or '85 when he fell three stories while working construction only to go back to work the next day with a broken wrist and forever mangled back. Or the time he walked miles through waste deep snow in Indian River back country with no money to the local mom-n-pop store. Sure as sugar he came back with enough groceries to get us through.

We'll laugh about the time dad came home so drunk he thought my mother was a Vietnamese soldier trying to kill him before I carried him to his room where he proceeded to wax gastrointestinal for the remainder of the evening.

We were inseparable as kids, but not until recent gatherings did I realize just how lucky we were to have one another and escape the mayhem with that relationship in tact.

I know you're busy with turkey and trimmings, so I'll keep my Thanksgiving list short:

I am grateful for my job, children and a wife who puts up with me.

I fear for Lil' John's safety as he readies for basic training, but am glad to see him this Thanksgiving before he ships out.

I'm glad Hammy survived his recent divorce with some semblance of his parental rights.

I'm thankful William — Charlevoixans will know him simply as "Sampson" — pulled out of his mischievous ways, has a good job and lives the life of a guitar-playing, poetry-writing bachelor — happy holidays, booger lips.

I'm thankful sister Sara is so even keeled. Sara was adopted by Hammy after she could take my parents' madness no longer, and instead of drinking and drugging her life away, she maintained her grades, moved out on her own and now supports herself while attending college. Sissy, I know you'll do great.

I'm thankful Gnome-o is the funniest guy I know. Not a minute goes by without one of his trademark impressions and no situation is too serious for him to lampoon.

And, I'm thankful Jacob (B.B.), the baby of the fam', is still so innocent. He'll soon turn 15 and still refuses to swear or engage in dubious behavior, even when surrounded by five foul-mouthed older brothers.

In a way it saddens me to think about the fun my parents missed out on by choosing the hermit life, and though it may sound cliché, I'm thankful for my family, weirdoes one and all.

I hope this Thanksgiving finds you realizing just how lucky you are to have family.

Greatest success of growing season is sweetpotato

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

The vegetable garden has been pretty much put to rest for the year.

The Swiss chard will survive considerable frost, and is especially tasty during colder growth temperatures. And there are a few dozen carrots still in the ground, also very sweet in early winter. There are even a few plants for fall-planted lettuce. Imagine, garden lettuce in mid-November!

The single greatest success story of this season was the sweetpotatoes. I have tried for at least three years to produce some sweet potatoes, but earlier attempts were thwarted by voracious rabbits, invading weeds, chewing insects or early frosts.

My usual sources say that historically, sweetpotatoes were cultivated as far north as New Jersey, but I find no mention of Michigan in the sweet potato literature. Formally, the sweetpotato is Ipomea batatas, a tropical vine related to morning glories, and while the word "yam" is sometimes used, the true yam is a completely different plant found only in tropical climates, and more closely related to lilies and amaryllis.

Sweetpotatoes were native to South America and the Caribbean, where they were cultivated at least 10,000 years ago. From there they moved across the Pacific in the 14th Century to Hawaii and New Zealand, later found their way to Africa, and only arrived in Europe after Columbus brought them back from Haiti. The Irish or white potato reached Europe from Peru somewhat later, but in much of Europe the word "potato" still refers to the sweet potato. It is usually written as a single word rather than "sweet potato" to reduce the possibility of confusion with other kinds of potatoes.

One of the reasons that all those people over all that time found sweetpotatoes so useful was their almost astonishing productivity. This year, a longer than usual growing season here in the great white north, a single plant in my garden produced 10 pounds of sweetpotatoes in an area of about two square yards. If the plant had had another month of warm weather it could easily have produced double that amount.

Maybe it is time, what with global warming and the probability of longer growing seasons, to bring the cultivation of sweetpotatoes to northern Michigan. Next spring, about early March, buy a good-looking supermarket sweetpotato and suspend it on some toothpicks with the bottom third of it in a jar of water. Change the water periodically and within a week or so, roots will begin to grow into the water. Later, green shoots will appear around the top of your project. Once underway they will grow quickly and even if you don't want to use them in your garden, you will get a fine looking house plant that will produce vines many feet long. If you want to grow them outdoors, wait until all danger of frost is passed, cut off chunks of the original potato with both shoots and roots and transplant them into rich soil. Expect a slow start, but rapid vining by midsummer. The attractive blue, morning glory-looking flowers will tell you the plant is growing well. The vines will want to root themselves almost everywhere they touch the ground, but for maximum potato production, prevent rooting anywhere but a foot or so from the original transplant. Then hope for late frosts in the fall since the plants are very sensitive to freezing or even near-freezing temperatures.

It's good, facing the difficult months ahead, to have some plans for growing things.

STOP MAKING TOBACCO PRODUCTS

Editor:

At many different places it has been brought to my attention how bad tobacco products are. Teachers, parents, adults and my peers have preached to me about how bad cigarettes and tobacco are, and have warned me not to go near them. I fully understand the effects smoking and chewing tobacco have. In fact I don't think there is anyone, smoker or not, who doesn't know how deadly cigarettes are. I don't think cigarettes or tobacco should be allowed to be made anymore.

Even though some say taking away tobacco products would be taking away one's rights. I cannot say this isn't true, but if it's obvious that by doing so it would be for the common good, then why not? On top of being sick addictions, the average person spends about $35 every week on tobacco products. While smoking and chewing tobacco are both equally horrible addictions, people are also throwing away hundreds of dollars every year buying these products. It is clear that the outcome of this action would be extremely beneficial and far from harmful.

Another issue that might be brought up is that some people are unable to break their addiction. I find this very hard to believe, considering all of the medications and patches that are out there to help people stop. It is also more about the person's mental strength. Although many people who have quit have said it was the hardest thing they have ever done, they have said it was also the best thing because it added years to their life expectancy. To quit smoking, all you have to do is get the right help and believe in yourself.

Many people might argue that smoking helps them calm down, and that despite being hazardous to your health, it has some positive side effects. This is just ridiculous. While smoking may somehow relax people, there are so many negative effects that tobacco products have on your health, like lung cancer and a high chance of having a stroke. In most cases it is deadly, killing about 430,000 people every year. It's also a disgusting bad habit. Tobacco rots your teeth and lungs and causes you and those around you to smell awful.

I really think that tobacco products should be banned. I have more than enough reasons to back me up, and you should really consider doing something.

OPPOSE SOVEREIGN DEED

Editor:

I recommend anyone interested in better understanding Sovereign Deed read a guest commentary written by Dale Scott of Harbor Springs on A4 of the Nov. 8 Petoskey News-Review.

They plan to sell their exclusive membership ($50,000, plus $15,000 annual fees) to the rich to save only the rich in the event of some kind of emergency. In addition they want our tax dollars in the form of tax abatement's to get the business rolling. In this writer's opinion this seems un-American. I think this should be vigorously opposed.

'TIS THE SEASON TO GIVE BACK

Editor:

This is the time of year we think about giving the most. Thanksgiving comes, we share thanks for our families and great country and many help provide extra food to the poor. Christmas is the ultimate giving to others time.

What better way to give, than to give time and voice to prevent Gender Violence during the "16 Days of Activism Against Gender Violence" from Nov. 25 through Dec. 10.

Since 1991, the 16 Days Campaign has helped to raise awareness about gender violence and highlighted its effects on women globally. Each year, thousands of activists from all over the world utilize the campaign to further their work to end violence against women.

Nov. 25 was declared International Day Against Violence Against Women.

Dec. 1 marks World AIDS Day which serves to strengthen the global effort to face the challenges of the AIDS pandemic.

Dec. 10 marks the celebration of the 1948 adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Zonta International's mission is to improve the status of women and girls globally through service and advocacy by increasing awareness of the needs in our communities.

One in three women will suffer some form of violence in her lifetime; domestic abuse is the number one health issue in the U.S.; and three of four women killed are killed after leaving an abuser.

Give your time and talents to change these statistics. Call the Women's Resource Center and ask how you can help. (231) 347-0067.

Remember that silence is affirming. When you choose not to speak out against violence you are supporting it. Recruit men to help, women have traditionally worked alone on this problem. And talk about this topic in any group you belong to, keep this topic in the forefront.

HUNTING TEACHES LESSONS

Editor:

I am writing in response to Mr. Freedman's question he had in the paper on Nov. 7 (letter to the editor entitled "Bear kill doesn't fit with youth hunt" published on page 5 of the Nov. 7 edition of the Courier). "Can you please explain how you feel shooting this black bear fits into the Youth Hunt's theme of 'instilling in our young people a respect for animals and their habitat?'"

I am Jordan Farmer, a 14-year-old kid that has been hunting, trapping and fishing for my whole life. I was fortunate enough to harvest my first bear when I was 13. Being able to hunt bear with my uncles, dad, brother and other great men who enjoy the sport even more than me, has taught me more than I could write in a lifetime. There's never a time when I come back from a bear hunt not having learned something useful, something I can apply to my everyday life. The bear hunters that I hunt with are very educated and dedicated to the sport. The things that you learn are some of the most simple things, like respect, self-confidence, responsibility, pride, determination and physical ability. Some kids now days just don't have these because they are stuck up in their rooms playing a video game or on the computer or on the streets getting into any kind of mischief they can. You learn so much respect from bear hunting and just hunting in general. You have to have respect for your dogs, your hunting buddies and for the wildlife.

Mr. Freedman also asked, "What was the purpose of shooting a bear that would never have hurt anyone except in defense?" Well, simple, the same reason we hunt deer, raccoon, coyote or fish trout or bass, to keep from over-population of that game, not to mention the diseases and sicknesses that an animal could get if over-populated.

To me hunting is a passion and a pride, there's nothing than being in the woods or on the water paying respect to the wildlife. There's a lot of peer pressure in this world now days that your children are faced with every day — drugs, alcohol and sex etc. Hunting is my way of staying away from it all. I'm not saying hunting is the thing for everyone but it is an easy way to set your mind free of your everyday life and spend quality time with your friends and family. I would wish that everyone could harvest a deer or bear, anything, just to feel the pride, like you are the king of the world. Hunting has taught me so much and I can't tell you enough. If you have a chance to go hunting, do it, you won't regret it.

BLATANTLY BIASED

Editor:

If anyone would recognize being "blatantly biased" — it should be Benjamin Gohs. If you can write such a distorted anti-Israel piece (entitled "Before peace first must come truth") in the Nov. 14 Charlevoix Courier, and not realize how biased your stance is, then you have forgotten all the principals of "reporting." Your article is loaded with misquotes, omissions and flat out incorrect reporting. I was going to answer you point by point, but if you do not even know which groups are Palestinians, and which groups have nothing to do with the Palestinian-Israeli conflict (other than their hatred for, and want of total destruction of, Israel) I think it best if I address the overall picture.

Israel wants to exist and the Arabs want nothing less than the total destruction of Israel. The closest to a compromise came at Camp David while Bill Clinton was our president. An agreement was actually reached to create a Palestinian State with East Jerusalem as it's capital. Yasser Arrafat was party to this agreement. When he went back to the other Arab leaders, including Hamas, they refused any compromise short of total destruction of Israel. Arrafat had to refuse the agreement. What is Israel to do other than defend itself? How can you negotiate with people who will not negotiate?

It has been said, "If all the Arabs laid down their arms; there would be no more conflict. If Israel laid down all it's arms, there would be no more Israel!"

In it's entire existence as a country, Mr. Gohs, can you cite one time that Israel has attacked her neighbors without being provoked first. Right from the beginning, Israel has had to defend itself from attackers; over and over. Thank goodness this democracy, the only one in the Middle East, can "outgun" it's more numerous, aggressive neighbors.

It also has been said, "There will not be peace in the Middle East, until the Arabs love their own children, more than they hate ours!"

I hope your assessment that the upcoming Annapolis Summit on the Middle East is "pointless," is as inaccurate as your article's claim to "seek the truth."

BANNING BOOKS TAKES AWAY FROM EDUCATION

Editor:

Due to the fact that last week, was banned books week and the timely reading of Fahrenheit 451 by our English 2 class, I became puzzled and slightly angry that people even consider banning books from libraries and schools. It was also brought to my attention, by a librarian at our public library, that several months ago our local library had a book "come up missing," because they wouldn't ban it. It is hard to believe that people become so passionate about banning the books that they are willing to commit a misdemeanor to rid it of our library. My solution to this is that we just don't ban books.

Lately a majority of books that are banned, or that people have attempted to ban, are books that people think offend a race or religion. This happens because narrow minded people don't understand why someone would think differently than themselves and look at that as racism or atheism. The people that think this way often misinterpret an author that is exercising his freedom of expression. Banning an author's work, because he/she is expressing themselves is wrong. Expression is a huge part of our society, in school you are always told to find ways to express yourself. Yet there are people that want to take example of that off our public and school library shelves because they think that that particular author's expression is wrong or unfit.

One of the major arguments for banning books in schools is that they are not fit for kids to read. People are worried that because a book has bad language or infers to or displays sex, drugs or alcohol that kids at the high school level won't be able to handle it. As a high school student, I can tell that kids will be able to handle all those things, considering that we talk about all those and more during their spare time and during lunch. And by banning the books you are taking away from our education.

If you look at the list of books banned in the last 10 years you will see titles like "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," "Mice and Men," and "To Kill a Mockingbird," all books that we study in school and books that have very important life lessons. So don't worry about what's in them, just let us learn from these wonderful pieces of literature.

Many books banned these days are because they promote, support or just have, sex, bad language, drug and alcohol use or abuse. Some individuals seem to think that they need to protect and shelter us from such "improper" things. This isn't their job it is the job of the individual and the job of the parents of children to decide what or not they read. Besides books like those and others promote ideas, and isn't that why our country is so great because we have diversity. Not only in race and culture but in ideas. Books are one of the many things that show and broadcast different ideas. Kids are going to and already are making up their own minds banning books with sex, drugs and violence in them isn't going to stop that. I once read somewhere, "an intelligent person is a well read one."

Freedom of speech, freedom of press, and freedom to peaceful assembly, are three rights along with many others that the First Amendment to the United States Constitution supports. The First Amendment allows for anyone to read and write what they want, which is what makes this country great. So in requesting that a book be banned, people are directly and deliberately going against our constitution. In fact, they are unconsciously saying that you oppose our country and what it stands for. Banning the reading of certain books is, as though you are banning a person's thoughts, and everyone has the freedom of thought. Then again these people oppose the First Amendment, but have they ever thought about having their own personal thoughts banned? The person that wants to have the Harry Potter series banned, because they think it goes against the belief of God, does this person know that one of the most controversial books ever is the Bible? Everyone has the right to believe what they want to believe, think what they want to think and read what they want to read.

Community Thanksgiving dinner at Reformed Church

STORY HIGHLIGHT
A community Thanksgiving dinner will be served from noon to 3 p.m. on Nov. 22 at the Charlevoix Reformed Church located at Petoskey Avenue and Meech Street.

There's a seat waiting for you this Thanksgiving.

In the wake of tough economic times, a group of Charlevoix residents are starting a new tradition to offer Thanksgiving dinner to the community.

During Thanksgiving 2005, Dennis and Joy Halverson were invited by Janet Potter to help cook and serve Thanksgiving dinner with Dave Behling in Emmet County. Behling had been putting on this dinner for a number of years for people in the community who were either in need of fellowship or could use a little help having a nice dinner.

This year, Potter and Halversons decided to approach the local ministerial association to see if a similar dinner could be held in Charlevoix.

"The idea was met with a lot of excitement and interest," Dennis Halverson said.

With the support of the association, Potter and the Halversons have been working toward the Thanksgiving Day dinner.

"This year people may not have the money to drive down state to have dinner with relatives, or some people may just not want to be by themselves on this day," Joy Halverson said. "Whatever the reason, this dinner will hope to fill the needs that are out there in our community."

Behling has also been assisting in the planning and preparation.

The Charlevoix Rotary Club will be buying the turkeys and cash contributions have been offered by the Charlevoix Lion's Club. The dinner will be served from noon to 3 p.m. on Nov. 22 at the Charlevoix Reformed Church located at Petoskey Avenue and Meech Street.

To make a donation, call Joy Halverson at (231) 547-4813.

The banning of books is just bad. It is that simple, people don't like being told what they can or can't do or read. Reading is not something you can give or take away. Everyone is given equal opportunity to learn how to do it in school. Reading is not a privilege, it's not something you control. Reading is a born right, you start learning how to do it the minute you hit grade school. Reading is a right.

RINK MOVE DESTROYS HABITAT

Editor:

It was a very sad day on Monday when driving down Mt. McSauba Road. The open space my family lovingly calls "the meadow" is being torn up to build a skating rink. This field is an excellent spot for folks from all around to stop and enjoy watching the deer feed and play, and they do.

It's a sorry commentary that we believe we have to destroy another wildlife habitat for no legitimate reason. The skating rink was centrally located at the site of the Charlevoix Middle School, with plenty of parking. Why not leave it there? Why not have the recreation department take charge of the rink at that location? We have spent millions of dollars to renovate the downtown park for people. It's a shame we feel it necessary to destroy a beautiful space for the deer and other animals. Since first reading about the rink in Friday's paper, I have spoken with a number of Charlevoix citizens, all unaware of these plans and none particularly enthusiastic. If open meetings were held concerning the skating rink, time and place were not well publicized, and I am disappointed that public opinion was not solicited, as public dollars are being spent.

STICK WITH WHOLESOME REPORTING

Editor:

I don't know which I found more astonishing — the fact that a writer (Benjamin Gohs in his column, "Before peace first must come truth" which appeared on page 4 of the Nov. 14 edition of the Courier) would think that the Charlevoix Courier is an appropriate medium for which to vent his clearly racist, pro Palestinian, anti-Israel sentiment, or that the editor of this paper doesn't have the good enough sense to see how offensive this piece could be to readers and allow this to be published in the first place.

I subscribe to the Courier because I think it is a wholesome newspaper that does a fine job keeping me informed of all of the community news and happenings. This, I would hope would be a continued expectation of the paper. The Courier crossed the line when allowing this disturbing article to be published. Mr. Gohs' article last week about his haunted house was entertaining. This article was downright frightening.

WAKE UP LANSING

Editor:

Oh how I agree (with Benjamin Gohs' column, "Give back by cutting back" which was printed on page 4 of the Nov. 7 edition of the Courier). I called Michigan my home state for 18 years but when I was taxed out by property, gas, utilities and lack of business growth my background in economies kicked me right where we should be kicking our "royal representatives."

I left Michigan. Yes, I'm part of the educated exodus who are mass exiting our state and I consider myself a lucky one. I transferred with my firm I sold my home in Petoskey — three months and off I went to a state that offers no income tax, growth promotion of industry and cheaper to live. I moved to Florida.

If you did a survey you would find the mass educated exodus folks heading south or pacific northwest. Where jobs are abundant and the unemployment rates are low.

I miss the pristine peacefulness of the rolling hills overlooking Walloon but beauty is for the eye of the beholder and I am beholding a better future for myself and my family. Oh, and did I mention Florida has an education scholarship program so "no child" will be left out to the higher education loophole.

I truly enjoyed reading your opinion and agree. Wake up Lansing. Wake up Michigan

PUT CHRIST BACK IN CHRISTMAS

Editor:

Every department store has "sales papers." They have pictures of Santa, snowmen, reindeer and decorated trees, all of these to be purchased and placed in one's yard. That is fine, but I never see any pictures of nativity sets, angels or other spiritual items in those papers. What happened to the true meaning of Christmas?

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK ACTIVITIES

Editor:

I wish to thank all the sponsors that made our Fire Prevention Program so successful. With their help we were able to deliver this year's message "Practice Your Escape Plan," "How to Prevent Forest Fires" and "Disaster Preparedness."

A special thanks to Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, American Red Cross (Northern Lower MI Chapter), Michigan DNR of Gaylord and Bellaire, Smokey Bear, Bangor Township Fire Department, Charlevoix Elementary School, (Staff and Children), St. Mary's School, Sunny Smiles Daycare, Charlevoix Children's House, Char-em Schools, Charlevoix Home School Group and all the City of Charlevoix Fire Fighters, Explorer Scouts, volunteers and businesses who made this program so successful.

I am thankful and very encouraged to see the cooperative spirit pulling together in public education efforts. The City of Charlevoix Fire Department looks forward to participating with our community in future collaborative programs and events. Working together, we will be able to do many meaningful things.

Remember — how many fires did we prevent today? Each one that did not start!

Snowmobile enthusiasts skirt catastrophe

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

A quarrel between the volunteer guardians of Michigan's snowmobile trails and the cash-strapped Department of Natural Resources ended just short of a shutdown of those trails.

A quarrel between the volunteer guardians of Michigan's snowmobile trails and the cash-strapped Department of Natural Resources ended just short of a shutdown of those trails.

The biggest dispute raged over what percentage of the trade-in value the DNR and trail sponsors would each get from the sale of used trail grooming equipment.

"The grant sponsors had very serious equipment ownership concerns," stated Bill Manson, executive director of the Michigan Snowmobile Association in a Nov. 8 press release. "We were at a critical stage where it could have gone either way, so I am relieved that the industry and the businesses that rely upon it will thrive this winter."

Kevin Wright, president of the Charlevoix Snowmobile Club said, "A lot of (snowmobile) clubs had their own money into these machines. For instance, the Jordan Valley Trail Council has $100,000 into their machines and the DNR was saying, 'Hey, when we give you new equipment, we're looking for the full trade-in dollars,' even though the club had put so much of their own money into the equipment."

The problem with the DNR reaping the full trade-in value, Wright said, is that snowmobiling as a recreational activity and a growing portion of Michigan's tourism economy is self sustained, the DNR merely allocates funds raised from the purchase of trail permits, registration and even a portion of the gasoline tax.

"They were able to work it out where they basically went back to the different years of the program — at one point it was 60/40 or 70/30 (the percentage which went to the DNR and snowmobile clubs respectively)," he said. "So, the percentage you get back will depend on the year you bought the equipment."

According to the Michigan Snowmobile Association, snowmobilers contribute more than $1 billion to the economy annually and helping to support more than 7,000 jobs in the food, lodging, fueling and supply industries.

While Michigan boasts nearly 6,400 miles of snowmobile trails, it is the volunteer clubs who maintain those trails.

"Trail grooming is absolutely essential to the snowmobiling industry," Manson stated. "Trails must be groomed, have visible signage, and be free of debris for safe riding. Moreover, it is mandatory for access to many remote trail networks throughout the state."

The volunteer army of trail groomers maintained a total of 352,048 miles worth of trail last year.

"The trail grooming program still would not be possible without the volunteer services of the grant sponsor clubs, which are very passionate about making Michigan's trails the best in the country," Manson stated.

Wright is glad the agreement was reached before the snow arrives and is excited about the upcoming season.

"We got the (Charlevoix) trail finished up last week. There is a little bit of work in town to do, but other than that we're ready," he said. "We're trying to bring business into town and snowmobilers into town with their tourist dollars."

Scheduled for this winter are several events including the Dec. 1 Wrench & Swap, where snowmobilers can buy and sell equipment and work on their sleds; the annual Snowmobile Ride-in, the event with free food, fun and prizes on Jan. 26; and there are club rides planned for Jan. 12 and Feb. 9.

More information will be forthcoming as the event dates near.

Charlevoix native lives highs, lows of adoption

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

STORY HIGHLIGHT

The Courier is featuring Charlevoix native and mother to two adopted children, Tiffany (Karczmarski-Pero) Evans to highlight the Fifth Annual Michigan Adoption Day, which took place on Nov. 20.

For the Evans family, every day is a day to celebrate the adoption process.

When asked if she planned to mark Nov. 20, the Fifth Annual Michigan Adoption Day, with revelry, Tiffany (Karczmarski-Pero) Evans, a Charlevoix native and mother to two adopted children, said its just another day in her amazing journey.

The day, marked in more than 30 Michigan counties by celebrating adoptive families and children, is co-sponsored by the Michigan Supreme Court, the Michigan Department of Human Services (DHS), the Michigan Adoption Resource Exchange (MARE), and the Family Services division of the State Court Administrative Office.

Events in Charlevoix County 7th Probate Court, where local adoptions go through, have not been planned.

Chief Justice Clifford W. Taylor and Department of Human Services director Ismael Ahmed said Michigan Adoption Day is aimed at encouraging potential adoptive and foster parents.

Evans, a 29-year-old class of 1996 Charlevoix High School graduate who now lives in Grand Rapids, needs all the encouragement she can get. The hopes of starting a family for she and her husband Jason, an attorney, were dashed by complications conceiving.

The happy couple quickly turned to adoption and welcomed a daughter, Hannah in July of 2005.

"Everything was very positive. We have an open relationship with her birth mother who we see several times a year. We love open adoption and birth families," Evans said.

In a nutshell, Evans said infant adoption begins with a prospective adoptive family submitting a profile which is a scrapbook or photo album outlining the family's interests, values and personality. A birth mother with established criteria then looks over profiles to choose a family.

This match making is also bound by an arduous legal process.

"Adoption is a long, trying process. There are laws involved and hoops to jump through that often aren't resolved as quickly as they should be or are supposed to be. It's not like you go to the hospital, have a baby and go home," Evans said.

It was an adoption law that in March 2007 ended in the loss of Mariah, the Evans family's second adopted daughter.

Mariah was just two weeks old when her birth mom changed her mind and decided to keep her. In Michigan a birth parent has until the adoption consent hearing to change her mind.

"That's something you have to be honest with yourself about and know that that can happen. You can't go into adoption thinking everything will work out," Evans said. "There's nothing like walking back into the agency and putting your baby back in the arms of the social worker. It's devastating. But I support their (birth moms) right to choose and make a decision."

Their latest journey into the world of adoption has been their greatest challenge. Jason and Tiffany are in the process of their third adoption, a son Isaac, born on Sunday, July 15 in Canton, Ohio at 24 weeks gestation weighing just 1 pound, 8 ounces. His adoption is expected to be finalized in March.

"For us it was a faith decision — we felt this was the child God intended for us. It was important to his birth mom he be named Isaac and that's the name we picked out if we were to ever have a son," she said. "We are on board with this but I didn't know what was coming."

In the months following Isaac's birth Tiffany and Hannah have relocated to the Ronald McDonald house in Cleveland, Ohio to be close to Isaac who is in the neonatal intensive care unit at Rainbow Babies and Children's Hospital. His progression has been marked by tragedy and triumph.

"He's had pretty much every setback these children can have without dying," Evans said.

He's almost died several times, has had several serious infections that could have killed him, one major surgery and two laser eye surgeries.

When asked if she would have changed her decision knowing the rough road in front of her, Evans said, "Absolutely not, never."

"I don't think any family would choose to go off and do this but we know this is where God wants us to be. Isaac is our son."

Isaac is beginning to eat formula and has overcome serious health complications. But this doesn't mean the road ahead will be any less harsh than the route he's traveled.

"He could have no problems or significant developmental delays. There's no way to assess that now. He'll need occupational and physical therapists for several years. He could have cerebral palsy or cystic fibrosis," she said of Isaac's unknown future.

In December Isaac may be transferred to DeVos Children's Hospital in Grand Rapids. The earliest he is expected to come home is January.

"My biggest prayer would

Mark Snyder joins Prudential Preferred Properties Network - Charlevoix

After growing up in Birmingham, Mark's love of boating led him to Northern Michigan full time in the early 90's to manage the sales department for Irish Boat Shop in Charlevoix. After helping hundreds of families find the right boat, Mark was approached to work as the owner's representative for the construction of a 17,000 square foot home. Following the successful completion of the home, Mark's next adventure took him, his wife Valerie and their two young sons, Jacob and Luke, to Henderson, Nevada, where Mark was intimately involved with the construction of a 55,000 square foot private residence. Mark's responsibilities while working for each of the families also involved research, investigation and negotiation for the purchase of multiple residences in multiple states and countries.

In 2006, Mark and Valerie, a Charlevoix attorney, returned to Northern Michigan to raise their sons. Mark and Val both enjoy the small-town atmosphere and the benefits of watching their sons grow up skiing the local hills, sailing the lakes and enjoying all that Northern Michigan has to offer.

Mark recently joined Prudential Preferred Properties Network in their Charlevoix office where he will specialize in residential & resort property.

he that God's will be done in our lives and the lives of our children. And that we would be ready and willing to do everything he intends for us to do in our lives," Evans said.

Evans said she knows the unknowns, the highs and the lows of adoption are not unique to her, and in response, she and Jason founded Three Voices, a nonprofit organization dedicated to empowering birth families, adopted persons and adoptive families by advancing the knowledge and practice of positive adoption outcomes through education, quality service standards, research and public policy.

ADOPTION STATISTICS

2,589 children were adopted through Department of Human Services' offices and private adoption agencies between Oct. 1, 2005 and Sept. 30, 2006.

A relative or foster parent adopted 93 percent of those children.

80 percent of children who had siblings in foster care were adopted with at least one of their siblings.

Preliminary data for FY 2007 indicates that approximately 2,481 children were placed into adoptive homes out of the foster care system between Oct. 1, 2006 and Sept. 30, 2007.

Today there are approximately 6,200 children in the foster care system whose parents' rights have been terminated.

For approximately 4,300 of those children, the goal is adoption. The remaining children are either older youths who are satisfied with their placement and do not wish to be adopted (those 14 years of age and older have that option) or youths in other living arrangements where adoption is not appropriate.

Last year, 36 courts participated in Adoption Day 2006, most by finalizing adoptions, but others by holding "adoption fairs" and other events aimed at educating the public about the adoption process. Over 230 children had their adoptions finalized on Michigan Adoption Day.

During the five-year period in which Michigan has celebrated Adoption Day, more than 13,000 children have been placed into adoptive homes out of foster care.

Seven locals among 2,000 Michigan residents that have not claimed tax refunds.

$2.3 million yet unclaimed, IRS says

More information at www.irs.gov

Some Charlevoix residents are privy to a piece of the $2 million in unclaimed refund checks from the IRS.

Seven locals are among more than 2,000 Michiganders due refunds but who have not yet claimed a total of $2.3 million.

"Every year we get folks missing out on their money because they chose not to use e-file and direct deposit," stated IRS spokesperson Luis D. Garcia in a Nov. 14 press release. "While it is a small number of overall taxpayers that don't get their refund right away, even one is too many."

The checks, which average $924, may be claimed by taxpayers after they update their mailing address with the IRS.

The following Charlevoix residents have a check waiting for them: Terry L. Edger, Brandin Elzinga, Nathan LaBlance, Ralph E. Lahr, Jennifer A. Rivera, Nathan J. Tripplehorn, and Jeffrey T. and Glenda S. Wilhelm.

The IRS says the checks were mailed, but returned as undeliverable by the post office.

To update your information you may use the "Where's My Refund?" option on the www.irs.gov Web site which will enable you to see the status of your refund.

Information you will need: Social Security number; filing status; and amount of your 2006 refund.

For those of you not tech savvy, you may call (800) 829-1954. Be sure to have the same information handy.

IRS officials said some citizens are due more than one check.

The number of unclaimed checks and the amount of total refunds rose from 1,700 and $1.4 million respectively in 2006.

Sheriff's Office offers fall cleanup

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office will once again offer fall cleanup services to senior citizens.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater will assign county jail prisoners, supervised by a sheriff's officer, to assist senior citizens with raking and general cleanup of their yards.

This program also includes townships in Charlevoix County where prisoners may be assigned, under supervision, to clean cemeteries, parks, etc.

Sheriff Lasater advises only prisoners who are not a security risk to the community will be assigned to this detail.

Senior citizens must call the Commission on Aging office at (231) 237-0103 to sign up for the yard cleanup program.

STORY HIGHLIGHT

This Thanksgiving, gas prices are up 95.6 cents per gallon over 2006

The state average is a record high $3.231 per gallon. In 2006, the average was $2.26 per gallon

For the latest Michigan traffic and construction reports, visit www.aaa.com

AAA: Gas prices won't slow holiday travel

An estimated 1.5 million Michiganians said they will travel during the 2007 Thanksgiving holiday period, says AAA Michigan. The Great Lakes region shows the greatest increase in expected air travel compared with Thanksgiving last year (up 4 percent).

Cars, trucks and vans represent the most popular form of Thanksgiving transportation (90 percent) — down 1 percentage point from 2006. Slightly more Great Lakes residents will travel by air this year compared to last (10 percent versus 9 percent).

In Michigan, motorists will find gas prices at record highs for this time of year, paying an average 95.6 cents more per gallon than last year at this time. The statewide average for self-serve regular (as of Nov. 14) is $3.231 per gallon — a record for the Thanksgiving holiday period.

"The interesting trend this holiday season is gas prices," said Claire Lockley, vice-president of travel for The Auto Club Group. "This is the first time that we have seen gas prices topping more than $3 a gallon in November. A year ago prices were about $2.26 a gallon, so this year travelers are really feeling the pinch. But Thanksgiving is traditionally a time for family gatherings and higher gas prices will not discourage Americans from connecting with their loved ones."

To help cope with heavier-than-normal traffic volumes and heightened airport security, AAA recommends arriving at the airport at least two to three hours before scheduled departure times. Check-in requirements for commercial airlines can result in loss of reserved seating for travelers who do not arrive on time (contact each airline directly for check-in rules and regulations).

The 102-hour Thanksgiving Day holiday (6 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 21, to 11:59 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 25) is traditionally a time for family travel. But the holiday coincides with the firearm deer hunting season, which means hunters will take advantage of the long holiday weekend. According to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR), during the 16-day firearm deer season (Nov. 15-30), about 735,000 hunters will spend more than $500 million for food, lodging and transportation.

A large deer herd, combined with large numbers of cars on the road, creates a high probability for collisions. In 2006, 60,875 deer-vehicle crashes were reported. Last year, 12 motorists were killed and 1,477 were injured as a result of vehicle-deer crashes.

During the 2006 Thanksgiving holiday period, 21 persons died in 18 fatal crashes on Michigan roads, compared with 19 deaths in 2005. Restraints were used by 33 percent of the victims who had them available. Six, or 33 percent, of the fatal crashes were alcohol-related.

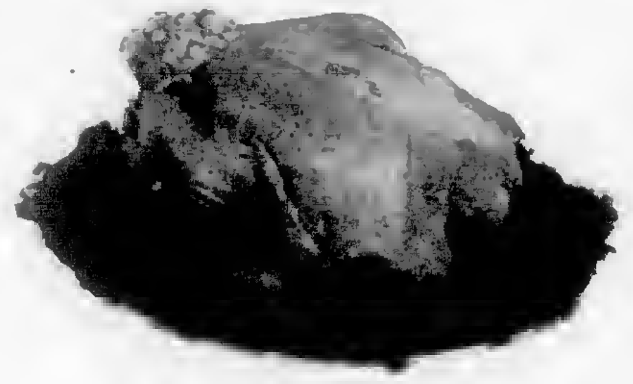
USDA offers holiday food safety tips



- Buy your turkey preferably one to two days before you cook it
- Bag the frozen turkey or keep it separate from fresh produce — never place raw food above cooked food on refrigerator shelves
- Avoid buying fresh, stuffed turkeys — stuffing the turkey is not recommended, cook separately
- To cook a turkey from frozen, add 50 percent of the recommended cooking time
- Wash hands thoroughly when handling raw food
- Avoid cross-contamination — use separate cutting boards for meats and fresh foods
- Always use a food thermometer — turkey should reach an internal temperature of 165 degrees
- Store leftovers right away — the danger zone is between 40 and 140 degrees
- Remove offal meat package from the turkey's cavity before cooking
- Wash your hands with soap and water.
- For a juicy bird, let your turkey stand for 20 minutes after cooking and before carving

Voice of Charlevoix Schools Retires

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Sad to go, but excited to start a new life chapter after 23 years with Charlevoix schools, Joannie Carlson recently began her retirement.

The longtime clerical worker and receptionist didn't waste any time to begin enjoying her newfound free time.

"I'm just busy as a bee trying to get everything done around here (home) that I didn't get done before," she said. "Then, I'm going to stay with my sister in Florida from the end of January to the end of April."

Chances are, if you called Charlevoix schools' central offices since 1984, Carlson has been the voice on the other end of the line.

Carlson's son, Charlevoix mayor Norman Carlson Jr., said he is glad to see her enjoying herself.

"She worked very hard to get where she's at and she deserves her time," he said. "It's definitely our gain that she'll have more time for spending with family and grandkids."

Carlson joked, "The downside is she has all kinds of different projects planned at home which I'm sure I'll be dragged into."

Former co-worker and current Charlevoix Public Schools' business manager Shawn Biddle said Carlson will surely be missed.

"It was sort of like working with your mom," Biddle said. "Joannie always looked out for everybody and kind of had our backs."

She added, "She was always happy, always made you feel really good when you talked to her. She was just a positive person who always had a hug for everyone."

Carlson has three children and five grandchildren.

"I'm looking forward to spending a lot of time with them," she said. "I'm looking forward to spending more time with the ones that live farther away."

Carlson said it was just time to stop working and enjoy her golden years.

"I'm 65, to be 66 in January. I've always worked and I just see so many, especially the teachers, that get to retirement and then they're gone and I want to be able to live a little bit before I kick the bucket," she said with a laugh. "I always enjoyed my job, but it was just time to do something else."

Carlson added that she will travel and do volunteer work in the Charlevoix community as well.

"Oh, the people and the kids I'll miss the most, but I'll still see them. I'll still go to games and still go to plays and be involved in that way," she said. "I loved working at the elementary school, so maybe I'll go back and do some volunteering there."

For now, Carlson said, she will enjoy her favorite hobby, reading and the luxury of sleeping in when she chooses.

"Charlevoix Public Schools have been a very big part of my life and I wish them the best of everything," she said.

Win 'Amazing Race' at Holly Daze

As a part of this year's Holly Daze festivities on Nov. 29 at the Castle in Charlevoix, the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation will unveil a new offering for the live auction patterned after the successful reality television show, "The Amazing Race."

Winning bidders at the live auction will get to participate in the first annual Charlevoix County rendition of Amazing Race. Five teams of two participants will meet at the hospital on the selected date to receive their first clue. From there, it's anybody's guess as to who will win as teams are directed to locations throughout the county.

At each of seven stops, teams will complete a challenge to win points and a prize along with the clue to the next stop in the race. At the end of the race, the winner will be declared based on total points and will be feted at a dinner at the home of Patti and Jim Aikin in Charlevoix.

"We are very excited about this event," said event co-chair, Nancy Wright. "It is one of several experiences that we are offering in the live auction."

Other experiences will include a progressive dinner for eight at the homes of Edith Gilbert, Mary and Chuck Adams and Helen and Ken Merrill, a balloon ride for 10 from Grand Traverse Balloons, a condo in Los Caos, Mexico from DCL Inc. and a "Mad Hatter" Tea Party at the home of Sandy and R.J. Button.

"We also have special items for those not into travel or races," said Mary Faculak, co-chair.

The Holly Daze event will begin at 5:30 p.m. on Nov. 29 at the Castle. Tickets are $100 per person and can be purchased at the Foundation Office or by calling (231) 547-8501.

Camp Daggett receives $200,000 donation

PETOSKEY NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Camp Daggett recently received a $200,000 donation to help eliminate some of the debt incurred from building its Indoor Adventure Center.

Camp Daggett recently received a $200,000 donation to eliminate the debt from building its Indoor Adventure Center.

The funds were donated by the Doll-Loesel Foundation of Bay City which supports education, the arts and feeding the hungry

"To have the burden of that debt lifted has been a huge accomplishment for us," fund development director Jen Booher said.

Built in 2002, the center focuses on adventure education for both children and adults. Through floor activities, vertical elements, a climbing wall and ropes course participants learn more about communication, confidence and the importance of having an encouraging, positive attitude.

Since building the facility, Camp Daggett has reached more people and increased its number of adventure participants by 10,000. The center has also allowed the adventure education program to operate year-round which in turn creates more revenue.

At the same time, the nearly $1 million building has been a financial burden. Even with support from organizations like the Doll-Loesel Foundation — which also donated $25,000 toward the initial construction — Camp Daggett has paid $42,000 per year over the past five years to cover the cost of the mortgage and interest.

"The burden of paying the mortgage and interest on the mortgage was starting to affect our budget," Booher said.

"For them (the foundation) to contribute at this level they gave us the opportunity to communicate to the community the magnitude of our needs and that we do need support," she said. "They really care about non-profits and help in areas that other people won't. There are very few people that support areas such as debt reduction and we were very fortunate to get their support."

Louise Nelle can be contacted at 439-9339, or lnelle@petoskeynews.com.

Students give thanks

Elementary students (K-7) at Northwest Academy held a Thanksgiving Living History Museum. 2nd through 7th grade students selected an historical figure from the era they are studying and learned about their Thankgiving celebrations. Kindergarten and 1st graders were Pilgrims or Native Americans and learned about the First Thanksgiving. The Charlevoix Historical Society donated pictures for the displays. H&D reroutes, takes over part of Pincherry Road

BY STEVE ZUCKER
PETOSKEY NEWS-REVIEW
STAFF WRITER

In the next month crews from H & D Roadbuilding are expected to begin a project to move the northernmost portion of Pincherry Road in Charlevoix County's Hayes Township.

Marking the end of a years-long effort, officials from H & D updated the Charlevoix County Road Commission on the status of the project Monday.

Pincherry Road generally runs north-south between Boyne City-Charlevoix Road and Bay Shore, except for the last half mile near Bay Shore where it heads east to meet up with Towline Road. The project will move the east-west portion on an arc to the north of an existing H & D gravel pit. When the new road is complete the road commission will then turn the old roadway property over to H & D which is footing the bill for the entire project.

Charlevoix County Road Commission manager Pat Harmon explained the project is mutually beneficial for both the road commission and H & D.

He said the road commission gets a new road to replace a section of road that has long been in need of repair while H & D — which owns property on both sides of the existing Pincherry Road right of way — will be more easily able to extend its gravel mining operation to the south.

Harmon said some of the roadbed construction will be done yet this fall, but the road will not be paved and open to traffic until the spring.

Annaliese Voci and Emily Chapdelaine, 6th graders at Charlevoix Middle School, attended a day and a half workshop at East Jordan High School put on by the Young Americans. Over 150 5th-12th graders attended the workshop and performed two shows on Saturday, Nov. 10.

'Four Directions' to be shown on PBS

The locally produced documentary, "The Four Directions and the Waganakising Odawa" is being broadcast throughout Michigan by PBS affiliate stations during November in recognition of Native American month.

Northern Michigan residents can watch the program at 8:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 27 on CMU Public Television.

The Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa produced the half-hour program through the Charlevoix based production company, Real People Media.

During the documentary, narrator Fred Harrington and members of the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa (Waganakising Odawa) explain the spiritual concepts behind the Medicine Wheel. This informative film beautifully captures the tribe's cultural events and illustrates Anishinaabe stories including "The Origin of the Snow Snake," "The Jingle Dress Dance," "Making of Maple Syrup," and "The Great Flood."

Anthropologist and author, Chuck Cleland remarks, "The Four Directions" offers a rich visual tapestry that draws the viewer into the center of the Odawa world. This superb documentary, narrated by tribal elders, makes the complex cycle of Anishinaabe symbolism and cosmology easy for even young viewers to understand. We come to appreciate how the fabric of Odawa cultural life is woven from the threads of ancient tradition as well as modern practice."

For information on purchasing the "Four Directions and the Waganakising Odawa" contact the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Archives and Records Department at (231) 242-1450.

New service from Daman Electric keeps you out of the dark

BY BONNIE STAFFEL
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Imagine that you wake up in the morning and the lights don't go on, and the alarm clock didn't ring — panic ensues as you race around trying to find the right time, get the kids off to school or yourself off to work.

What happened? There was a power outage during the night and shut everything down in the house. You look out at your neighbor's house and they don't have lights either.

To put an end to the power outage chaos, Kirk Daman, owner of Daman Electric Inc. has added generator installation to the company's services.

Daman Electric Inc: has been in the electrical business in the Charlevoix area since May of 1998. Their first big job was building the Beaver Island generator station. Since then, besides installing generators in homes, they have worked with the hospitals as Vicki is an RN who is employed at the Charlevoix Area Hospital and is involved in the disaster preparedness plans for Charlevoix County.

This year they realized that there was a need to add a generator installation to their list of services due to the growth of the number of homes being built here. In addition it was also apparent that the area is susceptible to outages caused by high winds, heavy snows and the possibility of a disaster. They felt that with their experience that their service would to be able to help residents survive on their own during these times.

Keeping the furnace operating is of prime importance as well as saving food in the refrigerator and freezer and if there is a well, providing the family with water. Kirk said a generator will give summertime residents peace of mind to know that it will kick in and take over the duties of keeping the water pipes from freezing and other appliances necessary for the home operation.

If you are considering adding a generator to your home, call Daman Electric at (231) 547-2801. Their e-mail address is kvdaman@freeway.net.

Daman family at a glance

Kirk Daman graduated from Eastern Michigan University in 1986 and worked as a design engineer for the Fairhaven Industries until it closed in 1991. Not wanting to leave Charlevoix to work in the Detroit area, and not finding much industrial work here, he went back to school to become an electrician. He studied for four years with an additional two years in preparation for taking the Masters test. They then started their own electric business in Charlevoix in May of 1998. He met his wife, Vicki, in high school. She is an RN who received her degree also from Eastern Michigan University in 1986. The Damans are the proud parents of three sons. Jed, 19, is a student at Central Michigan University majoring in electrical engineering; Zeke, 16, is a junior at Charlevoix High School; and Eli, 11, is in the fifth-grade at Charlevoix Middle School. In addition, Kirk's parents, Douglas and Maryann Daman moved to Charlevoix in 1992. Their son, Kris, a meat cutter at Oleson's, moved here in 1998.

LLH Graphics changes hands

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

(Above) Charlevoix residents Bobbie and John Rathjens, owners of JBR Graphics and Kelly Media Works, purchased LLH Graphics from Laurie Lesser Hodgson who founded the business in 1996.

A new team has taken on the local Web design and hosting business LLH Graphics.

On Oct. 1, Charlevoix residents John and Bobbie Rathjens, owners of JBR Graphics and Kelly Media Works, purchased LLH Graphics from Laurie Lesser Hodgson who founded the business in 1996.

Hodgson, 55, said she made the decision to sell to free up time for her to pursue other personal and business ventures including a brochure and print product business called North Bays Design Group, building a waterfront hotel in downtown East Jordan and spending time with her growing family.

The Rathjens are now operating the business under their established names JBR Graphics and Kelly Media Works as well as LLH Graphics.

The proud parents of three started in the Web design world in 2003 but had trouble breaking into the local market with Hodgson dominating in Charlevoix.

"Laurie had all the local clients," Bobbie said.

The Rathjens will now host and update Hodgson's 200 existing sites, including that of her first customer, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

"So many of my clients are friends and my friends are clients. I wanted to leave them in the hands of people that would appeal to them," Hodgson said. "I feel like I'm leaving it in good, capable hands and my clients will be happy."

Hodgson said clients that regularly needled her about her poky response time will be pleased with the Rathjens' quick turnaround. They offer after hours and weekend service.

The Rathjens plan to keep the business' existing structure and will enhance it with the addition of new hosting products, e-mail services, a help desk, spam filtering and search engine optimization.

Bobbie has an academic and professional background in information technology and John has the business and graphic design background. He is also a DJ for 106-KHQ.

"We are local, friendly, personable and very reasonable in price and we do a great job. We are thorough," Bobbie said.

Price packages are available for new site design and come with a 30-day "free tweak" package, e-mail and statistical reporting on site traffic. Non-profit discounts are available.

"Your quote is the price you are going to get," John said.

They are currently building a site for the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority.

To contact John and Bobbie Rathjens at LLH Graphics, JBR Graphics and Kelly Media Works, call (231) 547-4725 or e-mail helpdesk@jbrgraphics.com.

Norwood Area Historical Society elects officers, honors contributors

Members of the Norwood Area Historical Association concluded the 2007 season with a business meeting, election of officers and award presentations followed by a social hour and pot-luck dinner at the old school house in the village.

Nancy Cleland was elected president for the next two years. Yasmin Richmond will be vice-president, Jeannette Kling, secretary, and Jim DePriest will continue to serve as treasurer.

Volunteer of the Year Award was presented to Marion Shea-Light by facilities chair Pam Gnodtke, in recognition of her work for historic preservation in the community. Aside from donating time and her art work to the Historical Society, the monumental task of replacing the steeple on the Methodist Church was spearheaded by Shea-Light. She stated that news articles picked up by wire services helped with publicizing the needs nation-wide.

The Norwood Methodist Church, built in 1884, raised $60,000 to save the steeple and have it restored. A scrapbook has been compiled of contribution efforts on this project. The three-year project to refurbish the steeple and tower was concluded with a rededication last August.

Marion received the traveling plaque of the Old School, a gift certificate and her name has been inscribed on the society's volunteer plaque in the school building.

A life membership in the Historical Society was awarded to Marian Taylor Beatty by president, Jack Costolo. Richmond reviewed Beatty's life story and contributions to our community.

Charlevoix Historic Commission preps for naming second district

The Charlevoix Train Depot was designated as the first Historic District. Consideration of other districts will be discussed at a forum on Dec. 11.

As the City of Charlevoix Historic Commission prepares to designate it's second historic district in the city, the City of Charlevoix has been awarded a $1,000 grant by the National Trust for Historic Preservation from the Michigan Preservation Fund.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation is a 52-year-old non-profit membership organization chartered by Congress to encourage public participation in all aspects of historic preservation. The seed money is a matching grant to help support costs related to the establishment of a Central Business Historic District Forum.

The members of the City of Charlevoix Historic Commission are planning an all day educational forum on the benefits and restrictions of historic designation as well as the local economic benefits and restrictions of historic districts. The forum will be presented from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 11 at the Charlevoix Public Library. Presenters will be Kristine M. Kidorf of Kidorf Preservation Consulting, Richard Karp of Karp and Associates, and Michael J. Matts, director of historic preservation and planning for Gray and Pope Inc.

All interested citizens, including property and business owners in the downtown business district, and owners of historic buildings are encouraged to attend.

Reservations can be made by calling Linda Weller at the Charlevoix city manager's office, (231) 547-3270 by Wednesday, Dec. 5.

Marines kick off Toys for Tots campaign

The Northern Michigan Detachment of the Marine Corps League is conducting its traditional quest for new toys.

Last week, league members placed their well-known toy collection boxes at a number of places in Charlevoix. New unwrapped toys and gifts are needed for all ages from babies through late-teens. The collection drive will end on Dec. 17.

Between 13,000 and 15,000 toys have been donated and distributed locally during the drives in each of the last several years.

A retired Marine Major and his wife, in Los Angeles, Calif. started the Toys for Tots program 50 years ago. It has since expanded into a national program involving thousands of Marines in hundreds of cities, resulting in millions of toys being distributed to children each holiday season.

Toys for Tots is a 501c3 organization. Cash donations are also accepted. To contribute, call Russ Bolt at (231) 547-4855.

Charlevoix drop-off locations include Kmart, Rite Aid, Oleson's Food Store, Glen's Market, Ace Hardware, Pat McKeown Ford, Harbor Industries, The Clothing Company, Charlevoix Elementary School, Dollar Tree, Dollar General, Holiday Gas Station, Bolt's Gallery, Copy Plus, Charlevoix Area Hospital, Fox Motors, Weathervane, Kiwanis Club, Flap Jack Family Restaurant, Coast Guard Station Charlevoix and Bay Winds Credit Union.

Chamber Orchestra to perform Handel's Messiah

Advanced tickets are now available for two performances of Handel's "Messiah" by the Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra, under the direction of Maestro Matthew Hazelwood.

The performances will take place at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 18 and Thursday, Dec. 20, at Saint Francis Xavier Church in Petoskey.

"At last year's single performance we not only sold out but we had to turn people away at the door," said executive director, Dale Hull. "We promised not to let that happen again. With the help of a corporate sponsorship by the Bank of Northern Michigan we are able to schedule two performances this season."

The orchestra as well as the newly formed Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra Chorus will perform Handel's most famous oratorio featuring soprano, Sarah Hibbard who sang "Messiah" with the orchestra last year, as did mezzo soprano Martha Hart who most recently sang the title role in "Scout" with the orchestra last June. David Theis will sing the tenor arias and Peter Sims will sing bass.

Sims is enjoying his sixth year as a year-round resident of northern Michigan. He serves as the director of the Northern Michigan Chorale and has been charged with preparing the Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra Chorus for this special performance of Messiah under the direction of Matthew Hazelwood.

Reserved patron seats at $50 are available now exclusively at Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey. Interested patrons may purchase reserved, numbered seats in person or by calling the arts center at (231) 347-4337. General seating is $20 for adults and $10 for students of any age. General seating tickets are available at area bookstores and chambers of commerce in Harbor Springs, Petoskey, Boyne City, and East Jordan as well as at the Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey.

Tips to avoid Alzheimer's

Sue Bergmann

For most families, holidays are filled with opportunities for togetherness, sharing, laughter and memories. Holidays can also be filled with stress, disappointment and sadness for others.

The person with Alzheimer's, because of cognitive changes may feel a special sense of loss during the holidays. At the same time, caregivers may feel overwhelmed maintaining holiday traditions while caring for a loved one. Caregivers may also feel hesitant to invite family and friends over to share the holiday for fear they will be uncomfortable with behavior changes in the family member. If you're feeling guilty, angry or frustrated before, during or after holiday celebrations, it may help to know that these feelings are normal and that you are not alone.

Suggestions to keep your holidays healthy, happy and memorable:

Adjust Expectations

Discuss major holiday celebrations with relatives and close friends to make sure that they understand the situation and have realistic expectations.

Give yourself permission to do only what you can reasonably manage.

Familiarize your relatives and close friends by writing a letter before the gathering to help them understand your current situation, ask for their help and support.

Involve the Person with Dementia

Prepare the person for the holiday by involving him or her in all stages of holiday preparation. This is an opportunity for you to spend quality time together.

Maintain the person's normal routine so that holiday preparations don't become disruptive or confusing.

Build on past traditions and memories.

Adapt Gift Giving

Encourage people to buy useful gifts for the person such as an identification bracelet (available through Alzheimer's Association Safe Return); comfortable easy-to-remove clothing; audio tapes of favorite music; videos of family members; photo albums. Warn people about difficult or unsafe gifts.

Allow the person to join in giving gifts, baking cookies or to help wrap gifts.

Don't neglect your own needs. If friends or family members ask what you want for a gift, suggest a gift certificate to a restaurant, laundry or cleaning service. Celebrate the holiday by giving such a gift to yourself.

Ask for help and support. Develop a list of your tasks and responsibilities so you can respond with specific ideas if someone ever asks, "What can I do to help?"

Try to be Flexible

Sundowning Syndrome (confusion worsens as the sun sets) can be heightened by evening meals, consider celebrating over a lunch or brunch. Also consider, serving nonalcoholic drinks and keeping the room bright.

Prepare to deal with your post-holiday letdown by prearranging in-home care services.

Remember that holiday gatherings and/or celebrations are opportunities to share time with the people you love. Make these celebrations easy on yourself and the person you are caring for so that you may concentrate on enjoying the holidays together.

To your health during the holidays.

Hey Jane!

M.J. Cargill

Hey Jane!

My brother is causing me some worries. He writes, edits and then rewrites his own obituary! I'm 70 and he is 72 and I think he is way out-of-line with this type of activity. I think it is triggered by his best friend's death so I understand why the subject of obituaries is on his mind but he is carrying this too far and driving me nuts! Is he depressed and obsessed with his own death or is this just a reaction to someone close to him dying? How do I get him to stop?

Had Enough.

Dear Had Enough. It can rock our world when we lose our best friend and maybe your brother's depression and focus on recapping his own life is his way of adjusting to this loss. That said, it is not easy to be around someone who is totally preoccupied with a single topic or issue. Their out of balance behaviors can seep into the lives of the people around them particularly family members. It makes all of you sort of depressed. I think it is fair for you to tell him that you don't want to be forced to read his obit one moment sooner than you have to and please leave you out of the feedback loop! If he continues to ignore you and the obsession goes on, look for some professional help. Your feelings of impatience and irritability are a natural reaction to a real life adjustment.

Jane

Charlevoix Courier's own senior advice columnist M.J. Cargill polled 22 local people about writing their own obituaries. Their responses were basically in favor of it. Jane heard the expected reasons with stories about omissions and inaccuracies but there were also heart tugging ones as well. There was a World War II nurse who has written her own obit so her family does not forget her war experiences. One man decided to reveal a hidden past life and a couple wish to acknowledge a child they gave up for adoption in their teenage years. But most people want to leave behind words of comfort and sincere advice hoping to reach their children and grandchildren. There are several sites online giving guidance on obituary writing with examples and even fill-in forms.

Area educators learn at language arts workshops

More than 780 educators from across the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District spent a collective 3,200 hours in professional development workshops recently.

The school staff members — teachers, counselors, bus drivers, custodians, secretaries, administrators and others — attended sessions to help them improve student learning and the services they provide students, parents and the community. Keynote speaker Murray Banks started the morning with a presentation geared toward motivating staff to be at "the top of their game" every day at school. ISD superintendent Mark Eckhardt noted that the area-wide professional development day provides staff an opportunity to pull together to learn from each other and work together to achieve more for their students.

Other workshops that were a hit included Lisa Murphy, The Ooey Gooey Lady who wooed early educators with her simple art and science projects for young children and Trina Boyle-Holmes from the Michigan Department of Education who helped area physical education staff share research-based best practices. Workshops were also geared toward science teachers, English Language Arts staff, secretaries, band instructors, art teachers and food service providers, among others. Char-Em ISD serves students, staff and schools in Charlevoix, Emmet and northern Antrim counties.

Input sought for county plan

The Charlevoix County Planning Commission is in the process of developing a new Future Land Use Plan for the county.

The purpose of this plan is to guide future growth and development over the next 20 years. As part of this effort, the Planning Commission is seeking public comment on the Vision Statement, which was developed in 2002. The commission wants to determine if the Vision Statement continues to represent what the residents and property owners would like Charlevoix County to look like 20 years from now. A survey has been created to make it easy to share comments.

To take the Vision Statement survey, visit www.charlevoixcounty.org (go to the "WHAT'S NEW?" box). To request a paper copy of the survey, call the Charlevoix County Planning Department at (231) 547-7234.

All responses are anonymous.

According to Larry Sullivan, Charlevoix County Planning Director, the county's future land use plan will be a vehicle for outlining and documenting the future character of the county as desired by its residents. The Vision Statement will be an integral component of the Future Land Use Plan. The County Future Land Use Plan will also include demographic information, natural resource trends, and goals, objectives and policies to assist in balancing continued development while preserving Charlevoix County's quality of life.

While township, village and city plans address issues within each community's boundaries, the county plan is intended to recognize and address issues that transcend the boundaries of individual communities. The County Future Land Use Plan will focus on this broader view and will provide a coordinating framework for the township and city future land use plans.

Sullivan noted that the County Future Land Use Plan is intended to complement, not supersede township, city or village plans within the county. He stated that a land use plan is not a zoning ordinance. Zoning ordinances are laws which provide specific rules governing development on individual properties while plans are more general in nature and are intended to recommend general types of land uses. All of the cities and townships within Charlevoix County currently have zoning ordinances in effect which provide very detailed regulations.

For more information about the Future Land Use Plan, contact the Charlevoix County Planning Department at (231) 547-7234 or by e-mail at planning@charlevoixcounty.org.

Last year, the project committee helped 175 families including 352 children and 254 adults with a budget of approximately $6,500.

The committee's stated goal is the same as when the program started in the early 1980s, "Every child in the Charlevoix School District will have a good Christmas and receive a new article of clothing, a toy or a fun gift along with new mittens, hats and socks."

The project group has also found many needy senior citizens who live alone and would not have a good Christmas dinner without their help.

To donate, send checks made payable to the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project to our treasurer Carolyn Batdorf, 04903 Marion Center Rd., Charlevoix, MI, 49720.

For more information, call Bev Boss, chairman of the Community Christmas Project at (231) 547-2078.

Career criminal's exploits go boom!

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

What began with a stolen car, a police chase and jail time for a Cheboygan man ended with threats of violence to local law enforcement officials.

While awaiting his court date in the Charlevoix County Jail, prosecutors allege, Anthony Duane Jacobs concocted a complex scheme to be both architect and champion of a series of bomb threats, only to have the plan backfire.

"His idea was to come up with a plan to get a plea agreement for the fleeing and eluding and the Emmet County charges (two counts of auto theft) by having somebody place Molotov cocktails or other explosive devices at a judge and deputy's house," Fanara said. "Then he would report it and take credit for being the hero who stopped it."

Anthony Jacobs

However, Jacobs' supposed plot blew up when, after failing repeatedly to convince his brother-in-law Greg Salinas of Cheboygan to co-conspire by placing the devices at the homes of Judge Richard May and a Charlevoix County Sheriff deputy and calling in the bomb threat, police found a letter from Jacobs to Salinas in Jacobs' home requesting his brother-in-law's compliance.

"He (Jacobs) asked his brother-in-law and he (Salinas) wouldn't do it; he's a stand-up guy," she said. "So, Jacobs still reported it stating there were (explosive) devices at two locations, so that's why he is facing solicitation and charges of making a false report since the bombs didn't exist."

Could City block adult bookstores?

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Could an adult oriented bookstore set up shop in the City of Charlevoix?

This is the question the city planning commission tackled at its November meeting. And the answer under the current zoning ordinance is "yes."

According to city zoning administrator, Dianne Manore, a rumor of an adult bookstore looking to locate in Charlevoix prompted some research and the finding was "there is nothing pro or con in the zoning ordinance about adult bookstores."

The stores are permitted as a use-by-right, which Manore said means they could move into a retail space anywhere in the city, no strings attached.

This is a reality the commission wants to change. Manore said a use-by-right can't be prohibited but can be regulated. A regulation that may be considered is a distance limitation on the store's proximity to churches and schools.

"When they (adult bookstores) go in it typically creates an uproar in neighborhoods and probably rightfully so," Planning Commission Chairman John Hess said. "By law, we can't deny them but we want to make sure there is

These attractions and more will bring the Christmas spirit to Charlevoix with the first annual Flurry Fest, to be held in conjunction with the annual Merchants Open House, Saturday, Dec. 1. Organizers said the new event offers a way to add some traditional family fun to the annual shopping event.

Sign of the season

At around 10 a.m. on Nov. 24 a car traveling south slid into the guardrail on the west side of Bridge Street. An attempt to hit the brakes by a vehicle following resulted in him crashing into the Island at the end of Michigan Avenue and taking down directional signs.

International fraud warning

On November 16, 2007, the Charlevoix Police Department took a complaint of an apparent international fraud. A subject using a TDD, or Telecommunication Device for the Deaf Internet Company, requested information from a local business about their products. This inquiry was followed up with several emails before an order was placed using a credit card.

After waiting for the credit card payment to clear the bank, the buyer contacted Fed-Ex to pick up the product. When Fed-Ex arrived, they refused to pick up the product and advised the business that this transaction was a fraud. The items were to be sent to the country of Ghana.

"The Charlevoix Police Department and the FBI were contacted and it is believed that the credit card information used to make the purchase was stolen and the proper owner was not aware of the theft.

The Charlevoix Police Department would like to remind the public and local businesses to safeguard their personal and financial information so they are not a victim of fraud or identify theft.

If someone believes that they have been the victim of identify theft, they should immediately contact their local law enforcement, financial institutions and the three credit bureaus to place a fraud alert.

Bomb threat plot goes awry

were called in and troopers from the Michigan State Police investigated the Oct. 8 incident.

"Jacobs told…that he had information that someone had placed a bomb at one of the Charlevoix Sheriff Deputy's house [sic]...and also placed a bomb at Judge Richard May('s) house," stated John Janicki, a trooper with the Michigan State Police in his affidavit of probable cause. "Jacobs stated he was concerned because the threat sounded like the stuff was already there."

Janicki further stated, "Jacobs not only sent the letter requesting the two Molotov cocktails be placed, but included a map, instructions on the creation of the devices and directions (and) Jacobs called Salinas persistently asking if he had placed the items at the addresses yet."

The deputy's residence was threatened but the judge had vacated the targeted home prior to the bomb threat.

In addition to an Aug. 20 high-speed chase through Charlevoix which resulted in fleeing and eluding charges, 33-year-old Jacobs was arrested by state policemen and charged on Monday, Nov. 19 with four counts in connection with the alleged bomb threat scheme before magistrate Larry Burgess.

Jacobs was charged with the following four counts on Monday, Nov. 19: two counts of solicitation of explosives—placing near property, for allegedly soliciting Salinas to place bottles filled with gas and topped off with a rag (aka Molotov cocktails) in or near a residence, "with the intent to frighten, terrorize, intimidate, harass, injure, or kill any person," which are each 15-year, $10,000 felonies; and two counts of making a false report of a bomb or other harmful device which are both four-year, $2,000 felonies and Jacobs has been labeled as a habitual offender—fourth offense notice which could bump Jacobs' sentence, if found guilty of the charges, to life in prison.

And, prosecutors said, this behavior is nothing new for Jacobs.

"He already had 20 felony convictions," said Chief-Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Shaynee Fanara of Jacobs' Nov. 21 sentencing hearing.

Jacobs' prior convictions include forgery, writing bad checks, receiving and concealing stolen property, breaking and entering of vehicles and home invasion.

Though officials see nothing humorous about Jacobs' foiled plan, police reports read like something out of a dark comedy as, Fanara added, Jacobs planned to involve at least one family member in his debacle with intentions of pinning the plot on an unsuspecting, fellow inmate.

While Charlevoix's 90th District Judge May's name has been released, prosecutors are currently withholding the name of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Deputy, they say, to protect his family.

"It's bad enough families of police officers have to live with the stress of their spouse's job, but it's quite another thing for them, especially the children, to have to suffer with threats to their safety," Fanara said.

Since a Charlevoix judge was threatened, Jacobs' preliminary examination date on the issue of the supposed bomb threats has yet to be determined while officials find a judge from out of the area to handle the case.

Following court on Wednesday, Jacobs was transferred to Jackson Correctional holding facility where he will be processed and quarantined for up to three months before being sent to a prison of the department of corrections' designation.

Jacobs' has been appointed public defender Mike Atchison.

a proper location for them like anything else in the zoning ordinance."

Exclusionary zoning is illegal, which is why Hess said adult oriented bookstores can't be prohibited.

"We aren't on a hunt to totally eliminate them. It's futile, you just can't do that. We saw it in Bear Creek and Traverse City. It's a well proven fact — why pay an attorney to lose a case?" he said.

The case in Petoskey's Bear Creek Township Hess referenced involved the company, which operates the adult-themed XPectations store on U.S. 131. Owner of XPectations, Richard Olsafsky, had filed suit against Emmet County, arguing that county zoning provisions which restrict placement of adult-themed businesses would chill and burden the company in exercising constitutionally-protected expressions. The discretion which the ordinance gives county officials for zoning permits and reviews is one example of a provision Olsafsky took issue with. Courts have found this discretion can't be applied to businesses when free-speech guarantees are at stake and a settlement was reached in January.

When asked if he is looking to locate a store in Charlevoix, Olsafsky, who owns similar stores in Grawn and Williamsburg, said, "I don't know if there's enough people there to support a store. I really don't think that's going to happen."

The planning commission instructed city attorney Jim Young to review the city's options to regulate adult bookstores. He is expected to present his findings at the commission's meeting scheduled to take place at 6 p.m. Dec. 10 at Charlevoix City Hall, located at 210 State St.

Any zoning change will come first as a recommendation from the planning commission and must ultimately be approved by Charlevoix City Council.

First Flurry Fest slated for Dec. 1

FLURRY

Open House to get some local people as well as people from our neighboring communities into town for some Christmas fun," said Patt Blanchard, Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors member.

Blanchard, also the chair of the Retail Committee within the Chamber BOD, said the goal for Flurry Fest is not only to bring a traditional family event to the city but also to start a new Charlevoix tradition.

"We hope it will grow from here. Next year, with the completion of East Park, we think it will be even better," she said.

The combination of the two events will bring activities that last throughout the day, beginning at noon with the Merchants' Open House. Also at noon, the Charlevoix Volunteer Fire Department will bring Santa to East Park in the city fire truck, along with candy offered by Northwestern Bank.

After submitting their Christmas wishes to Santa, children can head with their families to the Charlevoix Cinema to see a full-length holiday feature, sponsored by Charlevoix State Bank, for only the price of a canned good donation.

Also throughout the afternoon, area businesses will offer the holiday specials traditionally associated with the Merchants' Open House.

Flurry Fest fun begins at 5 p.m., when a tent on the corner of Clinton and Bridge streets will house anyone interested in casting a vote for the best hot chocolate in town. Area restaurants -- Grey Gables, Alcove Cafe, Stafford's Weathervane, Zaccaro's, Whitney's and Woolly Bugger -- will showcase their hot cocoa, competing for the title, also offering hot chocolate for sale and other baked goodies. During the eating and fun, live bands including the Petoskey Steel Drum Band, Pine River Jazz and Tuba Christmas bands will offer entertainment to the crowd.

Volunteer firefighters will contribute again, roasting chestnuts in the tent.

"The driving force behind this event is to help bring the community spirit to the open house and offer some family-oriented events that last all day," said Sue Antoinne of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce.

With the right weather, such as the fluffy white blanket that fell last week, and the right atmosphere, influenced by the new city Christmas lights, Antoinne said circumstances stand to bring some strong holiday cheer to the city.

Is Charlevoix the 'right place' for sex shops?

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Sex shops in Charlevoix? Not if the city planners have their way.

No doubt the planning commission has the city's best economic interests in mind by saying they merely want to find the "right place" for said businesses. After all, the popular school of thought among the so-called moral majority is sex-oriented businesses and their various accouterments are guaranteed to lower property values, invite criminal activity and generally raze regions to ruin—a magical thought called secondary effect.

However, I would rather look at the issue from a legal standpoint than one of subjective, arbitrary, capricious and dogmatic doctrine.

Though most areas have laws which provide for adult businesses, municipalities may pass oppressive zoning, a kind of ipso facto prohibition.

In case after case, sex shops lose to cities who cite fear of the unprovable secondary effects such as increased criminal activity. This rhetoric being only slightly more absurd and widespread than the drug gateway theory long ago debunked as rhetorical rubbish, but nonetheless prescribed to the masses as an excuse for strangling civil rights.

The question isn't why theocracies demonize sex businesses, but why people of a so-called free country are still tormented by theocracy.

Don't believe religion still controls government? Consider Alabama's 11th Circuit Court of Appeals, which quoted a lower court when telling adult book store owner Sherri Williams "to hold that public morality can never serve as a rational basis for legislation ... would cause a 'massive disruption of the social order,'" just before ordering her to close her door for the third time since it is illegal in the entire state to sell sex toys.

I looked for historical evidence of a single secular sect which demonized sex and found mainstream religions the most egregious enemy of human sexuality.

Some may fear putting a purveyor of porn next to an ice-cream shop will decimate sales in a resort town and, much like the obsessive-compulsive who repeatedly flips a switch to prevent some impending catastrophe, we legislate based on perceived fears allowing the superstitious among us to labor under the heavy heel of illusory terror and crushing the rest of us in their wake.

Wondering where all these activist judges I keep hearing about were when I needed them most, I consulted the dutiful defenders of liberty at the American Humanist Association (AHA) which condemned the addlepated Alabama arbiters for their poor decision.

Heartened at the thought I wasn't alone, and relieved I wouldn't have to pitch my collection of vintage girlie mag's, I called AHA President, attorney and professor of constitutional law, Mel Lipmann, to better understand this ongoing assault on civil liberty.

Lipmann explained what many fear to mention: "This is part of the overall undue influence that fundamentalist religion is having in our country."

As extremist Muslim governments dehumanize women, to the point even rape victims are punished, our own society at large falls victim to the whacky whimsy of tyrannical theologians in our political system.

"Moral values, for most people, are personal matters," Lipmann said. "Extremists believe it is their religious obligation to foist their morality on others."

And so our pious politicos legislate the will of the morally and intellectually lowest among us, justifying their actions by citing the dogmatic doctrine of arcane voodoo with a result of outlawing liberty and making criminals where none before existed.

Make no mistake, these puritanical prudes will not stop until "Not in your bedroom" is as well-known a battle cry as "Not in my backyard."

The more they regurgitate anecdotal propaganda about exploitation of women, the farce of porn addiction and cliché concerns over our children, the more we sane citizens defend personal choice and stand for those freedoms denied us.

Few things are as immoral as standing between your fellow man and the fiscal, physical and psychological pleasures which harm no one.

As long as morality is filtered through the eye of the oppressor, freedom will continue to flounder; will we stand by and watch it die?

DR. DECOR

Barbara Kopitz

I attended a variety of parties this summer and made note of the different decorating and entertaining styles.

Along with their style, the lesson at the Belvedere Avenue home of Jerry and Barbara Sitner was how to easily and gracefully prepare a dinner for 10 directly after we had all gone to movies at the Charlevoix Cinema for one of Bill Supernaw's excellent "Super Sunday" selections.

I particularly enjoy home decor where the owner has his or her own "look." Barbara called and said, "Come to my messy house, for dinner." (How many times have you heard people say, "I'm sorry, my house is a mess", and it's really not?)

We entered through the garden. It foretold the look of the house. It was glorious, wild and free, yet well-planned. I'm not a gardener so I can't give you the details except to say: lots of tall, colorful healthy-looking flowering plants growing close to each other and swaying in the breeze.

Inside, what I saw was an older home updated in a comfy and chic manner. It could almost be construed as messy but that was clearly part of her style, and I mean style. It was great. It might fit into the category of "shabby chic," although it was too original to fit into any category but her own.

The kitchen was all in white but dominated by a stunning Ralph Lauren wallpaper with a white background and blue clustered flowers and blue and white plaid curtains.

In the dining room, the old wood trestle table had backless bench seating on one side and the rest of the seating was unmatched chairs. The bench seating was a smart idea because when it's not in use it tucks under the table. The dining room was narrow so this setup allowed just enough room for a sideboard and a path between the kitchen and living room.

When we arrived, the dining table was set with a colorful combination of eclectic dishes and striking cloth napkins. Each napkin was different but they worked together in spite of their various colors and patterns and different ruffles and fringes.

The powder room had a curtain of white layered ruffles. The guest towels where antique embroidered linen with lacy trims. The walls were decorated with a collection of old wooden hand mirrors. The sink was set into an old cabinet and the wallpaper had a navy background with tiny white flowers. Within this small room everything fit the "look."

The same easy style of the home was reflected in the charming way Barb and Jerry hosted the dinner party. They made it easy on themselves and thus easy on their guests.

The living room had an armoire, in the chipped and scratched style. The doors were wide open and from there we could pour our own drinks. We took our drinks out to the front porch.

The porch chairs were all individually collected antique white painted wicker rockers. The eclectic pillows were in soft blue tones of stripes and polka dots. "I picked the pillows up here, there and everywhere throughout the years," Barb said. "They're not the waterproof kind. I like cotton."

The ready-made appetizers were mostly dips: a cherry mustard for dipping pretzels, a hummus and a whitefish spread with assorted crackers. Everything was brought to the porch on two large trays, which made the clearing easy.

Dinner was served buffet style from the dining room sideboard. She warmed a bottle of vodka marinara sauce, cut up some parsley and added it to the freshly cooked papardelle noodles. This was accompanied by a small dish of pesto and another of grated romano cheese. I added both and it was tasty. A large tossed salad and garlic bread rounded out the presentation. The cooking and clean-up was minimal.

Our hostess had a bubbly, welcoming personality, an important ingredient for a successful evening. I'd never been to their home before and did not know them well. I felt so welcomed when she said to me, "Sit next to me at the table. I haven't had a chance to talk with you."

A "homemade" (store bought) cherry pie with streusel topping served warm with vanilla ice cream was assembled on dishes in the kitchen and served directly to the guests. A large platter of luscious fresh peaches was added to the table.

We sat close and cozy around the table and talked and laughed for hours. Isn't that what entertaining is all about? Isn't that why we invite people over, to offer them a good time? And since it can be done so simply, is there any excuse for not inviting company over?

THANKS TO SENIOR SUPPORTERS

Editor:

Great appreciation goes out to all the seniors, County taxpayers, Commission on Aging board members, staff and colleagues considered stakeholders, who have been involved with the Senior Services Assessment process and follow up action planning. Thanks also to the above and other volunteers who have committed to working on subcommittees to improve services to seniors in Charlevoix County.

A special thank you to Dean Solomon at the Charlevoix County MSU Extension Office for his time, hard work and expertise in prioritizing the actions to address our recent assessment.

Dean Solomon's presentation to staff and the board were very appreciated and necessary to continue with the COA's work in progress. Your statistics are very important to proceed with our action plan.

It was very interesting to see the similarities between staff, board and stakeholders and know that we are all on the same page, working towards the same goal of improving services to seniors in Charlevoix County. Please be reassured that all of us at the Commission on Aging are busy developing a work plan and goals. These will be published as we launch new and expanded services and improve the quality of our offerings. Thank you for your continued support.

NO CUTS TO TRANSIT

Editor,

The Charlevoix County Transit offered the open door bus service going to Gaylord, Petoskey and Traverse for people who are elderly, disabled, unable to drive for some reason or those who just take the bus, giving these people an opportunity to go out of town.

It is my understanding that one person (Michael Burr) called the Charlevoix County Transit and some commissioners and complained about the transit offering people a ride to go out of town. It is also my understanding that the commissioners had approved of these trips and now due to one complaint, they have reversed their decision.

You and I know that people drive out of town on a daily basis for many different reasons.

In my opinion this offering by the Charlevoix County Transit was done in good faith for those of us who are elderly, disabled, can not drive for some reason or just take the bus and may be looking forward to an opportunity to out of town.

I for one am very disappointed in how this was handled, due to one complaint. I feel that one person should not decide what is best for the County as a whole.

THANKS TO RED CROSS

Editor:

During this season of Thanksgiving, I would like to express my gratitude to the American Red Cross for their daily dedication to saving the lives of the sick and injured. I am tremendously grateful for the volunteers in Charlevoix who help to make the blood drives happen.

Charlevoix had two blood drives during November. The drive at Bethany Lutheran Church on the 8th, coordinated by Edith Dale, collected 25 pints, meeting their goal. The community drive at the Reformed Church exceeded the goal on Nov. 15 by collecting 76 pints.

The efforts of the volunteers and donors, which include work, scheduling and patience, are so worthwhile. The 101 pints from the two blood drives could affect up to 300 patients.

If you volunteered, baked, put up posters, put up banners, donated blood, encouraged someone to donate, or helped in any way with the blood drives, thank you!

Happy holidays, everyone! See you on Jan. 17, 2008 at the next Red Cross community blood drive at the Reformed Church.

VETERANS AFFAIRS OFFERS IMPORTANT SERVICES

Editor:

The Veterans Affairs Committee of Charlevoix County has been given the task of ensuring that all eligible veterans receive all available benefits from federal, state and county governments. The primary way this is accomplished is through the County Veterans Affairs director and his office. The secondary way we accomplish this is through the members of the Veterans Affairs Committee who are to actively stay informed of any changes in the laws effecting veterans benefits, the special needs of local veterans, and by informing all veterans of Charlevoix County, through the media, veterans organizations and personal contacts, changes concerning their benefits. Each war or conflict has its own unique set of problems affecting the lives of our veterans. Because of this fact, the Veterans Affairs Committee is to be composed of competent and concerned veterans, representing the different wars or conflicts, to ensure that no veterans are denied their benefits or refused assistance. The Veterans Affairs Committee has been requested to do more than just attend a monthly meeting and approve the minutes of the previous meeting. All veterans gave some and some veterans gave all for our Country and we are charged with the duty to see that our comrades in arms are never neglected or forgotten. The above having been said, it is of vital importance that the appointment process by the Charlevoix County Commissioners take into account the duties required of the Veterans Affairs Committee to ensure that any appointee is capable and willing to perform the task and to be sure that personal bias or political ambition is not part of the equation. This is the mission of the Charlevoix County Veterans Affairs Committee as I perceive it and ask the cooperation of all concerned.

HIST. SOCIETY SPAGHETTI DINNER A SUCCESS

Editor:

The Board of Directors of the Charlevoix Historical Society thanks Terry Left and his staff at the Villager Pub for their contribution to the 10th annual 2007 Historical Society Spaghetti Dinner held Nov. 7. It was an outstanding success! Terry and his staff did a professional job of helping the Society members, who were the wait staff for the evening, keep their thumbs out of the spaghetti. And with Terry's contribution of the spaghetti dinners, this fundraiser was a great financial boost for the Society.

The evening was not only fun for the Society members wait staff but also a festive time for the guests from our membership and the community. Terry's staff was gracious, patient and so easy to work with that everyone had a really good time with special thanks to the "angel in the back room" who was always one step ahead of us.

Thanks to Terry and the Villager staff the Spaghetti Dinner was a major contribution to the Charlevoix Historical Society and, through us, to the whole Charlevoix Community.

The Board of Directors of the Charlevoix Historical Society

LOCAL BUSINESS HELPS TO COLLECT COATS

Editor:

As the winter months descend upon our community, it also brings the problem of warm coats and jackets for some of our Charlevoix families. This year the owner of the Clothing Company, Jacq Dipert, has joined with the Charlevoix Christmas Project in the first annual Christmas Project Coat Drive to help solve this problem. The Christmas Project Committee wishes to thank the Clothing Company, its owner Jacq Dipert, and her sales associates for making the coat project a success. Thank you's also go out to the Charlevoix community, who gave from the heart so others could be warm this winter and who literally took garments off their own backs and donated them to others.

There has always been a need for coats and jackets and each year the Christmas Project has more in need than a supply. The Clothing Company hosting the first annual coat sale and exchange has given local residents as opportunity to contribute to a great cause and help their fellow man.

FACTS ABOUT KOREAN WAR

Editor:

The Korean war was the result of superpower rivalry at the expense of the Korean people. At the Potsdam Conference, President Roosevelt persuaded Stalin to join the war against Japan after the war in Europe was won. At the Yalta Conference, President Truman and Stalin agreed to divide Korea in half, with the Soviet Union occupying the north and the United States occupying the south, without Korean consent.

In June of 1950, North Korea tried to reunite Korea by military force without success. In September of 1950, General Macarthur lead an invasion of Korea in an attempt to reunite Korea through military force. When he neared the Yalu River border with China, Chinese military forces attacked his military forces. When General Macarthur chose to extend the war into China, President Truman fired him.

The United States suffered 157,629 military casualties including 33,629 deaths. South Korea sustained 1,312,836 military casualties, including 415,004 dead. Communist casualties were 2 million.

The Allied occupation of Germany in Europe was more complicated than Korea, yet Germany was successfully reunited without war.

Nighttime surveillance photographs from satellites showed an illuminated South Korea and a dark North Korea. According to the United States government explanation that proved the economic superiority of a United States supported government. What was not revealed was South Korea has 20 nuclear power stations while the United States government opposed any nuclear power stations for North Korea.

Crooked Tree Arts Center and the Boyne City Performing Arts Center have invited the Grand Rapids Ballet to northern Michigan to perform 'In A Nutshell,' featuring the dancers in this modern take on Tchaikovsky's Nutcracker Suite, with a musical twist supplied by jazz composer Duke Ellington. The fun begins at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 8 at Boyne City High School, and tickets are on sale now.

The Nutcracker Suite's Clara is all grown up and works in a telemarketing office for a boss who takes a non-professional interest in her. When she spurns his advances, he gives her extra work to keep her from going to the office Christmas party. Enter Dross, the hip janitor, who drops by and whisks Clara to the party with swinging elves, dancing Christmas presents and other wild characters.

Ellington and Tchaikovsky actually met in Las Vegas while Ellington's band was getting standing room only audiences at the Riviera Hotel. His decision to devote an entire album to arrangements of another composer's works instead of his own led him to Tchaikovsky, who "didn't mind" Ellington's translation. Composers Ellington and Billy Strayhorn transformed Dance of the Sugar-Plum Fairy to Sugar Rum Cherry, and Waltz of the Flowers to Danse of the Floreadores. Tchaikovsky was delighted with the arrangement.

In addition to the public performance, the ballet will present a lecture/demonstration to Charlevoix County students as well as a master class for advanced ballet students from Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

Annual Christmas dinner at Grey Gables

Once again members and their guests are invited to gather in the spirit of the season for the annual Historical Society Christmas Dinner, always one of the nicest events of our year, and judging by the turnouts of the past two years, one of the most popular.

The event will take place at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 4 at the Grey Gables Inn, 308 Belvedere Avenue.

A holiday cheer social hour with old friends will precede the Gables' quality offerings (menu and price on inside page). As in previous years, we would like to have a rough estimate of how many of each entree will be ordered. So if you can, we would appreciate a call by Saturday, Dec. 1 informing us of the number in your party and your selections from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, phone 547-0373, or leave a message. You can also call David Miles at home, 547-6736.

Should circumstances prevent you from deciding or being able to call until the last minute, you may appear at the appointed hour at the Gables with no problem.

No prior payment is needed. Someone will be on hand to collect your payment at the entryway to the rear dining room.

This event is open to the public.

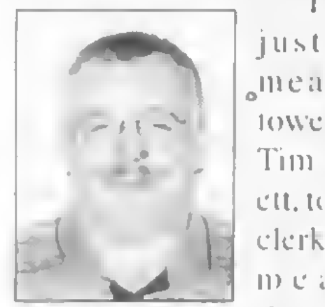
The Wind Cries "Marion"

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Clean sustainable energy in Charlevoix?

Not yet, but anyone interested in offering input on a proposal to erect at least one 197-foot meteorological tower in Marion Township will have their say during a public hearing scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday, Dec. 10 at Marion Township Hall, located at 03735 Marion Center Road at the intersection of Ferry Road.



Tim Matchett

"These are just wind measuring towers," said Tim Matchett, township clerk. "They measure the wind's strength and speed."

The structure is a test tower, he added, "not a windmill or wind turbine generator."

Matchett said this is merely a first step, taken by Heritage Sustainable Energy, LLC of Traverse City, to determine if the area is even suited for wind turbines.

If approved, the proposed tower would be erected on Marion Township Supervisor Wilson Boss' property.

"The tower is of steel tube construction, approximately 10 inches in diameter, and is supported with aircraft cable guy wires in four directions," Heritage stated in their application. "No cranes or concrete foundations are required for installation. The tower is not required by the FAA to be lighted and will not be."

According to the applicant, there will be no additional structures built and the tower, which runs on a battery power pack, requires no outside power source and is said to run in "complete silence."

The Marion Township zoning ordinance calls for a site to "have documented annual wind resources sufficient for the operation of the proposed wind turbine generator; provided, however, this standard shall not apply to an anemometer tower."

The zoning also dictates that no wind turbine generator project shall be approved before a wind resource study documenting wind resources on the site over a minimum of one year is completed.

Dean Solomon, director of the Michigan State University Extension Office in Boyne City, said the strength and frequency of wind may vary greatly within just a few miles.

"That is the reason towers are put up on a site-specific basis," he said. "Around here, one of the biggest factors is the topography since wind is higher at the top of a hill."

The best potential for wind energy in Charlevoix County, Solomon added, "is south of the city of Charlevoix in Norwood and Marion townships."

Matchett said one test tower will go a long way.

"They don't have to put these in very thick," he said. "One tower will measure wind for several miles."

Only after said studies have been completed and the proper permits have been approved by the township may a wind turbine generator be erected, and only with the following requirements set forth in Marion Township Zoning ordinance:

- Each wind turbine generator shall be set back from any adjoining property line by a distance of at least one and a half times the height of the tower.
- Applicants must assure the planning commission that any potential blade and ice throw will not cross neighboring property lines.
- Sound levels may not exceed 50 decibels at the property line.
- Wind turbines, including the highest point of the blade's rotation, may be no taller than 400 feet tall.
- Wind turbine generators may not increase the intensity of lighting due to FAA or MAC regulations.
- The minimum distance from the ground to the lowest point of rotation of a turbine blade may be no less than 20 feet.
- The wind turbine may not create vibrations felt beyond the "perceptible" property line on which it is located.
- Wind turbines not operated for 12 months consecutively will be considered abandoned and must be removed within 180 days from notice to do so by the township.

A public hearing to determine whether Marion Township Supervisor Wilson Boss may allow Heritage Sustainable Energy to install a 197-foot tall wind measuring device on his property is scheduled for 7 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 10. Test towers are used to determine whether sufficient wind exists to install wind turbine generators.

Former mayor passed over for deputy mayor position

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Up-to-date knowledge of city activity was favored over past mayoral experience by Charlevoix City Council members last Monday when the group voted four to two to appoint long-time council member Sherm Chamberlain as the new deputy mayor for 2008.

Chamberlain, nominated by council member Greg Stevens, was chosen over newly-elected council member and former mayor Gabe Campbell, who was nominated by fellow newcomer Jill Picha.

"Sherm (Chamberlain) has the experience and is very familiar with what has been going on in the city over the past few years," said Mayor Norman Carlson. "He's been on the council a long time."

Chamberlain will begin duties as deputy mayor, acting as mayor in the absence of Carlson. He will work beside newly-elected council members Picha, Third Ward representative who defeated former member Shirley Gibson, with 55 percent of the 215 votes, Campbell, who already spent 10 years on the council and two years as mayor -- Campbell ran a write-in campaign and replaced outgoing councilman Gene Beer -- and Dennis Kusina, who defeated his opponent Mary Eveleigh and replaced Bob Timms, who was serving his second term. Kusina has served on the council on and off for 23 years.

Chamberlain will also serve alongside council members Lyle Gennett and Stevens.

Carlson said he and most of the council feels confident that Chamberlain will effectively step in "if something happens to me," without missing a beat. It was not, however, a question of Campbell having less experience. His ten years on council and two as a mayor are equally as important, Carlson said, adding the support for Chamberlain largely involved his up-to-date involvement with city issues.

Council members also decided at last week's organizational meeting to maintain their current meeting schedule, bringing them together the first and third Monday of each month at 7 p.m.

Chamber director search narrowed to six

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

STORY HIGHLIGHT

Search committee narrowed the field of 40 candidates to 6

Interviews are scheduled for Dec. 5-7, and the new director will take the place of Jacqueline Merta

The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce search for a new director has been narrowed to six candidates.

Chamber Board President Tom Conlan said on Nov. 20 the director search committee narrowed the field of 40 applicants to 6 using a qualifications matrix.

"We've got some really good applicants," Conlan said.

Search committee members are long-time local retailer and Chamber member Kirby Dipert and four Chamber board members including Conlan, Jay Bingham, Patt Blanchard and Linda Bradley.

"We're looking for someone with the right kind of education background, experience with a Chamber or marketing of a large group and first and foremost, someone with energy who is motivated to come in and work closely with our members," Conlan said.

Conlan would not divulge the names of the finalists but said of the entire group of 40 about 5 to 10 were local. Others applied from as far away as California.

The application cutoff was Nov. 7 and interviews of the 6 finalists will take place from Dec. 5-7.

Conlan did not pinpoint a desired hire date and said the search committee is in no big rush.

"We are in a good situation at the chamber. We have good support staff," he said.

Support staff members include Shelly Ferguson, finance manager, and Sue Antoine, an office representative. The resignation of former Chamber president Jacqueline Merta, who resigned from the position in early October after almost three decades of service, is effective Dec. 31.

Charlevoix planners head 'Back to the Future'

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

County leaders working to ensure 'responsible use of area lands'

The year is 2027 and Charlevoix County, once a land of wildlife, fresh water and breathtaking scenery is now an urban wasteland.

While concerned county officials are not painting that bleak of a picture, they and many of those they serve are working to ensure there is a responsible use of area lands in the future.

"We know we need areas for growth and development, but some areas are not as well suited to handle it," said Charlevoix County Planner Larry Sullivan. "It might be worthwhile to recommend some protective measures to ensure natural resource efforts in the county."

Sullivan was careful to mention the land use plan, currently a work in progress, is not a move for county zoning and will merely work to allow planners to make recommendations on land use, not give orders, to townships, cities and villages in the county.

He also said that, since the county's land use plan is more than 30 years old, and its vision statement is now out-of-date, officials are seeking input from the citizenry.

A survey on the main page of the www.charlevoixcounty.org website offers the vision statement compiled in 2002 and asks participants if they would agree or alter the vision statement and offers space for citizen input.

To determine how residents and landowners would like to see Charlevoix County decades into the future, the vision statement survey focuses on subjects including whether Charlevoix County's "alluring characteristics of natural and agricultural landscapes and small towns" have been maintained and improved and if the vision statement -- "A key success in maintaining community character has been the conscious effort to minimize the aesthetic impact of development along transportation corridors throughout the County" --may still be considered valid.

Further questions on whether commercial and industrial development and expansion has been performed in a responsible manner and respondents are asked to agree or disagree with statements such as, "Their (city and village centers) character has been enhanced as a result of healthy, vibrant downtown businesses, in large part due to no new strip malls, regional shopping malls or 'big-box' stores having been built at the edge of towns since 2003."

A paper survey may be acquired at the Charlevoix County Planning Department in the County Building or call 547-7234 for more information.

Sullivan said the county hopes to have public input on the vision statement before moving forward with drafting the plan.

"We're still threshing over how detailed they (planning commission) want(s) some things to be, but we're probably away from a working draft," he said.

Planners and commission members worked on tentative maps which outline agricultural, forestry and other industry and population trends during the most recent work session Tuesday, Nov. 20.

"We're starting to coordinate some of that information in various communities to see how they jibe with natural resource information," he said.

Sullivan said the future land use plan will allow neighboring municipalities to adjust their zoning, at their pleasure, which may result in decreasing current stark contrasts from township to township and village to village.

"We hope to see some coordination of planning efforts between local units of government," Sullivan said. "Some of them vary greatly from one community to the next—one may be much more support-

Work underway to remedy boat launch problems

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

The summer-long delay of the Ferry Beach Boat Launch project is over, and work to lengthen the skid pier and relocate the floating pier at the launch is expected to be complete during the Christmas season.

Charlevoix Street Superintendent Pat Elliot said the project has begun -- crews have started pouring concrete slabs to create the extension and other prep work is beginning -- and the goal is to have the work complete before Christmas. Work for the project, which was planned as a remedy to boat launching problems related to drops in water levels in the lake and marina, was originally scheduled for late spring, but was delayed by the State of Michigan during its review process.

"We're not really sure why the review was behind schedule. We know many departments in the state are short staffed, and Charlevoix's project was not the only one on the list," Elliot said.

Contributing factors to the approximately five-month delay were staff shortages and new state requirements that added the Department of Management and Budget (DMB) to the list of departments involved in the review process. Elliot said the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR), the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality(DEQ), the state Parks and Recreation board and the Michigan Waterways Commission are also involved in the review process.

The project became necessary, Elliot said, due to continually decreasing water levels at the launch that caused problems for visitors attempting to launch their watercrafts. It wasn't a situation "that happened overnight," he said, but one that now needs a solution.

"This wasn't something that happened over the last month or six months. It has been happening for years, but now it is an issue we need to look at," he said.

The problem is two-fold, involving first the need for boaters to back their trailers further into the water to be able to launch. When they back in, they back over the curb in the water at the end of the concrete ramp and often get stuck. Second, with the larger boats that are being launched, and removed, the first problem becomes more prevelant. Elliot said lengthening the skid pier and relocating the flaoting pier -- to get an adequate distance from the back of the boats to the pier -- will remedy the problem.

> Pat Elliot
> CHARLEVOIX STREET SUPERINTENDENT

Initial steps in the process began in April 2007 when bids opened for the work, a step immediately followed by news from the state -- DNR, DMB and the Waterways Commission -- that the review of the project would not be complete in time to start the project as planned. Bids from interested contractors were planced on hold until the state announced its approval of the project Oct. 26.

While the delay did tack on some extra expense, Elliot said the lowest bidder, RB Lyons, Inc. Marine Construction of Charlevoix, was awarded the project due in part to its total bid price -- $148,010 -- which came in about $60,000 lower than the next lowest bidder.

"Even with the extra costs we are below the amount budgeted for the project," Elliot said, referring to the $181,500 alloted by the city for the work.

Six bidders offered prices for the project -- Ryba Marine Construction, Inc; K&S Piling Company; Molon Excavating, Inc; Gerace Construction Company, Inc. and Luedtke Engineering, in addition to RB Lyons -- with amounts ranging from RB Lyons' $125,900 (the original bid price) to $348,000. An additional $21,110 was tacked onto RB Lyons bid due to a number of factors including increased wages, increased material costs and the impact of working in winter weather instead of summer weather. Elliot said RB Lyons' skill and reliability, in addition to the lower cost, influenced the decision to award the project to the company.

"We've worked with them before and they do really great work," he said.

Elliot said boaters will have "an easier time getting in and out next year," both in terms of getting smaller boats in and out frequently at the launch and getting larger boats in at the beginning of the season and out in the fall.

Mayor to contribute column

BY ERICA GOFF

Want to know more about what is going on in Charlevoix?

Mayor Norm Carlson is ready to tell.

Carlson will partner with the Charlevoix Courier to bring a new feature to the paper, featuring updates from the mayor once a month to keep Courier readers posted on all the city's goings-on.

"A lot of times there is a lack of information, or a lack of complete information, that gets passed along and we want to stop any possible rumors before they start," Carlson said of the idea.

Progress of the East Park project, budget information, plans for upcoming events and overall fact-based information are expected topics, Carlson said, and he encourages involvement from the community on any and all areas of discussion.

"We are looking for feedback too. I encourage any residents to contact the city by email or call," Carlson said.

The public input could also involve citizens in the evaluation process planned for all city employees. Carlson said the city's goal is to "keep all employees on track" with regular evaluations, and input from residents could be helpful.

The main goal of his contributions to the paper, and involvement of public input, is to "keep people updated" on Charlevoix.

The monthly feature is expected to begin soon at the Courier, and will likely be included in the editorial section.

ive of agriculture than another: but the only thing separating an area may be the imaginary lines on a map."

Another aspect of such coordination, Sullivan said, is how the county may be able to help certain industries in the county.

"Funding sources are available, one of those opportunities is state and federal dollars which could be used for purchasing the development rights to make sure farming can be an ongoing component in Charlevoix's future," he said.

Another aspect of the future land use plan will include county projections regarding the need for expansion of governmental facilities.

"This is a 20-year plan," Sullivan said. "We don't want to wait until the last minute to say, 'OK, where are we going to get land?'"

Charlevoix High School to perform 'Up the Down Staircase'

PERFORMACE SCHEDULED FOR DEC. 1 AT 7 P.M. AND DEC. 2 AT 2 P.M.

The Charlevoix High School performing arts students will put on their version of the classic, "Up the Down Staircase."

The story surrounds the work of an English teacher, disillusioned with public school work, transfers to a private school where she and her students flourish.

"The play tells the story of young Sylvia Barrett, first-year teacher in an inner-city New York school, who gets more than she bargains for as she steps bravely into a field for which nothing has truly prepared her," stated performing arts director Jill Tabaczka in a Nov. 14 press release. "Before long, she finds herself the most "'nvolved' person in the school: involved in her new responsibilities, her own struggles, as well as in the unexpected, often heartbreaking problems of her students."

Tabaczka said the audience will have lots of laughs at this classic work.

"Come see for yourself why the storyline of Bel Kaufman's 20th century bestseller is as important and relevant today as when first published in 1964," she further stated. "Reminding us that there is often more than meets the eye in truly understanding others, this show offers something for everyone."

There will be two showings: 7 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 1 and 2 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 2 in the Charlevoix High School Performing Arts Center at 5200 Marion Center Drive.

Tickets will be available at the door: $5 for students and senior citizens; $7 for adults.

Hire of airport, HR positions resurfaces for city

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

AT A GLANCE...

Charlevoix city officials have in the past considered hiring a new airport manager and an HR position, but city council members did not support it. Officials are hopeful the issue could see more support with new council members, and will discuss the issue at a Dec. 5 work session.

Charlevoix city officials will consider two new hires and some department changes -- involving the Airport Management and city Human Resources departments -- hoping to curb inefficiencies in some key city functions, Mayor Norm Carlson said.

City Council members received updated information on the two departments and potential plans for them at last week's council meeting. According to information presented by City Manager Rob Straebel, city employees "would like input from the Mayor and council regarding filling two vacant positions for the city." Those positions -- Human Resources Assistant and Airport Manager -- are positions council members considered hiring as a joint position in the past but now intend to discuss as separate part-time positions. Potential plans for the positions were discussed during the meeting, and Carlson said council members are "more than willing" to work with the city to find an answer to the problems.

"There has been disppointment among many people -- department heads, the city manager and others -- on a number of human resource issues," Carlson said.

Straebel also stated in his information to the council he has dealt with "many issues with the Charlevoix Municpal Airport and can attest to the need for a part-time Airport Manager."

The Airport Manager is a position that lost funding a few years ago and has since not been filled, Carlson said. The human resources duties have in recent years fallen on the shoulders of staff members in other positions, and to some extent have "fallen by the wayside."

"There are issues such as workers' compensation, benefits, job descriptions, keeping up-to-date with certain state regulations such as Association of Disabled Americans and Equal Opportunity Employers that have not gotten done," Carlson said, adding the lack of focus on such issues has put the city "dangerously close" to violating some state regulations.

"No one has the time to do this stuff," he said. "We are now looking to create the job (positions) that could take care of that."

The issue had been suggested by former city manager Mike Wiesner, but was met with contention from council members in the past, Carlson said. Council members and city officials now agree, however, that something needs to be done.

"We definitely need someone and this is something that would be done for the good of the city," Carlson said.

Information presented by Straebel indicated hiring two part-time positions would be more cost efficient than hiring one full-time positionsto handle both duties. A total compensation package for one full-time employee, which would include a yearly salary of $47,000 and a $33,000 to $35,000 benefit package, would be $80,000 to $82,000. Expenes for two part-time positions is estimated at $56,500 and $67,800 yearly. That includes a $20,000 to $24,000 salary for an Airport Manager with $2,600 to $3,120 in benefits, and a yearly salary of $30,000 to $36,000 for an assistant Human Resources, coupled with a benefits package worth $3,900 to $4,680.

"It becomes apparent that there is less of a fiscal impact with hiring two part-time employees instead of a full-time Airport Manager/human resources assistant," Straebel noted.

Straebel also noted the availability of "much information on why the city should hire at least a part-time employee" for the Human Resources position. The "severe backlog of HR work to be completed," he said, includes such items as updating and centralizing personnel files; completing job descriptions for up to two-thirds of city positions; and updating policies regarding Fair labor Standards Act, Famly Medical Leave, harassment policy and others. Straebel noted the lack of updated policies and personnel files could lead to personnel liability risks for the city.

Charlevoix to consider hire of airport, HR positions ager's ofice and department heads are managing human resources issues on a case-by-case basis. Adding another layer of bureaucracy and the fiscal impact of hiring a new employee are factors to consider before taking action, Straebel told council members.

Despite the past contention among council members on the issue, Carlson said the current group, which includes three new members, is "more than willing" to work with the city on the issues. He noted it "is ultimately the council's decision."

Following an assessment of the city's current situation, Human Resources Representative Kim Swidorski of Harbor Industries, Inc. stated, "at this time there appears to be no rhyme or reason to the accountability of the majroity of human resource tasks," a situation she called a "black hole" that could cause problems for the city. Other information was provided to council members on the issue, largely in agreement with that assessment. The official recommendation following a Human Resources Systems Audit from the Michigan Municipal League concluded "given the size and complexity of the City of Charlevoix's organization, staffing a human resources position at a minimum of half-time is appropriate."

Carlson said council members will discuss these and other reports at the Dec. 5 work session to decide how to proceed.

Council members were also provided with job description information for the potential Airport Manager position, which includes such "essential" functions as:
- plan and supervise all airport operations
- provide continuous effort to develop a user-friendly airport
- prepare reports for the FFA and direct the preparation, handling and maintenance of departmental records.
- develop, implement and revise policies and procedures
- prepare departmental budget, confer with, and submit to City Manager
- and other duties.

The position will also involve working with the City Manager and city council to maintain updated reports. Carlson said this will also be discussed at the Dec. 5 meeting.

MORE ON THE HR POSITION...

The city of Charlevoix has 50 full time employees, 34 of which are unionized. At certain points of the year there can be up to 75 seasonal employees. Generally a human resources position is responsible for:
- Recruiting and orienting new employees, as well as some ncessary training and placement of new hires
- Writing job descriptions
- Grievance/dispute negotiation and resolution
- Benefits administration
- Monitoring of morale
- Instituting and monitoring policies
- Communication between departments

New DDA newsletter to tell what's Up downtown

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Publication to share downtown information via email and will be available on the new DDA website to be unveiled in January

The Charlevoix community is only as vital and vibrant as its downtown.

That is the belief Charlevoix Downtown Development Director Keith Carey, and many downtown merchants, share, and it is one of the driving forces behind the DDA's initiative to broaden involvement in marketing and promotion of "downtown successes." A major step in that promotion, Carey said, is the development of a new DDA newsletter, What's Up Downtown.

"The more attractive your downtown is, the more appealing your community is to businesses and visitors. Charlevoix has a unique and charming downtown and we thought it would help to let people know," he explained.

The first edition of the quarterly publication was distributed in October, offering "downtown-specific information," as is the goal of the publication. While it is ultimately up to Charlevoix residents and newsletter readers whether the publication will continue to be offered in a hard-copy format, Carey said his ultimate goal is to offer What's Up Downtown exclusively online, accessible via email and on the DDA's new website, expected to be unveiled by the first of the year.

"We really want to save on printing costs and provide the information quickly and conveniently, to as many readers as possible," he said.

It makes sense, Carey added, to minimize printing costs by utilizing online delivery. However, he understands the appeal of a hard-copy format as well. If readers are more comfortable with the hard copy, "we would be glad to take the time and effort to offer that," he said, but would prefer to save as much money as possible.

"If at all possible, we would like to save our slated tax dollars to use for other projects. We'd like to free up our resources for other things," Carey said.

The idea of investing in marketing and promotion of the downtown, including its festivals, construction, businesses and other activities, is part of the Charlevoix Downtown Blueprint 2007, an initiative developed to maximize promotion and growth of the city. Carey said the newsletter is one element of that plan, and it can act as a tool to help keep year-round residents as well as part-time residents and visitors -- "anyone interested in downtown Charlevoix," Carey said -- up-to-date with everything that is 'Up' in the downtown area.

"We'll include a relatively frequent update of the Blueprint, and updates of the East Park project. That is something that is significant, and I think especially those summer residents that don't get to see it all the time would appreciate an update of the progress," Carey said.

What else is 'Up'? Exciting winter events, such as last week's Christmas tree lighting and visit from Santa Claus are just the type of things the newsletter will report on. Carey said information about Charlevoix's newest winter event, the first annual Flurry Fest planned for Dec. 1, is also an item of discussion.

Timing for the unveiling of the new DDA website -- early January -- is perfect for the agency to "take a pro-active approach" in promoting both the newsletter and the website simultaneously, Carey said. The newsletter will be available on the website, which will also feature downtown activities and highlights, and Carey hopes the newsletter will draw readers to the website. Likewise, he hopes visitors to the website will be drawn to the newsletter.

"One of the main messages we want to send is that no one is disqualified from subscribing. Anyone interested in the downtown can become a subscriber."

Carey is developing a database of email addresses, starting with individuals he knows are interested in the publication such as merchants and city officials, and hopes to have a list that is "as substantial as possible" completed as soon as possible. Anyone intersted in receiving electronic delivery of the publication can email Carey at kcarey@cityofcharlevoix.org.

Crooked Tree holds quilt festival

The Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey, Michigan will host an international exhibition of art quilts from Jan. 12 to March 1, 2008. The Studio Art Quilt Associates' exhibition entitled Transformations 2007: Reverberations premiered at the Festival of Quilts in Birmingham, England and then traveled to the Quilt Indulgence Festival in New South Wales, Australia. It will open at the Crooked Tree Arts Center Jan. 12 from 2-4 p.m. in the Edith Gilbert Gallery.

Juror and art quilt expert Sandra Sider wrote: "My goal in jurying this exhibition was to select a group of quilts in which ideas or emotions were successfully expressed through color, line, and texture. I looked for quilts in which artists had grappled with a concept or emotion, creating surfaces that enabled viewers to respond to the thought behind the art. My subtitle for the exhibition, Reverberations, resulted from the visual dialogues between various quilts, which became evident during the jury process. Through shape, color, texture, or idea, these works speak to each other in the archetypal language of quilts."

SAQA is a nonprofit organization whose mission is to promote the art quilt through education, exhibitions, professional development, and documentation. With an active membership of more than 1,700 established and emerging artists, the artwork created by SAQA members can be found in both national and international exhibitions, galleries, museums and private collections.

On Tuesday Jan. 22 at 10 a.m., Suttons Bay fiber artist Desiree Vaughn will present a Coffee at Ten lecture on the "Quilt as Art" in the Edith Gilbert Gallery at the Crooked Tree Arts Center. Vaughn is a member of the Studio Art Quilt Associates. Vaughn is a textile artist, teacher and fabric surface design expert. Examples of her work will be on display at CTAC during the exhibition.

For more information on the Transformations 2007: Reverberations you may contact the Crooked Tree Arts Center at (231) 347-4337 or go online to www.crookedtree.org. This program is supported in part by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs.

DDA

Charlevoix DDA has "quietly reinvested millions of dollars" into various projects, mostly infrastructure, in the Charlevoix area, Carey said. Up until recently that investment focused almost exclusively on infrastructure, Carey said, but the development of the executive director position, and other vision "broadening," led to other involvements. Some of Charlevoix's successes that can be credited to some degree to the DDA include construction of Bridge Park, the "forgotten" park since the arrival of East Park, built in 2000. Carey said the project is "a perfect example of a strong partnership between the DDA and a local business (the Beaver Island Boat Company)."

Parking areas off Bridge Street are also DDA projects, as was the creation of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce building, leased by the DDA to the Chamber for $1 a year.

The new Charlevoix Public Library is also partially a DDA project, although Carey said since DDA assisted in acquisition of the building the library has "done a tremendous job of becoming an individual and strong entity."

Numerous street light, water, sewer and power enhancements can also be credited to the DDA, Carey said.

Carey said he would be interested in expanding the quarterly publication into a monthly newsletter, but doubts at this time there are enough happenings or enough manpower to justify such a schedule. The next edition of What's Up Downtown is scheduled for release in January.

LETTERS to the editor

REMEMBERING CONNIE FORD

Editor:

Thank you very much for the invitation to participate in the celebration of the life of Connie Ford. I had the opportunity to work with Connie for well over three decades, while she was the director of speech activities at Charlevoix High School, and I had the pleasure to serve as the executive director of the Michigan Interscholastic Forensic Association. With her leadership and commitment, the students at Charlevoix High School had many very unique opportunities to learn communication skills and form lifelong friendships with the forensic community.

Connie offered opportunities to students to participate in debate, speech and theater events, a variety of options that would contribute to personal growth, while teaching skills that would afford individuals special advantages in the academic and business world. In addition, she was a passionate advocate for recognition of small school achievements, campaigning for awards and activities for schools and students in areas with geographical challenges or smaller populations.

When I began to work for the organization in 1974, Connie was providing opportunities for the students of Charlevoix in debate, which includes public speaking and oral interpretation and in theater. Thirty or more years later, she was still extending to students similar challenges, although the debate options were primarily in her classroom, office or on the telephone.

She was a member of many committees of our statewide organization, but primarily made contributions in individual events and theater. She was one of the original facilitators of a statewide theater festival, providing an opportunity for students to experience artistic creation in an environment other than their school theater. In the early years of the theater festival, Connie would always remind other directors who had reservations about performances in a theater environment other than their own facility, that theater could be done on any stage, for she had no official facility at Charlevoix. In the tradition of antiquity, all the world was a stage and she was willing to share her love of artistic expression with others.

Her performances, which won multiple awards for small schools in statewide theater competitions, always had numerous students in production. She would fill the stage with performers, providing a chance for any student with a willingness to take a risk with a role or a place in a chorus. The trips of her theater troupes in the famous Rayder bus to various performance sites in Michigan are legendary, for you always knew that on a particular Saturday in February Charlevoix would be traveling to a regional or state site to do one of its "all school" extravaganzas.

More was better for Connie. The quality would come, but she always began with the choice of a production that would offer a chance for as many students as possible to participate. Opportunity was the important standard; she would infuse quality, make it all fit together.

Connie would always commit Charlevoix students to participate. She would enter a dozen or more students in a five-event performance option, the pentathlon. The event was in December, frequently during the debate season. But Connie again saw an opportunity to expose students to different communication events, a chance to give choices to competitors. In Michigan, students must participate in one event during the spring individual events series so Connie saw the December pentathlon as a chance for a contestant to get exposure to potential events. Many of the competitors would be on script, having chosen a piece for dramatic, poetry, prose or storytelling perhaps the week before the contest. Connie wanted the students to have the exposure to many options prior to committing to a specific event — again, the opportunity to choose with some understanding of what might be available.

I was always impressed with this vision, offering a chance for a student to experience an activity. I remember most vividly a conversation involving a young male participant, who was willing to try some of the events in the pentathlon, but was unwilling to do storytelling, an event he thought was inappropriate for his interests. She simply indicated to him that if he wanted to be on the Rayder bus to Ann Arbor, he would do the event, in addition to the other four (if you did not do all five events, you would be disqualified). Understanding his options (I'm sure as only she could present "choices"), he agreed to do all five events. In the spring when it was time to concentrate on one event, he actually became a storyteller, a very good one, who won a state championship. Given an opportunity, a student could excel, which illustrates her commitment to education and diverse experiences.

More is indeed better for Connie. Opportunity can open doors, increase understanding, show you a world that can benefit from your special talents.

Connie extended her commitment to providing individuals with an environment to discover personal characteristics from Charlevoix to statewide activities. She had a passionate intensity to create as many situations or tournaments as feasible for small school students to get recognition. Thus, through her efforts on the MIFA Theatre Committee we have school awards in Class C-D in theater and a mandate that a minimum of two schools in Class C-D be participants in the MIFA State Theatre Finals. As a member of the Individual Events Committee, which she was on through the 2007 academic year, Connie was a strong advocate of the maintenance of the district tournament, for to her the district activity was an opportunity for recognition for more students.

You always knew her position on an issue, for Connie gave clear visual images of what she thought. If for some reason you might be unclear on her opinion, she would provide a terse verbal comment to indicate her sentiments. If a committee member might think that her demeanor indicated that she was upset with a decision or a comment, it likely was true. However, you also knew that she would continue to advocate what she thought was important, while also making sure that Charlevoix students still had the opportunity to participate.

Being part of the process, to participate in learning, was most important to Connie. You could not make change from the sidelines, so Connie would keep Charlevoix involved in speech activities, adapting, as appropriate, to the situation. The chance to grow from the experience, to discover your talents, was a standard for her. You learn by doing.

It is wonderful that Charlevoix has a theater now for students. The facility reflects community recognition of the benefits of an artistic experience, a Connie Ford theme! It is also appropriate that the community thank Connie for her commitment to providing a communication experience for almost four decades for Charlevoix students.

From the perspective of the state, we also thank Connie for championing opportunities for small schools, for encouraging by example schools and students in areas with geographical challenges to be active participants, and for her willingness to represent the interests of northern schools in statewide activities.

Her students, the state champions — and there were many elimination round participants in debate, individual events and theater — and the one time performers and speakers represent her legacy. Her torch will remain bright for there are many to fuel the fire!

Thank you for the opportunity to participate in the celebration of the contributions of Connie Ford. She remains a special person who loved to educate.

MIDDLE EAST TRUTH

Editor:

Courier Writer Ben Gohs has accepted Rebecca Glotfelty's view of the Middle East as truth without questioning her observations. But here are a few points which can broaden the perspective of Courier readers:

Sixty years ago, on Nov, 29, 1947, the UN declared a two-state division of the Mideast lands controlled by Great Britain under the mandate created after World War I. However, the Arab nations rejected this division and declared war on the new State of Israel. For 60 years, Israel has sought recognition by all its neighbors, a goal not yet achieved.

After Israel won the 1967 war, the borders expanded. However, Israel gave back the Sinai Peninsula when making peace with Egypt. Israel has also made peace with Jordan. If neighboring states had brave leaders like Egypt's Sadat or Jordan's Hussein, we could also see a peaceful resolution of the northern and eastern borders.

Until all the borders are agreed upon by treaty, Israel must secure itself against infiltration by suicide bombers. Since the erection of walls and fences, the number of terrorist incidents has fallen dramatically. The Israeli Supreme Court has adjusted the path of the security barrier several times, overruling military considerations because of concern for the rights of Arab villagers.

Most Americans recognize that Israel and the U.S. share commitment to democracy and the rule of law. The U.S. has found Israel a reliable ally in a part of the world where democracy is scarce. Injustice will disappear, God willing, when neighbors learn to trust each other and talk about their disagreements. We pray that the result will be two states, Israel and Palestine, living side by side, in peace.

New program aims to grow Michigan business

Gov. Jennifer M. Granholm recently announced a program to help grow new businesses in Michigan by assisting communities with the construction, expansion or acquisition of new and existing public and non-profit incubator projects.

The program is being made available by the Michigan Economic Development Corporation with funds provided by the federal Community Development Block Grant program.

"We are helping Michigan entrepreneurs turn their innovative ideas into successful businesses that will create jobs in communities across the state," Granholm said.

The Michigan Economic Development Corporation has allocated approximately $1.5 million in Community Development Block Grant funding to the program. Priority will be given to applicants that demonstrate project and financial viability. The maximum grant amount is capped at $500,000 and funding will be considered on a first come, first serve basis.

Incubators help businesses and entrepreneurs develop intellectual property, conduct product development, secure start-up financing and formulate business plans. Assistance may include counseling services, financial/capital acquisition, management guidance, technical support and access to appropriate rental space and flexible leases

"Community Development Block Grant funds are a great resource for communities to make the kinds of infrastructure improvements necessary to attract new investment and jobs." Michigan Economic Development Corporation president and CEO James C. Epolito said. "Incubators play a vital role in the success of new businesses and I'm pleased this new program is available to help those who help businesses grow in our state."

Granholm's program to assist communities with construction, expansion or acquisition of new and existing public and non-profit incubator projects.

The Michigan Economic Development Corporation is able to award approximately $40 million in federal block grant funds each year. There are 1,655 local governments within the state eligible to apply for these funds. Projects are approved contingent upon compliance with state and federal requirements.

PUBLIC NOTICE

If it's not in the newspaper, how will the public notice?

Zoning changes. Tax increases. Legislative proposals. These are just a few topics where government actions can affect your life and community. Imagine if government no longer had the legal obligation to publish this information in your newspaper. How would public notices get noticed? In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. It should not be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, when to look or even to know what you're looking for to be informed. It is government's responsibility to publish and deliver public notice information as it becomes available. So take notice. Your right to know is being served... right here in your newspaper.

Don't let the flu ruin your holiday season

As the holiday season approaches, public health officials are receiving increased reports of flu-like illness. They want to remind everyone that flu shots are recommended for just about everybody at every age.

"We all know how miserable having the flu can be, especially this time of year when we look forward to celebrating holidays with family and friends," said Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan. "Unfortunately, flu is very contagious, even before you develop symptoms. Holiday gatherings can be the perfect environment for spreading the flu virus. The good news is the flu is easily prevented with an annual flu shot."

According to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and Prevention, an average of 36,000 people die every year from flu and more than 200,000 are hospitalized with serious flu-related complications. The people at highest risk for serious complications are older people, young children, pregnant women, and people with certain health conditions.

There is plenty of flu vaccine this season, unlike previous years, when there were world-wide flu vaccine shortages. Flu shots are available though physicians offices, clinics, even grocery stores and pharmacies. The Health Department of Northwest Michigan still has several flu shot clinics planned through its four-county health district: Tuesday, Nov. 27 at the Health Department office in Charlevoix; and Nov. 28 at the Health Department office in Harbor Springs. Appointments are required. Flu shots are $25 and pneumonia shots are $30. Medicaid and Medicare are accepted. Children (through age 18) who have no health insurance or whose insurance does not cover immunizations can get their flu shot by making a $10 donation. Flu shot appointments will continue to be available at the Health Department through December or as long as flu vaccine is available.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is mandated by the Michigan Public Health Code to promote wellness, prevent disease, provide quality healthcare, address health problems of vulnerable populations, and protect the environment for the residents and visitors of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego counties. For additional information about flu shot clinics, call the Health Department at 800-432-4121 or visit HYPERLINK "http://www.nwhealth.org/" www.nwhealth.org.

Health Department encourages families to prepare an emergency kit

During Emergency Preparedness Month, public health officials are encouraging everyone to compile a family emergency kit.

"If able-bodied people had basic supplies for three days, emergency responders could focus on those who need assistance most," said Carol Paxton, public health emergency preparedness director for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan. "Here in northern Michigan, our greatest risks for emergencies are weather related. But a family emergency kit may also be critical in other sorts of emergencies, such as disease outbreaks or power outages."

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) recommends your family emergency kit include:

Three-day supply of nonperishable food.

Three-day supply of water (one gallon of water per person, per day).

Portable, battery-powered radio or television and extra batteries.

Flashlight and extra batteries.

First aid kit and manual.

Sanitation and hygiene items (moist towelettes and toilet paper).

Matches and waterproof container.

Whistle.

Extra clothing.

Kitchen accessories and cooking utensils, including a can opener.

Photocopies of credit and identification cards.

Cash and coins.

Special needs items, such as prescription medications, eyeglasses, contact lens solutions, and hearing aid batteries.

Items for infants, such as formula, diapers, bottles and pacifiers.

Other items to meet your unique family needs, including your pets.

For those of us who live in a cold climate, FEMA also suggests your family emergency kits contains one complete change of clothing and shoes per person, including jacket, long pants, long sleeve shirt, sturdy shoes, hat, mittens, scarf and sleeping bag or warm blanket. Be sure to account for growing children and other family changes. Also, you

Local Martial Arts Academy competes in Flint

Several members of Northern Martial Arts Academy of Charlevoix recently participated in the World Martial Arts annual tournament held in the Flint area.

"Our students represented Northern Michigan well and brought home the most trophies of all of the locations who competed," Head Instructor Tim Bruce said. Students competed in Sparring (fighting), Breaking, and Forms competition.

"We had students from all age levels competing and several won multiple trophies. We had many family members compete and participate. We had some fantastic breaking competition with students breaking boards, bricks and even flaming piles of wood. It was awesome! We also crowned one of our youngest new Black Belts. Lizzie Sutton from Petoskey was awarded her Black Belt in Hapkido, which is a remarkable feat for an 11 year old. She is really a hard working and dedicated student.

Final results were:

Charity begins with local church event slated for June 27

Many people believe charity begins at home. But the members of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix would like you to think charity begins with them.

The church parish will host its annual Chairity Auction on Friday, June 27. Planning for the event is currently underway and organizers are looking for donations of furniture items. The workers at the church will take the donations, bring the back to life and sell them to the highest bidder at the spring auction.

Items can be dropped off from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday at the church, located at the corner of State Street and Park Avenue in downtown Charlevoix.

Those unable to bring donations to the church may request a pickup by calling (231) 547-9122.

Charlevoix Christmas project prepares to help community

The Charlevoix Community Christmas Project committee is preparing for another holiday season.

Last year, the project committee helped 175 families including 352 children and 254 adults with a budget of approximately $6,500.

The committee's stated goal is the same as when the program started in the early 1980s. "Every child in the Charlevoix School District will have a good Christmas and receive a new article of clothing, a toy or a fun gift along with new mittens, hats and socks."

The project group has also found many needy senior citizens who live alone and would not have a good Christmas dinner without their help.

To donate, send checks made payable to the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project to our treasurer Carolyn Batdorf, 04903 Marion Center Rd., Charlevoix, MI, 49720.

For more information, call Bev Boss, chairman of the Community Christmas Project at (231) 547-2078.

want to add items to your kit depending on the specific needs of your family.

Most families prefer to store their emergency supplies in one location that is relatively safe, yet easily accessible if evacuation is required, such as a large trash can, suitcase, duffel bag, backpack or footlocker.

"Emergency preparedness is everyone's responsibility," Paxton said. "All sectors of society — government, service providers, businesses, civic and volunteer groups, as well as every individual citizen, should plan ahead for disaster. During the first few hours or days, essential services may not be available and people must be ready."

Take advantage of Medicare shopping

Medicare Shopping Season ends Dec. 31

Each year from Nov. 15 through Dec. 31, Medicare beneficiaries have an opportunity to enroll in a prescription drug plan for the new calendar year (2008). While individuals may stay with their current plan, the Michigan Medicare/Medicaid Assistance Program (MMAP) recommends reviewing your options before making a decision.

Each year, insurance companies have an opportunity to change their benefits. It is important that people with Medicare not only consider the price of their monthly premium, but also the plan formulary (drug list). You need to make sure the prescriptions you take will still be covered and if there are any restrictions like requiring prior authorization, quantity limits or step therapy.

Other considerations include: the annual deductible, coverage in the gap/donut hole, the pharmacy you like to use, whether you want a mail order option and whether you will be able to get your prescriptions if you travel.

The new 2008 Medicare prescription drug plans are available to review at www.medicare.gov by using the Plan Finder to compare options. For assistance over the telephone, call 1-800 Medicare (1-800-633-4227).

Individuals with questions about their prescription drug plan, or with other questions related to their Medicare coverage, should contact the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging office or regional office of the Medicare Medicaid Assistance Program (MMAP) at the Area Agency on Aging at 1-800-442-1713.

Mine controversy hits rock bottom, supervisor resigns

BY BENJAMIN GOHS

Convinced he cannot get a fair hearing in legal processes involving his limestone mining business due to his current position as Norwood Township Supervisor, Wayne Wynkoop has resigned.

Wynkoop called it quits amid a litany of legal back-and-forth, including a Nov. 7 ruling by a Traverse City judge to cease operations, between Wynkoop and the Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety (NTCHS) over his desire, and their loathe, to operate his limestone mining operation.

"When I was elected ... in November 2004, my wife and I continued to pursue our plans to develop our sand and gravel operation which we had started back in 1983," Wynkoop stated in his Nov. 26 resignation letter. "I was never informed during my campaign that ... I would have to put my personal life ... on hold."

He further stated, "The only way I can protect my property rights is to step down ... so the 33rd Circuit Court can no longer use my position as an excuse to support the

'It is a common sight this time of year. Individuals, young and old, smiling despite their apparent coldness, standing near a recognizable red kettle and ringing a bell, saying 'Merry Christmas' to passersby.

They are volunteers for the Salvation Army's annual Kettle Campaign, an effort that raises funds for those in need in communities throughout the country, hoping to make Christmas a merry one for families in need of warm clothes, toys, and food during the holiday season. Locally, the tri-county Salvation Army chapter serving Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim counties is hoping to raise $53,300 by Dec. 25, funds that will be used for the many Salvation Army programs that assist individuals in need throughout

Official hopes resignation will help lead to fair trial

WYNKOOP

NTCHS."

In Wynkoop's absence, Township Clerk Michelle Cyr will open meetings and a temporary chair will conduct each meeting until a new supervisor is chosen.

"We're going to put together a process to reach out to the community to find some of those folks who have an interest in this position," said Norwood Township Treasurer David Leusink. "We have 45 days from the time we accept his resignation and we don't have an heir to the throne lined up."

Wynkoop, who feels he was robbed of a right to develop his property as the law allows, said his resignation is immediate so he may pursue other matters.

"It seems that my wife and I will have to turn to a higher court to expose the injustice which was served upon us by the 33rd Circuit Court twice in the last year," he stated.

Thomas Power of Traverse City, who took over for circuit judge Richard Pajtas who recused himself from the case because he is a neighbor and opponent of Wynkoop and his mine, invalidated Wynkoop's special use permit to operate Norwood Limestone Mine LLC citing the appearance of possible impropriety in Wynkoop's role as supervisor.

The appearance of possible impropriety issue concerned three former township officials – one who resigned, one who was not reappointed and one who was removed for dereliction of duty– despite Wynkoop's legal authority as supervisor to recommend people for appointment and removal at his pleasure.

"I do not suggest anyone engaged in impropriety, but you have a series of appointments which changed the complexion of the board," Power stated in a recent Charlevoix Courier article.

Wynkoop, unhappy with the verdict and denying the charges, is balanced by opponents heralding the second bit of good news in as many weeks.

"I would hope the board would use this opportunity as a chance to expand public participation and not contract it," said Bill Gnodtke, Norwood resident and a founding member of the NTCHS who won their most recent of three lawsuits filed against Wynkoop. "I don't lay all of the blame on Wayne (Wynkoop), the person at the top always gets blamed, but it (appearance of possible misconduct) can't happen without his participation."

Former planning commission member and chair Chuck Cleland, who has said he was threatened by Wynkoop while still a planning commission member, was not surprised at Wynkoop's decision, but said, "I'm surprised that it took so long."

Wynkoop said Cleland's resignation letter never even hints at the alleged threats and Wynkoop questioned how Power could connect the supposed, though yet unproved, appearance of impropriety. Wynkoop also claimed his conversations with Cleland were attempts to play referee between Cleland and several others.

According to various correspondence among several Norwood officials, including current Norwood Planning Commission Chair Tom Mielke and clerk Michelle Cyr, at the time of Wynkoop's supposed threat, Cleland's behavior toward several individuals in and out of meetings was allegedly rude and needed to be addressed.

"Things were getting out of hand and I called Mr. Cleland to recommend he publicly apologize to those people he had offended," Wynkoop said. "There was never (any) threat made."

Cleland declined to comment on Wynkoop's recollection of their discussion except to say, "What's happened in the past is water under the bridge now."

Cleland did say Wynkoop's resignation is an excellent opportunity for the township to regroup and settle some of its problems.

"It offers hope that we can institute some new procedures," he said. "(With) our government more open to the people, it will restore trust."

Leusink added, "I think this is a somewhat selfless act. I think he (Wynkoop) is doing what's best for the township and his family."

This issue will be discussed further at the 7 p.m., Monday, Dec. 3 Norwood Township Board meeting at 19759 Lake St. in the Village of Norwood.

Story highlight

Norwood Township Supervisor Wayne Wynkoop has resigned in response to contraversy within the township board. Wynkoop is in part responding to back-and-forth litigation involving his limestone mining operation, ordered to cease and desist in a Nov. 7 court ruling.

The Township has no 'heir to the throne' lined up but expects to 'reach out to the community' to find a replacement.

The issue was further discussed at the Dec. 3 meeting of the township board.

Motorists are reminded that parking on city streets and lots is prohibited between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. from Dec. 1 and April 1. Violators, like the owner of the car seen buried up to its windows in the white stuff, will be liable for towing and storage fees. This ordinance allows for the city plows to remove snow in a safe manner. Vehicles left on the street during this time could be issued a ticket.

Hate laws: are they valid or villainous?

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Rope, doggy droppings and thought crimes, oh my!

I'm trying to decide what's more offensive: Nooses in a CMU classroom a few weeks ago, or the dog feces smeared on a colleague's car some time ago.

With this country's abysmal civil rights record—lynching not least among transgressions—the hangman's noose is far more intimidating, but is one crime of intimidation more severe because one implies a racial component and the other a difference of opinion?

OK, comparing the two is a stretch, even for me. But why should sentencing for criminals differ based on the perpetrator's feelings toward the victim?

After all, every harmful action imaginable, and some that are not, have been outlawed and assigned various corresponding physical and fiscal punishments. Yet, despite existing duplicitous so-called hate crime legislation like Michigan's ethnic intimidation law of 1988, which criminalizes threats or harm based on race, color, religion, gender or nationality of the victim, the federal government passed the 2005 Hate Crime Bill.

What, aside from attempts to heap superfluous jail time on criminals like Christopher Judge, the white Michigan man who burned the home of a black couple in 1990 and was charged with both arson and ethnic intimidation, will be accomplished by passing hate crime legislation?

Judge's hate crime charge was tossed by a judge who understood arson is already illegal. And, what if he had torched a white family's house? Could his motive have been considered any less hateful?

Should a judiciary that considers mindset for crimes of passion and premeditated murder also determine whether the aggressor loved or hated the victim?

Surely if both hail from the same general gene pool, no hate crime could occur, right?

Not so in the case of Anthony Fortunato, a gay New Yorker who, while attempting to rob another gay man, chased him to his death into a speeding car.

In addition to obvious charges, Fortunato was charged with a hate crime for singling out a gay man because he thought said man would make easy prey.

So, why should you care if a ruffian receives extraordinary punishment?

How about 11 Christian protesters at a 2004 Gay Pride festival in Philadelphia accused of hate speech who faced years in prison and thousands of dollars in fines for preaching the perils of sodomy? The case was dismissed, but not before they were jailed for little more than daring to say what their minds contrived.

Whether I attack you because you are Scottish—don't even get me started—or because of your hairdo, crime is crime, and barring a worldwide extemporaneous utopian daze, some of us will always harbor hate for no apparent reason.

And we're not alone. Our European counterparts' knee-jerk legislation pays homage to the odious Orwellian push to criminalize thought.

British author David Irving committed, and was sentenced three years in Austrian jail, the crime of denying the Jewish holocaust existed.

Swedish pastor Ake Green's hate crime was telling churchgoers gays are a cancer on society. With his conviction tossed in appeals court, the country's high court threatened action and the prosecutor asked for six times the original jail sentence.

If you think these laws are just simply because gay bashers and racists oppose them, know the enemy of your enemy is not always your friend.

Equality in the 21st century is a funny thing: We try to create by razing; as though we could straighten a line by twisting it.

Oh, how wicked and delightful a swindle in, of all places, America to enact laws which feign protection of sexual proclivity, religion and skin color while denying those in respective categories their rights to marriage, military service, polygamy, freedom from racial profiling and equal rights via affirmative action.

Extraordinary penalties on thought—because that's what hate is, a thought—serve only to penalize the already punished, not to curb casualties.

I leave this last line to a better man: "If we don't believe in freedom of expression for people we despise, we don't believe in it at all." – Noam Chomsky

Regime change for Ear to the Ground

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

As I write this, fake effect snow showers are coming and going. What might almost be called a blizzard alternates with partly cloudy skies and some sunshine. It is difficult in those circumstances not to think about change, and what it means for all of us.

Most of our local living things, plant and animal, are much better suited to accommodate the seasonal and sometimes almost daily changes that this near-winter time presents. Many have slipped into some sort of dormancy, have shed currently unneeded leaves or uncomplainingly grown a thicker coat of fur or feathers. Our response to the weather is more likely to be complaint about how bad it is today or was yesterday. And of course we have an advantage over most other living thing in that we can see into a future and maybe begin planning for global warming, while they cannot.

Politically, change is also in the air. As long ago as the Clinton administration, there was unashamed talk of "Nation Building." That idea was largely rejected by the current office holders in favor of what might be called "Regime Change." I looked up "regime" in Webster, and it can be applied to the current or expected weather as well as to the current political climate. How has Regime change been going over the past few years?

There has been a lot of regime change, most of it peaceful. Great Britain has a new Prime Minister, many suggest because of Tony Blair's support of our Iraq policy. Australia has a new Prime Minister. Mr. Rudd, who replaced Mr. Howard, who was a supporter of our Iraq policy. Lebanon and Venezuela are both engaged in rewriting parts of their constitutions to allow either military rule or perpetual rule by someone who was originally elected. All that certainly sounds like regime change, but not necessarily the kind we would have hoped or planned for. France has experienced regime change that we might approve of. The current Sarkozy government is trying to introduce longer working hours, lower taxes and allowing minors to be charged as adults for certain crimes. France almost sounds like Texas. Pakistan is feeling the possibility of serious regime change, what with the current leader giving up control of the military. We seem to think that having the same person in charge of both the military forces and the civil government is a bad idea in Pakistan, but a good idea here. Strange!

We are fortunate that amending our national constitution requires more than a nation-wide majority vote. That is how it can be amended in some of our individual states and in many other countries, Venezuela among them. We are fortunate as well that for more than 200 years, most of our regime change has occurred peacefully (if we ignore the War Between the States.) Even so, we may be ready for some interesting changes. If peaceful voter-driven regime change was good for both Britain and Australia, maybe it would be good for us as well.

As some wise person once said, change is the only constant...

THANK YOU TO SENIOR SERVICES SUPPORTERS

Editor:

Great appreciation goes out to all the seniors, county taxpayers, Commission on Aging board members, staff and colleagues considered stakeholders, who have been involved with the Senior Services Assessment process and follow up action planning. Thanks also to the above and other volunteers who have committed to working on subcommittees to improve services to seniors in Charlevoix County.

A special thank you to Dean Solomon at the Charlevoix County MSU Extension Office for his time, hard work and expertise in prioritizing the actions to address our recent assessment.

Dean Solomon's presentation to staff and the board were very appreciated and necessary to continue with the COA's work in progress. Your statistics are very important to proceed with our action plan.

It was very interesting to see the similarities between staff, board and stakeholders and know that we are all on the same page, working towards the same goal of improving services to seniors in Charlevoix County. Please be reassured that all of us at the Commission on Aging are busy developing a work plan and goals. These will be published as we launch new and expanded services and improve the quality of our offerings. Thank you for your continued support.

THE US ROLE IN PALESTINE AND ISRAEL

Editor.

Benjamin Gohs writes pessimistically of the role of the US and the media in Israel and Palestine ("Before peace first must come truth", 11/14/07). His history is off and the tone is sarcastic. But mostly he makes a valid point.

For centuries until the 1920s, Jews in the Middle East had cordial relations with Arabs, at least compared to their relations in Europe with non-Jews.

Professed Christians ruled Germany when it killed millions of Jews in the 1940s. Christians expelled Jews from England, France, and Spain in the 13th-15th centuries. They attacked Jerusalem in the First Crusade. Muslims and Jews defended it together and were massacred together.

Rome's Arch of Titus in the Forum celebrates the massacre-enslavement-expulsion of Jerusalem's Jews in 70 AD.

By contrast, it wasn't until 1948 that Jews and Arabs had their first significant military conflict, Israel's war of independence. Palestinians call it al-Nakba -- the catastrophe.

The year before, the United Nations recommended a partition plan. It gave the Jewish state a majority of the land, though Jews were only 30% of Palestine's people. Arab leaders decided to oppose it. Irregular forces entered the country in January 1948.

But in the following months, over 700,000 Arabs fled or were ejected. The turning point was in April, with the massacre of Arabs at the village of Deir Yassin. This was after a speech by David Ben-Gurion calling for a "great change" in the distribution of the Palestinian population.

In his book Menachem Begin, later a prime minister of Israel, explained the specific result of Deir Yassin: "Arabs began fleeing in panic."

In May Israel declared itself a state. Several Arab governments sent in regular forces. In June the Israeli cabinet barred return of the refugees.

The Arab armies were poorly armed. By the end of the year Israel defeated them, and expanded its share of the land under the partition plan by 38%.

Jewish settlers arrived to work most of the formerly-Arab land. In 1949 the olive produce from these lands was Israel's third largest export.

At the time, the US favored immediate repatriation of Palestinian refugees. Mark Ethridge, the US delegate to a UN committee, characterized Israel's refusal as "morally reprehensible."

But the US switched. Today Israel receives $2-3 billion a year in US aid, most of it military.

During this time, 430,000 Jewish settlers have moved into conquered Palestinian land. Almost a third of the occupied property in the West Bank is private Arab-owned land, from which Arabs are barred.

In 2004 President Bush rejected Palestinian refugees' rights to return to their homes in Israel. Congress concurred.

But under international law and UN resolutions, Palestinian refugees and their descendants have the right to return to their homes, not just their homeland.

There is little hope. Nothing was resolved at Annapolis. The parties simply agreed to more talks.

A prerequisite to any progress will have to be a cessation of US support and funding to just one side.

MORE TRUTH ABOUT MIDDLE EAST

Editor:

Here are a few more truths that must be addressed if there is ever to be peace in the Middle East.

It is not possible to reconstruct the demographies of the area referred to as Palestine with any degree of precision since census data in the 1880's (when Jewish people began coming to the area) was not reliable. Rough estimates can be made. The entire population of Palestine (including what is currently Israel, West Bank and Gaza) was probably about half a million. Today this area supports a population of more than 10 million people. The area partitioned into a Jewish state by the United Nations in 1947 contained a fraction of the number with estimates between 100,000 and 150,000. Palestine was not a political entity. Under the Ottoman rule (1516-1918) Palestine was divided into districts, with the largest portion belonging to Syria, and later Lebanon.

According to land purchase records, much of the land partitioned to Israel was owned by absentee landowners who lived in Beirut or Damascus and was bought for speculation. Jewish refugees bought as much of this land as they could, much of it nonarable. A professional analysis of land purchases between 1880 and 1948 estimates that 3/4 of the plots purchased by Jews were from mega-landowners. After World War I there were between 80,000 and 90,000 Jews already living in the area of Palestine.

It is indeed tragic when civilians are killed for any reason. As you have seen on the news in living color suicide bombers targeted a school bus full of children in Israel, a Jewish wedding, a Passover Seder, a shopping mall filled with women and children. Palestinians have deliberately targeted civilians.

There are several reasons why more Palestinians have died than Israeli's. Israel has been able to prevent hundreds of suicide bombings. Israel has allocated substantial resources to medical response and care. Despite the enormous personal wealth Palestinian leaders have accumulated (Arafat's personal wealth according to Forbes magazine was in excess of $300 million) very little money has been allocated to upgrading the emergency medicine system. Israeli hospitals are completely nonpolitical, patients are triaged by reference of seriousness of injury. You will find Palestinians in Israel's hospitals.

While Ms. Glotfelty called Israel an apartheid regime, it is in fact largely secular. It accords complete freedom of religion to Muslims, Christians and other religious groups. There are synogogues, churches and mosques in Israel. I agree with Ms. Glotfelty in her assessment of propaganda: when something is repeated enough it becomes truth in people's minds. A documentary recently showed Arabic children of preschool age being taught to hate Jews as part of the curriculum in school. As long as this goes on, there never will be peace. As long as some parents consider it an honor to have their child strap a bomb on themselves to become a martyr, there never will be peace.

A two-state solution has been rejected by the Arabs-Muslims-Palistinians in 1917, 1937, 1948 and 2000. Can you imagine the quality of life Palestinians could have enjoyed in all these years? Can you imagine the country they could have built by now.

Finally, Mr. Gohs, I must ask you: How many stones would have to hit you (I didn't say pebbles) before you would reach for a gun? I sincerely hope that you and Ms. Glotfelty go to Israel and see what a country they have built, what medical research the world has benefited from and what technology takes place in that tiny country.

In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. After all, it shouldn't be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look or when to look, let alone to know what you're looking for to be informed. Crooked Tree Arts Center to hold international quilt exhibit

The above quilt and others will be exhibited in the Crooked Tree Arts Center from Jan. 12 to March 1.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey, Michigan will host an international exhibition of art quilts from Jan. 12 to March 1, 2008. The Studio Art Quilt Associates' exhibition entitled Transformations 2007: Reverberations premiered at the Festival of Quilts in Birmingham, England and then traveled to the Quilt Indulgence Festival in New South Wales, Australia. It will open at the Crooked Tree Arts Center Jan. 12 from 2-4 p.m. in the Edith Gilbert Gallery.

Juror and art quilt expert Sandra Sider wrote: "My goal in jurying this exhibition was to select a group of quilts in which ideas or emotions were successfully expressed through color, line, and texture. I looked for quilts in which artists had grappled with a concept or emotion, creating surfaces that enabled viewers to respond to the thought behind the art. My subtitle for the exhibition, Reverberations, resulted from the visual dialogues between various quilts, which became evident during the jury process. Through shape, color, texture, or idea, these works speak to each other in the archetypal language of quilts."

SAQA is a non-profit organization whose mission is to promote the art quilt through education, exhibitions, professional development, and documentation. With an active membership of more than 1,700 established and emerging artists, the artwork created by SAQA members can be found in both national and international exhibitions, galleries, museums and private collections.

At 10 a.m. Tuesday, Jan. 22, Suttons Bay fiber artist Desiree Vaughn will present a Coffee at Ten lecture on the "Quilt as Art" in the Edith Gilbert Gallery at the Crooked Tree Arts Center. Vaughn is a member of the Studio Art Quilt Associates. Vaughn is a textile artist, teacher and fabric surface design expert. Examples of her work will be on display at CTAC during the exhibition.

For more information on the Transformations 2007: Reverberations you may contact the Crooked Tree Arts Center at (231) 347-4337 or go online to www.crookedtree.org. This program supported in part by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs.

The Grand Rapids Ballet will perform 'In a Nutshell' at the Crooked Tree Arts Center.

In A Nutshell is the story of Clara of Nutcracker Suite fame in a one-act ballet. She's all grown up and works as a telemarketer for a lecherous boss. A "hep cat" janitor named Dross helps Clara turn the tables on the old coot. Come see what happens next. This updated version of the holiday classic features a jazzy and very hip score arranged by the king of cool, Duke Ellington. This performance is a collaboration with the Boyne Performing Arts & Crooked Tree Arts Center.

All seats are $15 and the show looks like it will be a sell-out! Tickets are available at Boyne Country Books, 231-582-3180, and at Crooked Tree Arts Center, www.crookedtree.org, 231-347-4337.

Embezzlement victims await restitution — still

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Victims of the Boyne City woman who brought a Charlevoix business to financial ruin may finally see at least some reimbursement these 30 months later.

Lockman

Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema said, while civil proceedings over Karla Sue Lockman's embezzlement of nearly $860,000 from now defunct Northern Preferred Title Company could drag on in the courts for years to come, the criminal end of things could be short-lived.

"We're going to hear that day (10 a.m., Dec. 21 in Charlevoix's 33rd Circuit Court) the amount of money that everyone feels they are owed," he said. "We had the sale of her assets and we recouped about $350,000 and the receiver submitted a report of what to dole out to people and we'll definitely be paying them all back and some employees will receive a sort of severance and other people who worked on it, (Dan) Barron and (John) Taylor, before it went under will get some of it and there is still $70,000 or $80,000 left over."

Lockman's attorney Fred L. Gibson said the issue of restitution is still in dispute.

"The prosecutor is going to be asking the court for the same amount of restitution as he thinks he proved in trial," Gibson said. "I don't believe that his number is correct. I think it is a little bit high."

Jarema said the list of people wishing to be paid is not exhaustive and could include people who lost money but have yet to come forward to make claims.

"There are dozens of people hoping to get reimbursement," he said. "My concern right now is to get an amount ordered by the judge and then my wish is to ask for the amount I proved at trial and give her (Lockman) the offset from what we collected and she will be liable for the balance."

Jarema added, "It is probably an uncollectible debt, but it's not dischargeable in bankruptcy, so that will follow her."

A jury found Lockman, currently residing in the Huron Valley Women's Complex in Washtenaw County, guilty of two counts of embezzlement by an agent or trustee of $20,000 or more from Northern Preferred from Jan. 31 to May 17, 2005.

Lockman has an appeal pertaining to her sentencing in process with the Michigan Court of Appeals, which is being handled by a court-appointed attorney other than Gibson.

While Lockman has a right to appear at the upcoming court event, she has asked her attorney not to file the necessary paperwork as she does not want to attend.

Lockman relied on an insanity defense to explain her several-month stealing and spending spree, which resulted in at least $859,278.25 stolen from Northern Preferred, much of which was then used to purchase a house, horses, cars, pay bills and other various means of expenditure.

Psychiatric experts were unable to sway the jury over the course of a week that Lockman's bipolar disorder left her unaware of her criminal activities, and the presiding 33rd Circuit Judge Richard Pajtas called her actions "thievery of epic proportions."

Lockman's attorney went so far as to cite sexual abuse by a summer camp counselor and even Lockman's mother as causes for her debilitating disease and ensuing embezzlement.

Barring an unforeseen change in her conviction or a win in Michigan appeals court, Lockman's 5 to 10 year prison stretch gives her an earliest release date of Sept. 20, 2011, with a maximum release date of Sept. 20, 2016.

Lockman's attorney, Fred L. Gibson of Clinton Township, did not return calls by press time.

Story highlight

Court proceedings regarding Karla Sue Lockman's conviction for embezzlement of $860,000 from Northern Preferred Title Company are expected to drag on for years, but law officials involved in the case are seeking claims from victims.

A court date in the 33rd Circuit Court -- 10 a.m. Dec. 21 -- those involved will hear "the amount of money that everyone feels they are owed," said Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema

Make a soldier's Christmas bright

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Imagine you are thousands of miles from home, dodging danger and feeling as lonely as possible.

Now imagine someone takes the time to send you some treats, a few kind words and a simple card so you may call home to speak with loved ones.

"When I was in Korea, my mother used to send cookies and things like that to me," said Gerry Evans, Chair of the Charlevoix County Veterans Affairs Committee. "Things like that meant an awful lot. They brought me back and connected me with my family and my community."

He added, "It's too easy for us to forget. We need to show the troops they're not forgotten and are not just part of a political ploy."

Anyone in Charlevoix who wishes to send goodies, toiletries, phone cards or letters and greeting cards to the troops should contact Mary Legg, the vice commander and troop support officer at the Boyne City American Legion Post 228, by e-mail at: mlegg64@hotmail.com

"Packages should be out by Dec. 5 to get there by Christmas," she said. "They are requesting suckers for (native) children, baby wipes for washing and they are requesting Tampax for absorbing sweat (in the desert heat)."

Legg, who was on active duty for nine and a half years, added, "I have a list of 14 active duty soldiers who are away from home and family and friends. It means a lot to them to know they're getting support."

Those who do not know a soldier but would like to send a care package should contact Legg for information on how to do so.

Those who have a loved one in the military can ensure getting packages to their soldier by following a few guidelines:

- Don't send: Obscene articles, photos, movies; nude, pornographic, sexual or other unauthorized political materials; bulk quantities of religious materials contrary to the Islamic faith; and pork or pork by-products.
- Other packaging tips: Send only nonperishable items; use strong boxes and sturdy packing materials; use bubble wrap or Styrofoam peanuts to cushion items; ship battery-operated items with batteries removed; include a card which describes the contents of the package as they sometimes come apart in shipping; use heavy-duty two-inch wide packing tape on all seams.

For more information on shipping dos, don'ts and rates, call: (800) ASK-USPS or the Military Postal Service Agency at (800) 810-6098.

To ensure packages are received by Christmas, they should be shipped as soon as possible.

According to the Department of Defense website, the following rules should be adhered to ensure packages bound for overseas are received:

- Use the service member's full name because the DOD canceled the Any Service Member program
- Include the unit and APO/FPO (Air/Army Post Office or Fleet Post Office) address with the nine-digit ZIP code if applicable
- Include a return address
- For packages, print on one side only with the recipient's address in the lower right portion

For more information, visit: www.usps.com/supportingourtroops.

Want to send greetings to troops? Check out www.usps.com/supportingtroops for information.

Do's and don'ts of overseas mailings are available by calling (800) ASK-USPS or the Military Postal Service Agency at (800) 810-6098.

Fallen local fire fighter remembered as a hero, honored at national level

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

A quiet hero. Reliable, humble, devoted.

That is how family, friends and fellow volunteer firefighters remember fallen firefighter and Charlevoix native Ralph "Bruz" Cross, who died suddenly in the line of duty Oct. 27. Although he was not battling a blaze at the time, nor fighting his way through a building full of smoke or rescuing a victim of a fire, he was doing one of the things he loved best -- contributing to his community through his volunteer fire fighting position.

"He would rather have died doing what he loved. He didn't say how much he loved (the work), he showed it," said Cross' longtime colleague and friend, Charlevoix Township Fire Chief Curt Thompson.

Thompson, who stood by Cross in the line of duty since joining the volunteer department in 1974, said it "hit you in the stomach" to learn of the news about Cross, who had a heart attack while assisting with a fire training exercise at Kmart in Charlevoix on that afternoon. Thompson said none of the nearly 20 volunteer fire department members were aware Cross had any heart problems, and all were "shocked" to hear the news -- Cross was pushing a cart full of supplies for the exercise into the building when he collapsed. The ambulance was called at 12:25 p.m., Thompson said, and Cross died just a half an hour later.

Ralph 'Bruz' Cross, a Charlevoix native and familiar face in the area, died Oct. 27 doing what he loved.

"He was my right-hand man. It was a real blow to the department personnel-wise," Thompson said.

Department Captain Steve Paterka, who also served alongside Cross for over 30 years, said he still has trouble accepting the loss of his friend.

"Even now, when we to got fires I look for him and he's not there. There is a lot of anger, sadness, it is hard," Paterka said, adding his friend "defined volunteer, he defined the term hero."

Paterka and Thompson could share their memories of Cross for hours on end -- "He was an artist when it came to tying knots," Paterka laughed; Thompson smiled while explaining how much he didn't know about Cross' personal life because he was such a modest man who showed so much respect for others -- but they are not the only ones who recognized the profound service and sacrifice the man made. Thompson, as chief, has received more than 50 letters of sympathy from departments all over the country -- personally written and signed letters from the New York City Fire Department, the Chicago Fire Department and many others. He also received a letter of sympathy from Gregory B. Cade, Fire Administrator for the U.S. Fire Administration within the Federal Emergency Management Association.

"We know all too well that the death of a firefighter is an enormous loss to the immediate family and friends, but the death of a firefighter is also a loss to the community, state and Nation of all firefighters," Cade stated in

Survey says, Charlevoix Schools could be improved

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

At a glance...

Parents say Charlevoix rates 6.6 on a scale of 1 to 10 in overall performance; employees rate 7.6.

Less than 10 % of parents and nearly 30 % of employees responded

Weaknesses: too much emphasis on sports, lack of communication

Strengths: caring teachers and staff, involved parents and community, great kids

How would you rate Charlevoix Public Schools?

Less than 10 percent of parents and nearly 30 percent of employees of the school system opined on the district's strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats as one of the first steps in the schools' long-term planning process.

"This is just a snapshot of what the people who responded thoughts are," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Chet Janik said. "This is not a scientific study, but 33 percent and (nearly) 10 percent are not bad numbers for a survey. If we would have had a bigger response to the survey, the results probably wouldn't have been much different than this."

When asked to rate the school on a scale of 1 to 10, the employees who responded averaged 7.6 and parents who responded averaged a 6.6.

"Our strengths are, according to employees, caring teachers and support staff, involved parents and community, great kids, academic offerings, extracurricular offerings, a safe and warm environment," Janik said. "Weaknesses they cited are communication and trust, our financial situation, starting times and bus schedules, teachers' schedules fragmented, curriculum development options and larger class sizes."

Staff stated opportunities which included improved school image in the community, exploring new revenue sources, a united board of education, elementary and middle school upgrades, a chance to revise the starting times of school and more professional development options.

"Some of the threats they cited were the state economy, declining enrollment and a lack of common planning time," Janik said. "One of the things that's difficult is if you wanted to get all the math teachers together to meet after school it would be difficult because they all have different schedules."

He added, "And, with buildings starting and ending at different times we just can't get everyone together at the same time."

A recent bus study was conducted to determine whether a move toward uniform start time is feasible.

"We simply don't have enough busses and drivers to do it all at once," Janik said. "But, I'm sure this issue will come up as one of the things we need to look at in the future."

The results of the parent survey were similar in number of responses, not percentage, and in key issues, with the exception of weaknesses. Parents are concerned about too much emphasis on sports, too much money spent on employee salary, benefits and health insnrance and a lack of communication between parents and staff at the high school.

Parents responded with opportunities that included advanced placement and honors classes, a new culture on the board of education, greater use of technology and alternative and career technology options.

Committee member Ike Boss said he sees this planning process as a way to get the community involved in the future of the school.

"We're losing kids because of the economy, which is a statewide problem and we need better communication," Boss said. "If people have good ideas on how we can solve these problems they should give their input. We don't need any 'cant's' we need 'will doers'; we need positive ideas."

Janik added that even when this plan is finished-- hopefully by next spring-- it will be an ongoing process.

"It will be a blueprint for the future, and the key to this process is that it is a living document," he said. "It would be very easy for the board and I and a select few teachers to get together and develop a plan, but it's critical that we get the support of the parents and the community."

He added, "It should be a document that it doesn't matter who the superintendent is and who the school board members are, it's a goal that remains a standing agenda item until it is reached."

Janik said once goals are accomplished, new goals should be added.

"It's up to the board and I to stay focused on this," he said. "If we do a good job, the goals will be pretty tangible."

The next meeting of the long-term planning committee is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Dec. 12 at Charlevoix Middle School. Topics of discussion will include the mission statement and guiding principals.

Snowmobile safety training course

A workshop training course in snowmobile safety will be offered for students age 12 to 16 by the Sheriff's Department. The workshop will stress safe operation, maintenance, sportsmanship and first aid.

The course is free. It will be held at the Charlevoix Middle School from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, December 8. Students are urged to bring a lunch.

Forum to help protect Charlevoix's historic heritage

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Story highlight

Forum to begin at 9 a.m in the Charlevoix Public Library Dec. 11.

Three guest speakers will present, and Q&A sessions will be held.

Event concludes at 3 p.m., encourages public input

What would Charlevoix get from establishing a downtown Historic District? Eligibility for grant funding to do improvement projects, the ability and freedom to preserve the legacy early contributors to the City envisioned, and the ability to work independently from state departments while planning for establishment of National Historic Registry resources. The Historic District title is also one Charlevoix could use a marketing tool to boost tourism and add to its unique draw to Northern Michigan visitors.

Charlevoix has one "simple" historic district now, the old train depot, but development of a downtown historic district is "much more complicated," said Bob Heath, chair of the Charlevoix Historic Commission. Intending to educate the public as much as possible on the issue, and to gather public input on potential plans to develop a downtown historic district, the Commission has planned an educational forum for Dec. 11 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

"One of the major components of creating an historic district is to educate and inform the public, especially for a project with the magnitude of a downtown district," Heath said.

The event, planned to begin at 9 a.m. and conclude at 3 p.m., will feature three guest speakers with strong background in historic preservation on a national level. Kristine M. Kidorf, owner of Kidorf Preservation Consulting, has 17 years of experience in the field of historic preservation. Before starting her consulting business in 2005, she worked with the Detroit Historic Commission as well as the State Historic Preservation Office.

Kidorf will offer an overview of the benefits of historic designation, explaining why preservation is important, how local designation works in Michigan and how to projects are reviewed by the Commission. She will also discuss the requirements and benefits of becoming a certified local government, the economic benefits of preservation and heritage tourism in rehabilitation tax credits.

Michael J. Matts will take the spotlight following Kidorf, offering discussion and question-and-answer about "the future of historic designation in Charlevoix and what it will mean to residents." Matts is the director of Historic Preservation and Planning, Gray & Pape, Inc. He has over 20 years of experience as an historic preservation professional, including extensive experience in historic preservation planning, community revitalization, public relations and civic engagement, transportation planning and real estate development for historic properties.

During the afternoon, Richard Karp, founder of Biuldtech Ltd Construction Development and managing partner of Karp and Associates LLC, will discuss the perspective of a property owner and developer in regard to a downtown historic district. His presentation will discuss the steps taken for two building rehabilitations that were completed using the historic rehabilitation tax credits and other financing tools. He will also discuss the benefits and challenges of doing such projects. Matts will follow that discussion with another question-and-answer period focusing on economics of historic district preservation.

Noting the many steps that have already been taken toward preserving Charlevoix's history, Heath said the forum will be an important element of plans yet to come. A retired history professor, Heath said his attention was grabbed about three years ago when the former Apple Tree building on Bridge Street, an historic structure that housed the former office of well-known area architect Earl Young, was purchased and torn down. Not understanding "why anyone would want to tear down Earl Young's office," Heath and other city residents concerned about the move approached the city council about preventing the building's destruction.

"We were told that because there was no historic district there, the city council could do nothing about it. They didn't have control (over what happened to the building,)" he said.

Calling the building "quite charming" and a vital aspect of Charlevoix's unique architectural history, Heath was disheartened at its demise, and encouraged to take action. He partnered with other concerned citizens, including Mary Adams, and took a request to the city to develop an ad hoc study committee to "study the feasibility of creating an historic district either in the downtown or in the city." Once approved, the ad hoc committee brought in members from a variety of backgrounds, including the Chamber of Commerce, Downtown Development Authority, business owners, the Planning and Zoning commissions, and citizens at large to conduct a study.

Just over a year later, the group had its answer. Heath said he and fellow members recommended to the city council that a permanent study group -- headed by Adams and vice-chaired by Heath -- be formed to plan and help develop historic districts. Following that approval, Heath began researching and "got up to speed" with governmental preservation and found the "best kind of district" is what is called a Local Historic District, which allows local governments to link to state and federal law -- and state and federal funding -- to create such districts. The group's first project was to establish the old train depot in Charlevoix as a local historic district, which Heath said was a rather easy process since it was already on the National Historic Registry.

Charlevoix County gets $37,000 Homeland Security grant

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

> At a glance...
> Grants divided to fund specific law enforcement uses and emergency operating centers in each eligible county.
> Funds can be used to purchase such items as personal protection equipment, explosive device mitigaton and remediation equipment, among other things

The wake up call of security threats to American soil that was Sept. 11, 2001 has prompted numerous programs including the Homeland Security Grant Program.

Local police, fire and medical personnel met Wednesday, Dec. 5 to propose requests for equipment, exercises and projects in hopes of attaining a slice of the $37,000 pie.

Results of the meeting were not available by press time, but Emergency Management Coordinator with the Cheboygan-Charlevoix Emmet Office of Emergency Management (CCE OEM) Cheryl Beyer said, "We are very pleased there is some discretionary funding available to strengthen local (emergency response) levels. This also helps strengthen regional and state levels."

Each grant is broken into $20,000 for discretionary spending, $10,000 for specific law enforcement uses and $7,000 for emergency operating centers in each county.

Examples of items which can be purchased are personal protection equipment, explosive device mitigation and remediation equipment and cyber security enhancement equipment, as well as inter-operability appliances such as walkie-talkies.

"The feds [sic] are pretty specific on how things are supposed to be divided and how that money can be spent," Beyer said. "I had my first meeting with our local planning team in Emmet County, which is a group of approximately 25 stakeholders from different law enforcement, fire departments and the (American) Red Cross, and the firefighters will get some 800 megahertz radios."

Beyer said the Red Cross was also allocated (funds) to purchase a trailer to hold cots and pillows, "so when we have a sheltering need they can have them preloaded and haul them to sites where they are needed."

"At the Charlevoix meeting we will discuss what gaps exist and what programs and equipment might be needed," she added.

The CCE OEM is the only tri-county office of emergency management in the state.

Organizations who feel they might be eligible for funding in the future should contact Beyer at (231) 439-3333.

The funds from this 2006 Homeland Security Grant Program -- each of the three counties in the CCE OEM will receive their own $37,000 -- must be spent by the end of January, 2008.

Without these federal monies, Beyer said, "It would come out of our budget or it wouldn't come at all."

Zonta Club making a difference in women's lives

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

For more than 90 years, professional women from around the world have committed themselves to the advancement of the status of women in the area of business and life in general. Through the international service organization known as the Zonta Club, local women have contributed to that effort since 1989, always continuing -- and expanding -- those efforts.

The Charlevoix Area Zonta Club "has been busy" of late, President Maura Snabes stated, with a number of fundraisers and other club activities. The group embarked on a new donation concept recently, agreeing to contribute donated food items at each of its bi-monthly meetings in support of the Charlevoix Food Pantry. Snabes said part of Zonta's role is to contribute to the community, and the Food Pantry seemed like a worthy cause.

"We agreed giving to the Food Pantry was a service to the community, and one we wanted to support," she said.

But it is hardly the only effort the group is involved in. Following the mission to support advancement of women, Zonta also acts as an advocate for women's issues, including violence against women, and began working with AM 1270 radio to offer monthly radio interviews to speak about the issue. The most recent radio promotion, advocating awareness of violence against women and children, aired Nov. 26. Zonta will hold such radio promotions the fourth Monday of each month on Greg Marshall's talk show on AM 1270, speaking about a variety of health, education, professional and social issues relating to women on both a local and international basis.

The Zonta group has also found a way to encourage a continued legacy in the Charlevoix area by establishing a "Z" Club -- a youth-based Zonta club. Snabes said similar youth clubs have existed on an international level for quite some time, but locally not much was done to create one. However a few years ago the group established a program called Sights on Success, which invited girls grades sixth through ninth to attend a day-long event learning about Zonta and its mission. The event was so successful, Snabes said, the decision to establish a youth club was strongly supported.

"The girls loved it. We had 50 girls participate last year, and because they were so excited about it, we decided it was a perfect time to start a Z club," she said. "We hope they'll be future Zonta-ians."

The Z club is now about three months old, with just a few meetings under their belt, and is led by Zonta member Betsy Granstra, aiming to "widen (members') views regarding women's issues." Snabes said the club will assist the adult group with fundraising events in addition to working on its own projects.

"Not only will this allow girls to service the community but it also allows them to work with our organization, which can get them aware of many women's and children's issues they may not have known about otherwise," Snabes said. "This is a way of opening their eyes on a local and international level."

Also hoping to encourage support from the community, the Zonta Club took steps to establish its 501(c)3 nonprofit status, which became effective this summer, to make it a little easier for individuals to contribute. Snabes said prior to gaining the nonprofit status, individuals interested in donating often had to do so through another agency to be able to make a claim for it on taxes.

Why donate to the group? Snabes said most of the funds collected go toward local scholarships, including two given to area high school students. The Young Women and Public Affairs Award annually presents an area high school senior $500, an award based upon grades, involvement and knowledge of international issues. The Mary Feindt Scholarship, also a $500 award, is based on math or science-based majors on a need basis. A college scholarship -- the Jane Klaufman Award -- is presented to a third or fourth year college student studying business, and is a $400 award.

Another continuation of Zonta's committment to women's issues, the group also contributes an award up to $2,500, to the Women's Resource Center for a client attempting to return to education. The money can be used for whatever needs the female has, be it books, tuition, housing, children's needs, etc.

Volunteers find warmth in ringing Salvation Army bell

ARMY

the year.

"We do our Christmas outreach every year, providing meals and Christmas gifts to families. We have 140 families signed up so far and expect to have more by Christmas," said Captain Daren Spencer of the local Salvation Army Chapter.

The campaign is vital to the organization's efforts, Spencer said, and volunteers are needed to garner any level of success. Volunteers like members of the Kiwanis Club of Charlevoix who, for the past 30 years, have spent a few days a year ringing the bell at various Charlevoix locations assisting with the campaign. Member Ted Dumbauld said the group signs up for one or two full days each year, and members take turns with shifts throughout the day. While the effort is one that goes hand-in-hand with the Kiwanis Club's mission of philanthropy and local support, it is one that Dumbauld also believes in on a personal level.

"Personally, as a young child I remember the bells and contributing to the kettle. The Salvation Army has a very good reputation as a respectable philanthropic organization, and its objective of helping others is one that I (and other Kiwanis Clubs) support," Dumbauld said.

Kiwanis member Bill Lovett said he also enjoys his annual contribution to the cause, and has seen the work of Salvation Army throughout the state. Born in the Detroit area and having spent years of his career as a professional social worker across the southern part of the state and in the Lansing area, Lovett said "there are families in such need ... and the Salvation Army focuses on those needs." The contributions made -- food, clothing, utility and housing assistance -- are ones that many rely on. Contributing financially to those programs is something Lovett is proud to do, but volunteering to help raise funds is also something that offers personal satisfaction.

"When you are out there, you hear such kind words and stories from people about how Salvation Army has helped them. It makes it so much more rewarding than just passing over a check," Lovett said.

Dumbauld said he also enjoys the kind comments and stories from those who respond to the bell he rings, and it is that reaction from people -- those sharing the Christmas spirit the bell and red kettle are so linked with -- that keeps him warm and smiling while braving the often rough Northern Michigan winter weather.

"It is the friendliness of people in the holiday season that expresses what we're trying to do. It is so heartwarming, especially to see young children smile and want to give a dollar or a dime or a nickel. That is what it is all about," he said.

Spencer said after so many years of involvement the stories "blend together" about how people's lives have been touched by the Salvation Army, but the most common version that always gets a reaction from him comes from World War II veterans that stop, give, and share their stories.

DOING THE MOST GOOD

"They talk about how they remember the first time they saw the Salvation Army volunteers, and how much it meant to them to see the volunteers when they got off the boat, arriving home, standing with blankets and coffee to welcome them home," Spencer said. "That is the story I hear the most and enjoy hearing."

So far Spencer and the local Salvation Army has about 25 percent of its available volunteer spots filled. Individuals and groups can volunteer, generally working for two-hour shifts at various locations. The experience is fun and rewarding, Spencer said, and is something volunteers always enjoy.

"I have never heard about volunteers not enjoying it. You can have fun with it, singing Christmas carols or whatever you want, and the time really flies by," he said.

Dumbauld, Lovett and their fellow Kiwanis Club members spent Saturday, Dec. 1 volunteering from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. at the Charlevoix Kmart, and will return for the entire day Dec. 8. New member John Young enjoyed his first volunteer experience Saturday, getting a good response from passers-by, and said he looks forward to continuing such service in future years with the Kiwanis Club.

Spencer said the $53,300 goal is close to the amount raised last year. The effort was well underway early in the season, having raised $9,000 in the first few days, but, Spencer reminded, there is yet "a long way to go." Funds will be used for the Christmas outreach as well as Salvation Army's yearly programs offering social service assistance for things such as assistance with food, rental and mortgage payments, utility payments and "anything to help people when they are getting a little behind, to help them keep their heads above water."

"It is a proactive approach, not a Band-Aid. We want to help people before they get too far behind," he said.

Salvation Army also holds after school programs, summer camps and day care programs.

Lovett and Dumbauld said Salvation Army provides not only financial assistance to those in need, but the opportunity for people like them to make a difference in their community. The best story Lovett said he has in regard to his volunteer work happened about 12 years ago while he volunteered through the Lansing Kiwanis Club, ringing the Salvation Army bell during the Christmas season. He saw a woman passing by, and she stopped, pulled a $20 bill out of her purse and put in the red kettle. He was surprised and happy at her contribution and thanked her profusely. She stopped him, and made a comment that has remained with him for 12 years.

"She said, 'No, thank you for being out here and doing this.' She gave, and she thanked me. It was so heartwarming," he recalled.

Spencer said he can always use more volunteers, and encourages anyone of any age to spend some time ringing the well-known bell. To volunteer call the Salvation Army in Petoskey at 347-3531.

Charity auction

Many people believe charity begins at home. But the members of the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix would like you to think charity begins with them.

The church parish will host its annual Chairity Auction on Friday, June 27. Planning for the event is currently underway and organizers are looking for donations of furniture items. The workers at the church will take the donations, bring them back to life and sell them to the highest bidder at the spring auction.

Items can be dropped off from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday at the church, located at the corner of State Street and Park Avenue in downtown Charlevoix.

Those unable to bring donations to the church may request a pickup by calling (231) 547-9122.

Walgreens sets sights on Charlevoix

BY JULIE WITTHOEFT
NEWS-REVIEW
CONVERGENCE EDITOR

Story highlight

A new 13,650-square-foot drug store could open its doors next fall

Expected to be located on the corner of M-66 and U.S. 31

Charlevoix City Planning Commission will review proposal Jan 14. and City Council will review -- based on Planning Commission's recommendations -- Jan. 21

Todd Wyett, owner of the Captain's Corner Plaza which houses Glen's, Rite-Aid and other stores, has applied for a development plan review to locate a Walgreens Drug Store at the corner of M-66 and U.S. 31 in Charlevoix.

"It's the best corner in town," Wyett said.

He hopes to break ground on the 13,650 square foot, single level drug store in May 2008 and his goal is for the doors to open this coming fall.

Wyett will be the developer and landlord and Walgreens will operate the store. Rich Cleve of Rogvoy Architects PC in Bingham Farms is the project architect and Wade, Trim and Associates of Detroit is handling the development plans.

According to Charlevoix zoning administrator, Dianne Manore, who reviewed the development plan, it meets the requirements of the zoning ordinance.

The city planning commission will review the plan at 6:30 p.m. on Jan. 14. If the commission recommends approval at that meeting, the plan will be reviewed by Charlevoix City Council on Jan. 21.

Wyett said about three years ago he purchased the 2.39 acre piece of land which once housed the Clark Gas Station and has always planned to locate a drug store there.

He approached the Charlevoix Rite-Aid operators who rent property from him and tried to get the store to move to the Clark station property but he said Rite-Aid reps weren't interested.

"The rent would have doubled," he said.

When asked if he's concerned about losing Rite-Aid as a renter if Walgreens goes up and pushes their neighbor out of business, Wyett said, "No."

"It happens all the time (new drug stores locating near existing drug stores). Drug stores are like gas stations or fast food restaurants — when a McDonald's goes in a Burger King always locates next-door," he said.

John Ochs, owner of Central Drug Store in downtown Charlevoix which his family has owned since 1929, said he thinks Walgreens will take business away from him.

"They'll get a chunk, everybody will lose something to them," he said.

When asked if there are services Walgreens offers that Rite-Aid doesn't, Wyett said what sets any drug store apart from the competition is the pharmacist.

Ochs said this "personal service" from Central Drug Store's pharmacists and staff are what continue to set him apart from the competition.

Wyett expects Walgreens to employ about six people including two to three pharmacists, pharmacy technicians and cashiers.

"It will bring quite a few high paying jobs to town," Wyett added.

This Walgreens development plan is not linked to the Petoskey store planned for construction on U.S. 31 near M-119 at the former location of Kentucky Fried Chicken.

Charlevoix Historic Commission hopes to develop Downtown Historic District

FORUM

toric) so it was a good experience for the study group," he said.

The study group "cleared all the hurdles" in the process, including development of a Historic Commission. Working alongside the study group, the Commission looked "at potential future local historic districts," which led to consideration of a downtown district. Heath said because there is so much work involved in the process, the task will be attempted in two segments, focusing first on the east side of Bridge Street downtown. The goal eventually is to establish the west side as a district and combine the two into one downtown district. Because there are so many people and elements involved in a downtown -- city rights-of-way, business owners, building owners and renters, etc. -- the process is "complex," Heath said, and will require "a lot of education and information output."

But why do it? Looking at old photographs of Charlevoix, ones containing the old Apple Tree building or ones featuring the seven old hotels that no longer exist in the city, "you get the feeling of why" preservation is important, Heath said. One of the city's "great [illegible] treasures," he said, was the old Life Saving Station that preceded the U.S. Coast Guard Station. The station was torn down in 1960, but if a Historic District existed at that time, "it wouldn't have been lost."

"If we had half of those buildings we've lost, the heritage of Charlevoix would be so much richer," Heath said.

There is still plenty to save, however, and the upcoming forum can help with that goal. The forum is open to the public, and the commission requests reservations (made by calling Linda Weller at 547-3270). However attendants will be allowed as long as there is room, Heath said.

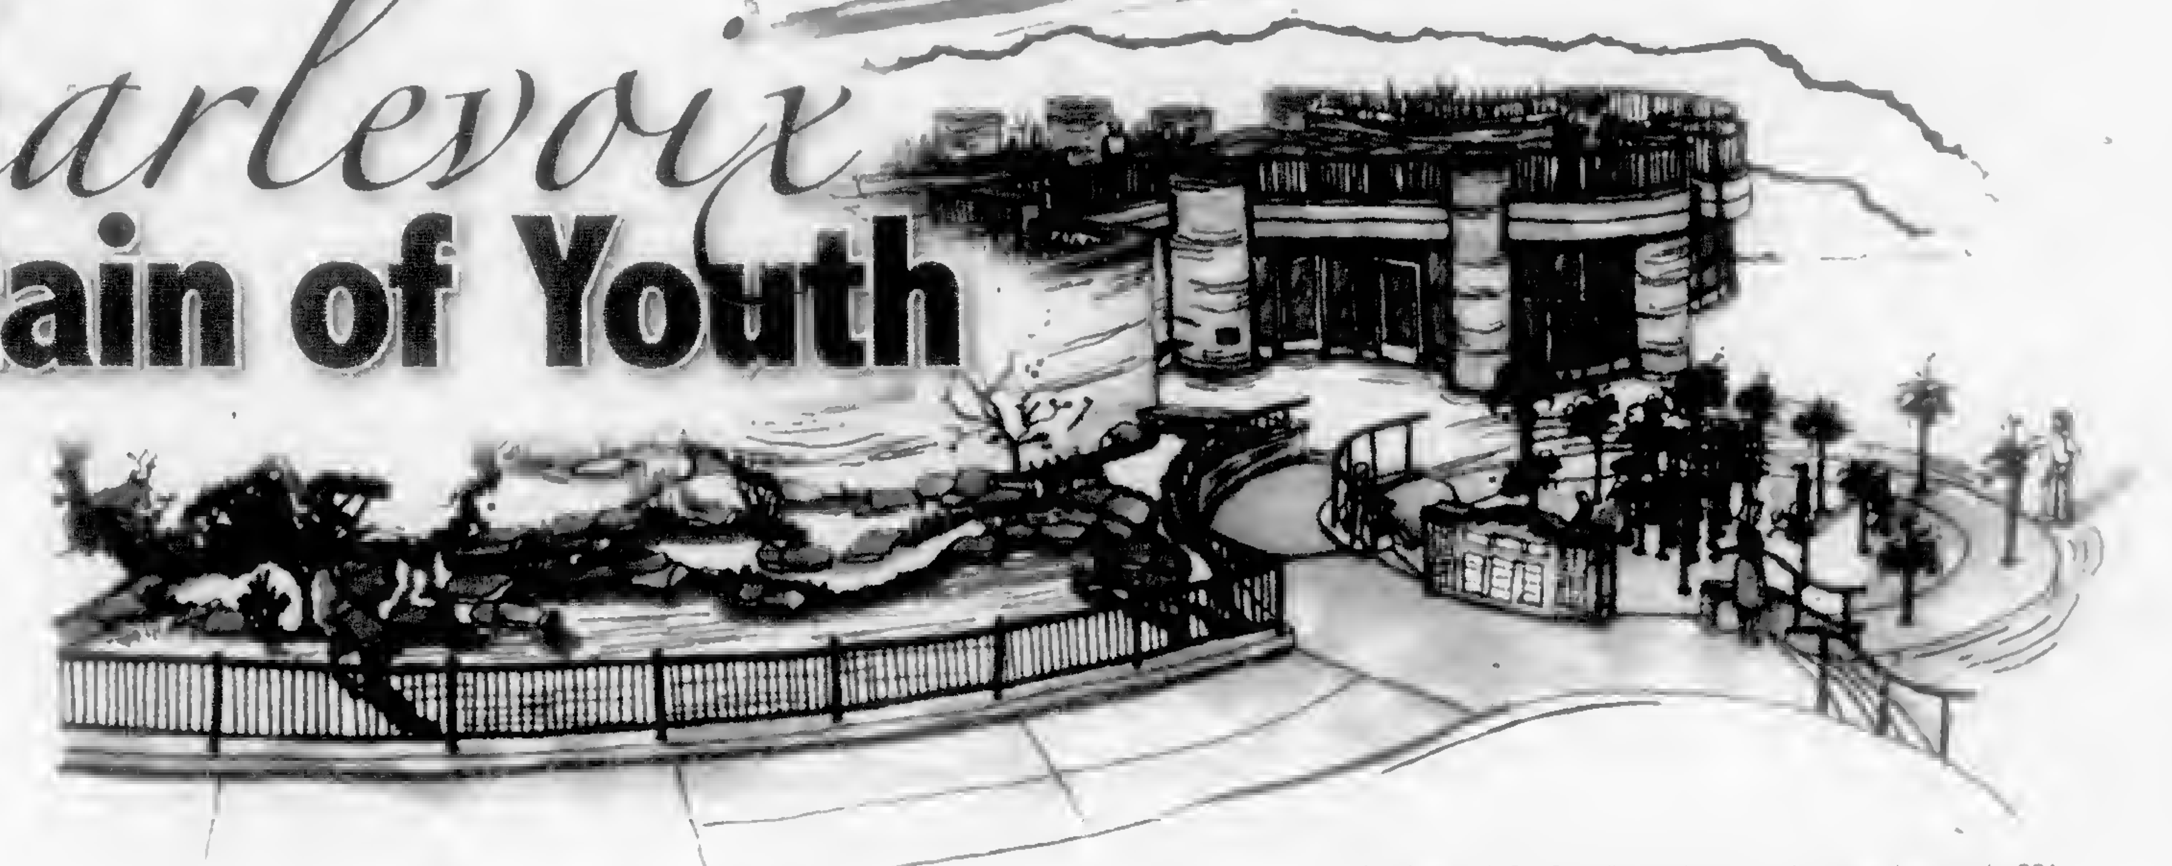
Charlevoix Fountain of Youth



Versatile

The Fountain will have no fixtures above grade. Flush mount lighting and fountain heads will allow children to splash throughout the Fountain plaza, as weather conditions permit. The area may otherwise be used as a harbor view patio when the Fountain is not in use.

Practical

The use of East Park will be enhanced and extended by the stunning visual feature of this Fountain, by both day and night, throughout the spring, summer and fall season. By virtue of its waterfront location at the plaza of the new Harbor Master Building, no additional "green space" will be occupied.

Educational

As a result of its location next to the new trout stream and waterfall eco-system, the Fountain will act as a light hearted magnet to draw additional "kids" to this area of East Park.

Multi-Generational

The Fountain can be enjoyed by all "kids," ages 2-102, whether splashing about to beat the heat, or simply watching it flow.

Flat-Out Sensational

The Fountain, as the final and crowning enhancement of East Park, will distinguish and set Charlevoix apart from all other communities of the north.

Timely

The Fountain will provide a much needed "shot in the arm" for Charlevoix, by enhancing interest in downtown Charlevoix attractions and customer spending at downtown businesses. Completion is scheduled for Memorial Day, 2008.

Timeless

The Fountain will not only gracefully enhance for generations to come, Charlevoix's 100 year aura as a resort mecca, but will also provide lasting memories for locals, summer residents and tourists alike.

Time Critical

The Fountain will be constructed only in the event that $100,000 in private matching donations are raised by mid-January of 2008, to enable pre-construction design and bidding of the Fountain.

The Charlevoix City Council recently approved an amendment to the DDA plan which will set Charlevoix apart from all other communities of the north. The amendment authorizes funding and maintenance of an interactive water fountain as the final and crowning enhancement of East Park.

The cost of the Fountain will range from $280,000 to $380,000, of which $100,000 must be raised through private donations. We are asking you to consider a tax deductible community gift to help bring this project to fruition. Levels of giving are:

Bronze	$250-$499
Silver	$500- $999
Gold	$1,000 - $2,999
Platinum	$3,000 - $4,999

Further levels of donation will also be accepted and acknowledged, through community gifts of $5,000 or more. A "donor wall" will be constructed near the fountain and appropriate recognition will be given for all donations of $250 or more.

All donations will be administered by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, a §501(c)(3) tax exempt nonprofit organization, and all gifts are eligible for charitable tax deduction. Donations should be made payable to "CCCF/Fountain of Youth" and forwarded to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. Any parties interested in donating marketable securities should contact the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, at (231) 536-2440. Any other inquiries can be pursued by calling (231) 920-1357.

Top left, this 8-year-old from Charlevoix, Haley Campbell, braved the cold temperatures during the Merchant Open House and Flurry Fest last Saturday. Above right, more than 30 dogs and their owners turned out for a holiday fundraiser for the Charlevoix Humane Society hosted by Charlevoix Camera. For a minimal fee, pooches had their picture taken with Santa Claus. The event raised $335 for the Charlevoix County Humane Society. Right, Executive Director of the Downtown Development Authority Keith Carey assembles a sign to block off the end of Clinton Street at the corner of Bridge to allow for the entertainment and refreshment tent. A highlight from the event was the hot chocolate contest. The Grey Gables of Charlevoix, who offered the only homemade marshmallows of the day, won the hot chocolate contest during the first annual Flurry Fest.

Charlevoix Varsity girls defeat Frankfurt 53-36

BY ALLEN TELGENHOF
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

Charlevoix girls basketball coach Bret Erskine passed the first test in his varsity coaching career with wins over two highly regarded non-conference foes. The Rayders defeated Frankfort, 53-36 and Cheboygan, 43-34.

Frankfort is the two-time defending state champion in Class D while Cheboygan reached the final four last season in Class B.

"We beat two good programs," coach Erskine said. "By the end of the year, I think they both will be very good teams."

Though the coach may have changed since last season, when Keith Haske mentored the squad, the swarming, pressing defense that is the Rayder trademark returned and was a factor in both games.

"We need to be more consistent offensively but if we can play consistent defense and hold teams to 34 and 36 points all season long, we'll be fine," Erskine commented.

Defense was the difference against Frankfort as Charlevoix jumped out to a 14-7 lead after the first quarter and a 32-19 advantage at halftime.

"They only had eight girls on their varsity and with the pressure we apply (on defense), we wore them down," Erskine said.

Meredeth Rich led all scorers with 14 points. Desi Faust added 12. Brooke Whitaker and Alyssa Smith each had six.

K.C. McCrary and Murphy Gillespie both had seven rebounds and Becca Madison handed out seven assists.

Cheboygan led the Rayders 11-9 after the opening period but Charlevoix responded with a 12-4 second quarter advantage to take control of the contest.

"Though we were down two at the end of the first quarter, the girls were playing pretty hard," Erskine said. "I told them if they play hard and lose, I can live with that. We just have to keep playing hard."

Desi Faust scored 11 points. Tammy Potter had nine points and eight rebounds. Erica Faust, Rich and Madison all scored five points. Madison contributed seven rebounds to the cause.

"It was an offensive struggle for both teams," Erskine noted. "Looking at the tape, I thought we played well, we just couldn't put the ball in the basket."

Charlevoix (2-0) opens Lake Michigan Conference play at home this Friday, Dec. 7 against Harbor Springs.

First annual Turkey Trot a success

Harbor Health & Fitness hosted the first ever Charlevoix Turkey Trot on Thanksgiving morning, The event started at 8 a.m. It was a fun run/walk that involved a 1 mile, 5k and 10k. This was not a timed event and a few fun prizes were given out sponsored by some local businesses, with the idea to have fun and keep fitness as a part of the holidays. Despite icy and cold conditions 38 people came with great attitudes and were determined to enjoy themselves. The number of participants pleasantly surprised the four people who organized this event because the event was planned in just two weeks time. Those involved hope to make it a yearly event, and are planning to hold a similar event near Christmas.

MHSAA describes rule changes

Winter Sports Season Underway – Rules Changes Include Sportsmanship Emphasis & Uniform Regulations

For member schools of the Michigan High School Athletic Association, the winter sports season --a time of year where over 70,000 young people are expected to take part in sports which will culminate in 9 championships -- is already underway.

Bowling in the Upper Peninsula, girls' competitive cheer, girls' gymnastics, ice hockey and swimming and diving in the Upper Peninsula have already begun competition. Last week saw games begin for girls' basketball (Nov. 26), wrestling (Nov. 28), and swimming and diving and bowling in the Lower Peninsula (Dec. 1). Competition hegins this week for boys' basketball (Dec. 3) and skiing (Dec. 8).

Perhaps the most visihle rules change for the winter is truly visual – white uniforms must now be worn by the home team in basketball for varsity competition. This National Federation of State High School Associations rule was enacted several years ago to take effect this year, giving schools an opportunity to plan for its implementation. Another major change in basketball is that the interval for replacing a disqualified player has been reduced from 30 seconds to 20 seconds.

In wrestling, a new national rule taking effect this year will allow an offensive wrestler to request a neutral position restart. The defensive wrestler will still receive a point for an escape. The MHSAA Individual Wrestling Tournament will also be unified this year. Previously, individual competition had been conducted on a Peninsula basis. The Lower Peninsula Individual Wrestling Tournament began in 1948, and the Upper Peninsula Tournament started in 1967. The individual format was used to determine a team champion until 1988 in hoth peninsulas, when the Team Dual Wrestling Tournament started. Seventeen of the Association's 29 tournaments are unified competitions.

The 2007-08 Winter campaign culminates with postseason tournaments beginning with the Upper Peninsula Swimming & Diving Finals Feb. 16, and wraps up with the boys' basketball finals March 15. With the addition of the girls' basketball tournament to the winter, playing dates for both the boys' and girls' schedules have been set so they will not conflict with each other in overlap weeks.

Mitten Trees help boost Christmas Project

Mitten Trees, like the one pictured above in the lobby of Charlevoix's Northwestern Bank located at 1425 Bridge Street, are gathering mittens, gloves, hats and scarves for the Charlevoix Christmas Project. Trees are also located at Charlevoix State Bank, Citizen's Bank, Huntington Bank, and Bay Winds Federal Credit Union.

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

The Charlevoix Christmas Project Committee is continuing its efforts to keep Charlevoix citizens warm, well fed and full of Christmas spirit, and has entered yet another phase of donation gathering. The annual Mitten Tree project, which invites area bank and financial institutions to set up Christmas trees to gather donated items began recently, and trees will remain standing until items are collected for distrubution Dec. 14.

Committee member Joan Lemerand said the project has grown since last year, and now includes all hanks in the city -- Charlevoix State Bank, Northwestern Bank, Huntington Bank and Citizens Bank -- as well as Bay Winds Federal Credit Union. All institutions have agreed to display Christmas trees, allowing customers and visitors to decorate the trees with mittens, hats, gloves and scarves for donations. Growth in participation is important, Lemerand said, because the city has seen a growth in need.

"At last count there were 300 children in the area that needed mittens, hats and scarves," she said. "And that number has probably since grown."

The warm clothing collection is just another step in the project's effort to gather toys, food, clothing and other items for families in need during the Christmas season. Christmas Project members will gather at the Charlevoix VFW Post 1153, located at 12735 U.S. 31 in Charlevoix, for distribution Dec. 18.

"It goes so fast. It is like a production line and everyone knows what they need to do to get the items out," Lemerand said. "Its the final step in the process."

The Christmas Project is an annual local effort to help families in need. Anyone interested in donating to the Mitten Trees can visit any Charlevoix bank or Bay Winds Credit Union.

Medicare shopping season ends Dec. 31

Each year from Nov. 15 through Dec. 31, Medicare beneficiaries have an opportunity to enroll in a prescription drug plan for the new calendar year (2008). While individuals may stay with their current plan, the Michigan Medicare/Medicaid Assistance Program (MMAP) recommends reviewing your options before making a decision.

Each year, insurance companies have an opportunity to change their benefits. It is important that people with Medicare not only consider the price of their monthly premium, but also the plan formulary (drug list). You need to make sure the prescriptions you take will still be covered and if there are any restrictions like requiring prior authorization, quantity limits or step therapy.

Other considerations include: the annual deductible, coverage in the gap/donut hole, the pharmacy you like to use, whether you want a mail order option and whether you will be able to get your prescriptions if you travel.

The new 2008 Medicare prescription drug plans are available to review at www.medicare.gov by using the Plan Finder to compare options. For assistance over the telephone, call 1-800 Medicare (1-800-633-4227).

Individuals with questions about their prescription drug plan, or with other questions related to their Medicare coverage, should contact the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging office or regional office of the Medicare Medicaid Assistance Program (MMAP) at the Area Agency on Aging at 1-800-442-1713.

Timeline for Medicare Drug Plans

TOBACCO OUTLAW?

Editor:

Almost 50% of Americans smoke cigarettes and the numbers are just increasing. Even though about 440,000 people die each year from smoking cigarettes, tohacco companies continue to sell cigarettes. As long as cigarette companies are making money, they do not care how may people they kill or how many lives they destroy. Anyone who works for a cigarette company will agree that the more people smoke, the more money they make, but is it really worth all the lives that are lost because of cigarettes? People do not understand the risks of smoking cigarettes. Many people believe they do, but they don't think anything bad can happen to them. People need to realize that anyone who smokes is at risk of getting cancer or even dying. No one's life should be cut short from something as ridiculous as a bad habit. That is why I believe that cigarettes should be banned and no one should be able to smoke them again.

"Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness" is one of the most famous phrases in the United States Declaration of Independence. Many people argue that smoking makes them happy and they have the right to do what they want. It is true that people have this right as long as it does not affect other's happiness. It is a reasonable argument for people to say that cigarettes being banned violates their pursuit of happiness, hut if someone standing next to that smoker is unhappy from the smoke, what happens? Cigarettes do not only harm the person smoking them. Second hand smoke is also very dangerous. The pursuit of happiness does not apply to smoking cigarettes, because it hurts others and makes them unhappy.

The definition of a habit in the dictionary is a settled or regular tendency or practice. Many people who smoke say that they can't quit and they are too addicted to it. People make smoking sound like it is impossible to quit. There are so many things on the market today that help people stop smoking, but people just say they won't work. If people actually tried to quit, they would all be ahle too. Nicotine is the addictive drug in cigarettes and this nicotine makes people believe they cannot stop smoking. Smokers do not only become physically addicted to cigarettes, they become psychologically addicted as well. If people put their minds to quitting they can and will. Some people believe the only reason smoking is bad is because you can die, but there are a lot of other reasons as well. Cigarettes cost a lot of money. Cigarettes cost about $2.25 a pack and usually cost a person $821.25 a year for people who smoke a pack a day. Cigarettes are a complete waste of money. People who smoke cigarettes also smell very had. Their clothes, hair, homes and everything else smell like smoke. Smoking is the most disgusting habit. Smoking is also very addictive. It is really hard for people to quit once they start. It is very possible for people to quit, but once they start they don't want to.

The biggest downside of people smoking is that their children see it and can get hurt from it. Children learn from their parents' and other adults' examples. If they see their parents smoking they will think it is all right and they will more likely do it when they are older. Second hand smoke is also really bad for children and anyone around the smoker. Second hand smoke is almost as had as actually smoking. Around 35,000 people who did not smoke but lived with smokers died of heart disease in 2006. People need to realize that second hand smoke is almost as deadly as smoking.

The most important reason cigarettes should be banned is because it kills many people and can cause lung cancer and heart problems. There is an endless amount of danger from smoking. Cigarettes kill more Americans than alcohol, car accidents, suicide, AIDS, homicide, and illegal drugs combined. Cigarette smoking causes at least 30% of all cancer deaths. About 400,000 people die each year from smoking cigarettes. Cigarettes have been known to damage women's reproductive health, they cause gum disease, heart problems, lung problems, hone thinning and many other things.

All cigarettes should be banned and I believe that no one should be able to smoke again. Cigarettes cause so many problems for people and they destroy many lives. Though most people don't realize this, tobacco kills many people each day. People need to be aware of all of the dangers of smoking. People can argue that they want to smoke and cigarettes should not he banned, but they do not realize how bad they are for you. Unless people want to cut fourteen of more years off their life, they have to stop smoking.

COMMUNITY THANKSGIVING A SUCCESS

Editor:

We are so fortunate to live in a community where over 50 volunteers give up their holiday; where the Rotary and Lions Cluh's donate money to make sure there's enough food; where the local Ministerial Association donates more money and support; where the Refom Church loans out their facility for a day, just so every family in our community has the chance to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner. With all of the issues we face as a State and a Nation, it's easy to loose site of our individual ability to make a difference even if you're peeling potatoes or baking a pie.

TIME FOR CLIMATE PROTECTION

Editor:

Although the Charlevoix City Council refused to sign the Mayors Climate Protection Agreement (Courier, Oct. 17), nevertheless, there is evidence that the city already has met some of the "green goals" listed in the agreement. It continues to do more. For example, the city was represented at both a recent Traverse City planners meeting and the Nov. 7 meeting at the Charlevoix library on the subject of 'green' infrastructure and preserving open space.

Mayor (Norman) Carlson defended the "no" votes of four councilmen saying "they weren't against green at all–we do a lot of that already."

We all know that much of our local economy is dependent on tourism. Visitors who come here to spend money on recreation care about Charlevoix being both "cool" and "green."

We hope the mayor, council and all of us aspire to create a city that becomes even more " cool and green."

Harvest Food and Supply Drive benefits WRC

Food and financial contributions are needed for the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan to continue providing safety and supportive services to survivors of domestic violence in northern Michigan.

The Women's Resource Center provides the only shelter for survivors of domestic abuse in Antrim, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet and Otsego counties. Safe Home provides emergency shelter 24 hours a day, 365 days a year and also offers a 24-hour crisis phone line. In the past year, 82 women and 116 children took refuge at Safe Home to escape the danger of emotional, verbal and/or physical abuse. The Women's Resource Center provided 3,264 nights of housing averaging nine persons per day. An additional 525 individuals received non-residential domestic abuse counseling services.

During the past year, food and supply costs at the Safe Home exceeded $18,000. The Harvest Food and Supply Drive is an opportunity to assist the Safe Home in providing food, supplies and personal items to the many families who utilize these emergency services.

Financial support is also essential and appreciated as it takes $375,000 a year to maintain and operate the shelter. A donation of $50 can feed and house a family of four at the Safe Home for a week. With projected government funding-cuts of approximately 10 percent in 2008, financial contributions are needed now more than ever.

Donations can be brought to the Women's Resource Center main office at 423 Porter St. in Petoskey; the Gold Mine Resale Shop, at the corner of Emmet and Washington streets in Petoskey; Bondurant at 206 Howard St. in Petoskey; the Cheboygan Office by calling (231) 627-2380; the Gaylord Office by calling (989) 731-0918; or the Mancelona Office by calling (231) 587-8891.

A copy of the Safe Home needs list is available at www.wrcnm.org or by calling (231) 347-1572.

It you happened to be at Ferry Beach on Saturday, August 18th, you probably wondered what all the excitement was about. The Lion's Club trailer was there, providing some great eats, kids romped in a (very busy) bouncy house, prizes galore were on display, and some great "background" music was playing. Nothing out of the ordinary, just Harbor Industries' annual summer picnic for employees and their family members. As usual, there was a great turn-out and, contrary to last year, Mother Nature provided a sunny, breezy day, and a good time was had by all!

Local man, local hero remembered

CROSS

his letter to Thompson.

Cade assured Thompson the loss of Cross was a loss for the Nation, and, as a Nation, "all flags at the National Fallen Firefighters Memorial were lowered to half-staff" upon notification of the incident. Cross has been further recognized on a national and state level by having his name engraved not only at the National Fallen Firefighters Memorial in Maryland but also on the Michigan Firefighters Memorial in Roscommon, Mich. Thompson said it is an important gesture that means a lot to the local department.

"We are honored they would take a person from such a small, rural, volunteer department and include his name with people from departments like Chicago, New York, those who died in 9-11. It is very equalizing," Thompson said.

Paterka added the gesture "levels the playing field" by recognizing that all service to the realm of fire fighting is important, valued and remembered. The gesture to Cross is also well deserved.

"He did all these things. He was a hero, but he did all of this because it needed to be done, not because he wanted or expected anything," Paterka said.

Cross was the type to disappear when cameras or media arrived at fires, Paterka and Thompson said, but was the first person to arrive, call or volunteer when anything needed to be done. He was the man young volunteers turned to while struggling with their training and testing. If not for Cross, many of the younger volunteers "would not have made it through" their testing, Paterka said.

Thompson said Cross, who worked well into his 70s, was "one of those people you could always ask to do anything, and if he was available, he would do it." He could be turned to for just about anything -- "he was a jack of all trades," Thompson said -- and never asked for anything in return. Paterka said Cross was "never afraid to go through the door," whether it was a door standing in front of a building full of fire and smoke, or a metaphorical door, standing in front of some other type of challenge. Knowing Cross was there with him at any fire call was a comfort to Paterka.

"He was that type of guy that would just go right on. I've seen him come out of a fire completely black, and it was such a comfort when you saw him at a fire. I was glad to have him there with me," Paterka said.

Describing his feelings for Cross, Paterka said he believes "the more respect you have for a person, the bigger they appear in your eyes." Paterka is about six-foot-four-inches tall, physically towering over the five-foot-six-inch Cross, but in Paterka's mind, he stood in Cross' shadow.

"I looked up to him," Paterka said.

Cross was one of the founding members of the Charlevoix Township Volunteer Fire Department, founded in 1973, and remained devoted to it for 34 years. Like all of his fellow volunteers, he didn't do it for the money, Paterka and Thompson said, but did it because of a personal commitment to the "brotherhood" fire fighting instills. "It gets into your blood," Paterka said, and it was in the blood of Cross, who held the position of Assistant Fire Chief at the time of his death. While the words of national officials like Cade are remarkable and comforting -- "we respect and honor his (Cross') service to his community and his fellow citizens in the times of need," Cade stated in his letter to Thompson -- the words and memories of his friends describe his service with stronger respect and honor.

"Now that he is gone, you sit back and realize all that he did. He will be so missed," Thompson said.

"Ralph (Cross) is someone who is admired for outstanding qualities and achievements. Whether he was going through the door of a burning building or through the door of a Kmart ... he gave his time, strength, knowledge and ultimately his life for what he believed in," Paterka stated.

> " He was a hero, but he did all of this because it needed to be done, not because he wanted or expected anything..."

Local teens to take on tobacco

"Teens Against Tobacco Jse" (TATU) training is ımong the activities underway to prevent, reduce or top peer smoking in Boyne 'alls and Charlevoix. The ıctivities are part of "Reducng Youth Smoking Rates in Northwest Michigan," one of he anti-tobacco campaigns unded by Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan through he 2007-08 school year at 27 Michigan high schools.

"Encouraging teens to ive tobacco-free is part of our comprehensive pro:ram to improve the health of all Michigan residents," aid Lynda Rossi, Blues 'ice president of public ›olicy and social mission. 'We want to do all we can o prevent youngsters from acing serious health condiions later on in life. Blues 'fforts to improve the health of young people range from ackling teen tobacco use, o our commitment to the tate's MIChild program, which provides health and lental coverage to eligible 'hildren."

The campaign is just one ›art of the Blue's compreıensive tobacco prevention 'fforts. BCBSM has partıered with the American ung Association of Michigan and Tobacco Free Michgan (tobaccofreemichigan. ›rg), a grassroots organizaion dedicated to promoting tobacco-free environments and improving the health and quality of life for Michigan residents through education and advocacy.

Locally, the Health Department of Northwest Michigan is coordinating activities with the Peer-2-Peer mentoring programs at Boyne Falls High School and Charlevoix Middle School with Blues funding and required matching funds. As members of Peer-2-Peer, the middle school and high school students – recommended as positive role models by their teachers and administrators—participate in a number of tobacco prevention projects. Projects inclulde mentoring at-risk elementary aged youth, making presentations about tobacco to early elementary students, and many community out reach projects.

"Research indicates that younger children are impressed by teenage role models and are more likely to accept messages about tobacco risks from them," said Teresa Sington, who coordinates tobacco control activities for the Health Department. "At the same time, teaching others about health risks has a positive impact on the peer educator's life."

The TATU training was not the first time the Charlevoix County Peer-2-Peer members joined together to learn new skills. As part of the matching funds required for the Blues project, Charlevoix County Community Foundation awarded a grant to the Charlevoix Peer-2-Peer groups for YMCA Camp Hayo-Went-Ha Leadership Training. The overnight program, held on the shores of Torch Lake, included team building exercises, networking with other schools and mentor training, all designed to increase Peer-2-Peer members' skills in advocating for smoke-free environments and preventing youth tobacco use in their local communities.

In Boyne Falls, Charlevoix, and every school participating in the BCBSM project statewide, teens are surveying fellow students' attitudes toward tobacco use and leading youth advocacy trainings. As part of each Blues grant, principals pledged that their schools will earn or maintain a "24/7 Tobacco Free" designation and teach the model curriculum developed y the State of Michigan that covers the health consequences of tobacco use and related issues. The campaign also directs individuals seeking information or help to the Michigan Tobacco Quitline at 800-QUIT-NOW (800-784-8669).

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is mandated by the Michigan Public Health Code to promote wellness, prevent disease, provide quality healthcare, address health problems of vulnerable populations, and protect the environment for the residents and visitors of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego counties. For additional information about the BCBSM youth tobacco prevention grant, contact Teresa Sington at 231-533 -1012.

The Charlevoix boys' varsity basketball team will take the court for the first time this season in Petoskey Dec. 7, facing Marquette in their opening game. What will bring them victory that day and throughout the season?

"We will depend on our kids and their attitudes in practice and in school to lead us to our goals," said head coach Keith Haske.

Assisted by fellow coaches Jim Gels and Scott Parrish, Haske hopes to help his players become "championship" teammates and individuals every day in practice, which will lead to victory through out the season, he said.

"If we do that, we will find success on the court," Haske commented.

The 14-man team hopes to pick up where last year's team left off, losing in the semi-final round to Saginaw Novel. The team finished with a 23-4 record, and seven of those players will return to the court this season: Nate LaBlanche, Cliff and Kyle Jones, Austin Wilhelm, Corey Gotshall, Jacob Hunt and Justin Friske, Jr.

Haske said that experience, combined with the talent of incoming underclassmen, will boost the team's chances. Last year's junior varsity team finised 19-1, and several of those players will assist the 2007 seniors.

Haske said all of the seniors on this year's team will play an important role with team leadership, and he expects them "to be unselfish and be a championship person in all situations."

The team will have its second season face-off Dec. 8, rivaling the winner of the Petoskey-Kalkaska game from the day before.

Girls' varsity BB out to 'surprise' competition

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Charevoix High School's girls' varsity basketball coach Bret Erskine said if his girls can play "hard-nosed Raydar basketball" throughout the 2007 season, the group just might "surprise some teams!"

The team, led by six returning seniors, has experience and a record of success, Erskine said, both from the seniors and the nine incoming juniors.

"I have six seniors from last year's team that contributed to the team's success. The group of junirs that are coming in are go-getters that set after it every night," Erskine said, adding the 20-0 record boasted by last year's junior varsity team proves they know their stuff.

> "The group of juniors that are coming in are go-getters that set after it every night..."
> Bret Erskine
> GIRLS' VARSITY HEAD COACH

The girls opened their season with non-league competition Nov. 27 in Frankfort. The hope is to extend the season a little further than last year's loss to McBain in regional action.

Erskine said he is not yet sure who will step into the leader position for the group, but "there are a few that show signs of becoming a leader." Once someone does, and the "hard-nosed" playing begins, the goal to "be competitive in every game" played is bound to be met, Erskine said. His plan is to "get the girls to be more aggressive and to play hard."

With new seasons comes new rules, MHSAA says

Winter Sports Season Underway – Rules Changes Include Sportsmanship Emphasis & Uniform Regulations

For member schools of the Michigan High School Athletic Association, the winter sports season --a time of year where over 70,000 young people are expected to take part in sports which will culminate in 9 championships -- is already underway.

Bowling in the Upper Peninsula, girls' competitive cheer, girls' gymnastics, ice hockey and swimming and diving in the Upper Peninsula have already begun competition. Last week saw games begin for girls' basketball (Nov. 26), wrestling (Nov. 28), and swimming and diving and bowling in the Lower Peninsula (Dec. 1). Competition begins this week for boys' basketball (Dec. 3) and skiing (Dec. 8).

Perhaps the most visible rules change for the winter is truly visual – white uniforms must now be worn by the home team in basketball for varsity competition. This National Federation of State High School Associations rule was enacted several years ago to take effect this year, giving schools an opportunity to plan for its implementation. Another major change in basketball is that the interval for replacing a disqualified player has been reduced from 30 seconds to 20 seconds.

But perhaps the most important rule change for the season comes in ice hockey, where the MHSAA Representative Council enacted tougher sportsmanship standards at its May, 2007, meeting. Effective this year, the penalties for player and coach game disqualifications in ice hockey will be at least double that of the minimums listed in the NFHS Ice Hockey Rules Book. A game disqualification will now require an individual to sit the next two games after receiving the first game disqualification in a season; four games after receiving a second game disqualification; and the remainder of the season after receiving a third game disqualification. Coaches are already subject to MHSAA rules which prohibit them from coaching in the Association's post-season tournament in their sport after their second ejection in a season for unsportsmanlike behavior; and players are prohibited from post-season tournament play upon their third such disqualification.

In wrestling, a new national rule taking effect this year will allow an offensive wrestler to request a neutral position restart. The defensive wrestler will still receive a point for an escape. The MHSAA Individual Wrestling Tournament will also be unified this year. Previously, individual competition had been conducted on a Peninsula basis. The Lower Peninsula Individual Wrestling Tournament began in 1948, and the Upper Peninsula Tournament started in 1967. The individual format was used to determine a team champion until 1988 in both peninsulas, when the Team Dual Wrestling Tournament started. Seventeen of the Association's 29 tournaments are unified competitions.

The 2007-08 Winter campaign culminates with post-season tournaments beginning with the Upper Peninsula Swimming & Diving Finals Feb. 16, and wraps up with the boys' basketball finals March 15. With the addition of the girls' basketball tournament to the winter, playing dates for both the boys' and girls' schedules have been set so they will not conflict with each other in overlap weeks. Here is a complete list of winter championship dates:

Water fountain becomes community project

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Friends of Charlevoix have the opportunity to contribute to the city — "leave behind a legacy," John Winn said — by donating to and becoming involved with a potential interactive water fountain project some hope will be included in the renovations of East Park.

"I visited one of these in Florida, and it just stuck in my head as something that would be great in Charlevoix," Winn said, referring to the water attraction he says can be a 'fun-for-all-ages' addition to the park landscape.

Winn and other community members became involved after the Charlevoix Downtown Developmet Authority supported the idea, agreeing to offer a portion of the approximately $280,000 needed to construct the fountain. Officials from the DDA board agreed that if a citizen committee, which Winn is now part of, could raise $100,000 in private donations, the project could move forward.

The funding breakdown lays most of the financial burdend — 52.6 percent — on the

CCMS pays up; City whole again

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Restitution has been made nearly three years after the fiscal fiasco which cost Charlevoix more than a quarter of a million dollars and its manager his job.

William Montgomery, owner of CCMS, a contractor hired to perform street work for the city back in 2001 and the man believed to have cashed a check accidentally addressed to him, made the second and final of 2 payments totaling $232,000, plus roughly $400 in interest, Tuesday, Dec. 4.

"It means the city is 100 percent whole," said Charlevoix City Attorney Jim Young. "It's really a question of having a fair and just result. Montgomery is the one that caused the problem initially by cashing a check and not turning the money over to his company, and then failing to pay the subcontractors that he used on a city project."

He added, "Based upon that, we felt he's the one that ultimately should be out the $230,000-plus and with John Jarema's (Charlevoix County Prosecutor) help, that's exactly what has happened."

The decision to involve himself, Jarema said, came after he was told by at least two prosecutors in the vicinity of Montgomery that they would not pursue a case against him.

Jarema

"I asked the attorney general (of Michigan) for his opinion on whether I would have venue because the work was done here, but the check was actually mailed to Sault Ste. Marie and cashed in St. Ignace," Jarema said.

CCMS payment saves City from $230,000 hit

Jarema had jurisdiction to prosecute the case himself, was vital to the recovery of these funds.

"I think the hammer I had on the guy, hesides (possibility of) jail time was that criminal restitution is not dischargeable in bankruptcy," Jarema said. "It would have followed him as a lien on any husiness and personal dealings until the debt was paid off."

Jarema received approval to be named the special prosecutor to the case, a move which apparently angered some of his constituents.

"When I was appointed, I received calls from individuals in this county asking me to resign because they didn't feel their tax dollars should be used for me to go to another jurisdiction to have me prosecute this guy for a quarter of a million hucks," he said "The last time I checked, the City of Charlevoix was still in Charlevoix County."

Jarema said he has no regrets.

"And I feel good about it. I think this is a good resolution because our citizens are not out (anything)," he said.

Though not what he would call a "run of the mill" case, Jarema said he won the city its money back without stepping foot outside the Charlevoix County line.

"The end result was the City of Charlevoix and their tax base, which is county residents, are not out this quarter of a million (dollars)," he said. "As soon as it was in the (news)paper that I would he prosecuting this individual (Montgomery), I got a call from his attorney. He said, 'How about if we pay hack the money?'"

Jarema then conferred with City Attorney Jim Young.

"I asked the city's wishes and they said yes, if I got restitution they would not ask me to prosecute," he said.

The first payment was made hy Montgomery in July.

"They (City of Charlevoix) could have said this guy was guilty 'til the cows come home and received judgments against him, but that doesn't mean they would have collected any money," Jarema said.

Young concurred that the chances of winning an out-of-town civil case against a shell corporation is nearly impossible.

"This is a very complex case. I have been very impressed with the way John Jarema handled this case and the way he worked effectively with the state police, city police and me to coordinate our efforts," Young said. "If he wouldn't have taken the case on, the best we could have done was to try to sue Mr. Montgomery for the money, hut that does not mean we would have recovered anything."

The city of Charlevoix agreed to make two-party checks payable tn CCMS and United Fire, the company which honded Montgomery. Montgomery had been late paying his suhcontractors and the bonding company, in an attempt to ensure they received their money, asked for a two-party check. However, the check was made out solely to Montgomery, and then for reasons which may forever remain unknown, he proceeded to cash the check and keep the money.

"I don't knnw what he did with the money, but he shouldn't have it," Young said.

There are no more lawsuits pending in this case.

rations, and has been since he was 14 years old. At that time, May said, his sister worked at the bank and asked him to do some holiday decorating.

"She recommended me, and it was easy money, not a hig deal, and it grew from there," May recalled.

May has changed his decorating schedule just once during his legacy with the bank, planning to not decorate one year while he was in college, but he was called to "re-do" some lights already up and ended up doing it all anyway. Now he expects the call every year around mid-October, asking if he will return to his duties, and he always does.

"If I didn't do this, I don't know what I would do the day after Thanksgiving," he joked.

May said he has a "creative edge" and enjoys spending the time outside decorating. With changes to the building and landscape over the years he's been able to try some new things here and there, but some things remain the same.

"I haven't changed the weepy crab apple tree because everyone likes that," he said.

May intends to continue the tradition for some time, he said.

Can we vote our way to freedom?

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Merry Christmas, idiots!

I should clarify that the "idiot" moniker applies only to me and you undecided voters who, as I have been made aware by numerous blogs, tend to be dumb-dumbs.

Remember that, in this country, considering options (flip-flopping) is less desirable a trait than joining the first boondoggle-on-wheels to schlep by.

You can rid your brain-pangs by blindly picking a two-party politico—god knows voting otherwise is akin to throwing your lit ballot on the neighbor's step, ringing his bell and running.

Optimists say voting your conscience communicates to those in power; the message being, "12 of us voted for Ralph Nader; take that corporate America!"

Queasy over my prospects, I turned to the candidate calculator, which matches your ideology with a candidate, at http://www.vajoe.com/candidate_calculator.html.

Suffice it to say a flatulent flea could have knocked me over when Dennis Kucinich's name popped up as my best choice.

I was unaware he and I were so close in belief thanks in part to a lackluster mainstream media and my own laziness.

I'm not saying I'll throw the switch for the elfish Ohioan Democrat but I was shocked to discover that either he's part libertarian or I'm part democrat. (I hope that statement doesn't get me kicked off the mailing list of Libertarian newsletter "Liberator Online".)

Besides, if history repeats, a frontrunner like Clinton, or Giuliani will win the federal folly.

And aside from the usual lip service and apathy toward personal freedom, what will this grade school popularity contest accomplish?

I don't think George Orwell meant to describe the act of a slave voting his way to freedom when he wrote, "If you want a vision of the future … imagine a boot stamping on a human face—forever," but that is what we face.

So, what are the chances of voting to freedom in 2008?

Well, only one of the 16 major party candidates—Ron Paul—plans to make changes necessary to end the federal government's constitutional treason, but what is the chance of freedom-loving citizens putting aside their differences for liberty?

Bush is fond of telling Americans they united after the 9/11 attacks, which of course we did not; gays and polygamists are still second-class citizens, drug users and prostitutes are still demoralized by unregulated enterprise made criminal by legislative lunatics.

Don't get me wrong, I won't counter good government B.S. by telling you not to participate in this beauty contest boondoggle, but we cannot simply pull the Tuesday Lever and consider our civic duty a done deal.

If we want our freedom, we're going to have to work for it because the democrats and republicans will likely continue to fail to deliver on their trite promises.

The small government, fiscally responsible rightwing cuts taxes while it increases spending, multiplies bureaucracies like the Dept. of Homeland Security and redistributes wealth with inventions like the Earned Income Credit, while spreading fear and lies about national health care despite the fact that everything from police, fire, education, libraries, road building and parks are already socialized and for the most part successful.

The pro-civil liberty leftwing is responsible for demoralizing laws like "don't ask, don't tell" and "defense of marriage act" in addition to promoting murder from the womb even in cases where after-the-fact birth control, not rape, incest or medical necessity, is the motivator.

Even if a pro-liberty politician somehow made it into office, and I'm nowhere near drunk enough to suggest that, he would face congressional and senatorial opposition at every turn.

I'd like to think stumping for my favorite figurehead is far less important than imploring like-minded folks to cooperate with one another.

The Catholic must stand shoulder to shoulder with the Protestant, Jew, Muslim and atheist; dope smoker with the teetotaler; and prude with prurient or our out of control government will continue to divide and conquer the citizenry while violating some of the very doctrine they swore to uphold.

Perhaps I am an idiot for being undecided, but I'm smart enough to know liberty does not equal anarchy and democracy does not equal freedom.

I've been a good little Gohs, but all I want for Christmas is that which my government had no right to take in the first place—that, and a president capable of pronouncing, "Nuclear."

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

Morning is here and the curtain of darkness makes me feel tired even though I've had enough sleep. Reaching into the living room closet I pull out my tall, black, furry boots and lace them tightly with hopes of keeping the freshly fallen snow from seeping in.

After donning a very heavy coat and looking for something to warm my hands, I notice my gloves are showing their wear at the finger tips reminding me I need to mend them. As a second thought I throw on a handmade scarf, covering my face as if I was raised in another country. Out the door I go guessing how deep the white stuff is and bracing myself for that first burst of wind coming off the lake. The thermometer tells me to prepare as I glance to look at it for one last time before taking in what nature will present this day. The crunch of the snow beneath my feet lets me know it's colder than I would like. I look up and see the moon on my left still visiting from the evening before and turn my body against the wind to see the sun rising. The strength of nature making snow look more like waves in the ocean and ice taking shapes resembling creatures from another world gives credit that there is a God and, feeling blessed, I am able to witness Nature's gift this morning. I tap off the mound of snow that found its home on the evenly-cut logs and carry in a bundle of wood the weight of a large dog. By the time I return and enter the kitchen door, the whistling of the kettle wakes me from my drowsy state. I search through the cupboards for a bold roasted coffee much like a miner seeking gold in the '40's. By the time the second cup of liquid gold fills my belly my thoughts start to sharpen about the upcoming Christmas holiday.

The feeling of Christmas was kick-started the evening before while listening to the beautiful sounds created by young men and women tapping out rhythms on their steel drums. The snow flakes were so large and coming down so quickly that each drummer had to be swift in scooping out the fluffy flakes to still keep up with the beat. Next to the musicians was a large white tent radiating with heat lamps and the warmth of good company. Steaming hot chocolate was offered to all who entered as contestants were in hot pursuit of making their's the best. With cocoa in hand I walked down the street taking in the beautifully decorated store fronts. The window displays were reminiscent of trips to Chicago and topped off by the new lights glimmering in the trees above. Christmas tunes from the past emanated the bone-chilling air while bundled up bodies gathered close together listening to sounds of the holiday and for one small moment the world was good. Our town was giving me a postcard look I'll always remember.

Cheerful retailers offered food samples, sales, and warmth, which kept everyone's spirit up. The walkways were cleared, welcoming shoppers to come in and browse, visit and purchase newly displayed items. I want to take this opportunity to thank all the individuals involved with keeping a holiday tradition and adding much more to it, proving that we can all get together and do something positively wonderful. So, from the bottom of my empty cup of cocoa, I say cheers to a job well done on Charlevoix's first official Flurry-Fest. There was a lot of festivity and it was definitely not lacking in the flurries department.

ADVENT BAZAAR & TEA THANKS

Editor,

I wanted to take this opportunity to thank all those who attended our fourth annual Advent Bazaar & Tea, which was held recently at Christ Episcopal Church. This was our fourth year, and we were to pleased with the attendance and generosity of those who came. Proceeds will again benefit the Charlevoix Ministerial Association and the Charlevoix Community Food Pantry. As the demand grows for the services these organizations provide, so does our response. Your faithful support of these ministries is greatly appreciated.

HEALTH DEPT. APPLAUDS SMOKE-FREE RULE

Editor:

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan applauds Northern Michigan Regional Hospital for assuring smokefree air for its patients, visitors, and staff by banning smoking on its campus. Our two organizations have worked together for many years as members of the local Tobacco Reduction Coalition to prevent youth tobacco use, help smokers quit, and support clean indoor air policies.

Most people have heard the statement, "secondhand smoke kills." For those of us in Northern Michigan, that means approximately 24 nonsmokers die every year from Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties, according to Michigan Department of Community Health estimates.

The 2006 Surgeon General's Report on the Health Consequences of Involuntary Exposure to Tobacco Smoke confirmed the known health effects of secondhand smoke exposure, such as immediate adverse effects on the cardiovascular system, coronary heart disease, and lung cancer. The report concluded there is no safe level of exposure to secondhand smoke and that establishing smokefree environments is the only proven way to prevent exposure. The report also finds that millions of Americans are still exposed to secondhand smoke despite substantial progress in tobacco control, including our own local smokefree worksite regulation.

Based on the mountain of evidence that secondhand smoke kills, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) & Prevention recently issued a warning for anyone at risk for heart disease to completely avoid smoke-filled rooms.

We salute Northern Michigan Regional Hospital for establishing a 100% tobacco-free campus and encourage other businesses to follow suit to protect the health of their employees, customers, and visitors.

AMERICA'S GLOBAL EDGE

Editor:

No where else on the planet does the average citizen believe she can be and do anything. This is the essence of the American Dream. Our country's ingenuity originates from people engaging their minds with matter. Technology, mechanics, and mathematical processes combine to create more efficient approaches to the same tasks. This is America's global edge in the arena of free trade. Breaking down every service and product to its simplest component parts obliges us to rethink how we craft and deliver our livelihoods.

At the root of the American Dream is public education. As a teacher, I know my peers embrace every child, pushing them to achieve their full potential. As a teacher, I know our national, state and local government officials place structure and content demands on schools to make us more competitive with our foreign counterparts. As a state, we do recognize the importance of education. However, we must press our state legislators to find various revenue sources to completely fund our future. Workers must be trained in new technologies and students must learn languages and the latest skills as businesses prepare for the changing global economy. We must move our workforce higher up the manufacturing food chain.

In Charlevoix, Emmet, and Antrim counties alone, school districts have cut well over $11 million from their budgets in the past 5 years. We have cut programs, enlarged class sizes, and are currently operating from one fiscal quarter to the next. Our legislature has spent the last decade giving away revenue rather than protecting in the School Aid Fund, and it continues to do so. It is time for us begin investing.

We must reinstate full funding for every level of education if we want to be globally competitive. The average citizen needs our government to make his or her future its first priority. During the ongoing state budget discussions, contact your congressperson – tell him or her to represent you and your community. Educate us, and then watch us compete.

GRANHOLM 'DOES IT AGAIN'

Editor:

Gov. Granholm does it again. She know(s) how to spend money that she does not have. She had the Dept of Treasury send out 309,293 post cards to citizens to tell them she raised their taxes from 3.9% to 4.35% for a total cost of $72,740. These funds could have been used to keep our state parks open. Where else is she spending money that the taxpayers don't know about that could be spent to really help the state?

CHRISTMAS PROJECT CONTINUES

Editor:

The Charlevoix Christmas Project wishes to acknowledge and thank the Rainbow Shoppe and their volunteers for participating in a unique sale that benefits the project's Christmas dinner program. The sale ran at the Shoppe from Nov. 22 until Dec. 8 and customers making a purchase got up to $5 off by simply bringing into the store canned fruit. The canned fruit will be donated to the Christmas Project and will be used in their boxed Christmas dinners.

Robin Maurer, of the Rainbow Shoppe approached Bev Boss, Chairperson of the Christmas Project, with the idea of offering people who shop the Rainbow Shoppe a discount in exchange for canned food. Both Bev Boss and Robin Maurer felt this would be an excellent means in helping to provide needed food for area families during the Christmas Season. Canned fruit was an item that was lacking in the project's Christmas distribution food package, so by bringing into the Rainbow Shoppe a can of fruit and receiving a $1 off up to $5 area residents can help sweeten up the Project's Christmas dinners.

Joan C. Lemerand
Chairperson, Charlevoix Christmas Project

RE-THINK ROAD WORK RULE

Editor:

We are writing to strongly protest the decision by the Charlevoix County Road Commission to not plow any secondary roads in Charlevoix County on weekends. This past weekend we had over 10 inches of snow and no plowing was done. We had an extremely difficult time on Pincherry and Horton Bay roads while trying to attend church on Sunday. We have an all-wheel drive vehicle, our private contractor plowed our immediate area, but upon reaching the county roads we encountered deep, rutted show. Traveling under 25 mph we continued on to church. We tried an alternate way home and found it equally difficult driving.

The decision to not plow roads on weekends relegates residents to their homes and it certainly will have an impact on tourism. We talked to a family who had to make an emergency run to Northern Michigan Hospital on Saturday night (Dec. 1) from Boyne City and found the travel awful. Emergency vehicles would certainly have had a difficult time responding. There must be a better answer to the budget crunch.

We certainly hope the Charlevoix County Road Commission will re-examine this policy and find a better solution. Comp time, plowing only when snow is over four inches deep, single lane plowing, etc., should be explored. Do not shut down the county on weekends!

Crooked Tree Arts Center's holds 27th annual Juried Photography Exhibition

Crooked Tree Arts Center will host its 27th annual Juried Photography exhibition from Jan. 12 through March 1, 2008. The juror for the 2008 exhibition is Tom Halsted from Birmingham, Michigan, owner of the former Halsted Gallery.

In November of 1969 Halsted found a great old house in which to start his first gallery. The gallery started dedicated primarily to the education of the public about fine art photography and, as awareness grew, so did the gallery. In the early days, Halsted had personal relationships with some of the masters of photography such as Ansel Adams, Imogen Cunningham, Harry Callahan, 'Andre' Kertesz and many others.

Artwork will be accepted at the Crooked Tree Arts Center from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Jan. 4 and 5, 2008. All work must be dependent primarily on the photographic process. The 27th annual Juried Photography Exhibition is open to all Michigan photographers 18 years or older and to members of the Crooked Tree Arts Center. Each photographer may submit up to two entries. Works must not be previously exhibited at Crooked Tree Arts Center. Works must be properly framed, wired and ready for hanging. A non-refundable fee of $30 per photographer is required for entry (CTAC members $15.)

Work must be delivered and picked up by the photographer who created the work unless a signed release from the artist accompanies the person delivering the work allowing the work to be displayed at CTAC. All photographers are responsible for delivery and pick-up of their work. The opening reception will take place from 2 to 4 p.m. Jan. 12.

For more information please contact Crooked Tree Arts Center at 461 East Mitchell Street, Petoskey, Michigan 49770, call at (231) 347-4337, or go online at www.crookedtree.org. This program is supported in part by the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs.

Festival of Carols rescheduled

The Festival of Carols event originally scheduled for Dec. 2 but cancelled due to weather has been rescheduled for Sunday, Dec. 16. Beginning at 4 p.m., the Jordan Valley Chorale, under the direction of Ellen Addington, will present a "Festival of Carols" at the United Methodist Church at 201 Fourth Street, East Jordan. Singers from Charlevoix, East Jordan and Central Lake join in presenting a program of works including Palestrina, Grotenhuis, Reger, Marshall, Rutter and Darke.

Featured soloists are Barb Dowty, soprano and Ron Klooster, as well as Pam Luce, contralto, who will be introducing a composition by local composer Elizabeth Humphrey, written for the occasion. Hand bells will accompany the Jane Marshall number and maracas on the rhythmic, playful Walter Grady's "Sing Joyously." Elizabeth Humphrey, pianist and accompanist for the chorale, will offer her "Christmas Potpourri," which has become a highlight of the program.

The audience will be an important part of the Festival, joining with the Chorale in singing many of the favorite carols and ushering in this joyous time of Advent/Christmas with happy sounds of the seasons. There is no charge, but contributions will be gratefully accepted and donated to the Community Food Pantry.

A reception in the undercroft will follow the program.

Spirit of giving brings benefits to Boulder Park

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Murray Kilgour, left, recenlty spearheaded a project to construct a picket fence outside Boulder Park Senior Living Facility, hoping to create a courtyard atmosphere around the building. Kilgour is joined by nurse Ginny Foltz, center, and Boulder Park Guild member Mary Faculak.

The Christmas spirit of giving is something Murray Kilgour and his wife, Jeannie, take very seriously.

During Christmas time, they consider giving gifts to express their thanks to a group of people that have, in the past three years, become very important in their lives: the nurses, administration and staff at Boulder Park Terrace Skilled Nurse and Rehabilitation Facility. Last year, however, Kilgour and his wife decided they wanted to do more for the group of people caring for Jeannie's mother, Jean Sager, than "just the typical candy, cookies and flowers."

"We started talking about it and decided we wanted to do something that would have more of a lasting impact on the daily lives of the nurses and residents here," Kilgour recalled.

That was the beginning of what has become a very important project for Boulder Park and the surrounding community, Nurse Ginny Foltz said. Kilgour approached Foltz last year around Christmas time, wondering if she had any ideas about what he could do for the facility. At the time, nothing came to mind, but around June, 2007, an idea struck her and Kilgour jumped on board.

"I had always thought adding a fence (outside the facility) would be a good idea, but I had no idea what would be involved," Foltz said.

Getting the residents outside in a safe, supervised environment was something Foltz and other nurses felt would be of benefit to their health and over-all well-being. Kilgour, always concerned about his mother-in-law and the many friends he's made during his nearly daily visits to the facility, agreed, and set to work. Now, just six months later, the fence — a classic white picket fence surrounding the courtyard outside the facility and near the matching gazebo — is a reality, and has snow-balled into an even larger endeavor.

"The project has morphed a bit since the beginning, and now there are more phases," Kilgour explained, describing plans to extend the walkway, do landscaping work in the spring, install electricity to the gazebo and install video monitoring equipment to enhance safety for residents while enjoying their new courtyard.

"This is something that will really benefit the community, as well as surrounding communities," said Boulder Park Guild member Mary Faculak.

Boulder Park has been an important part of Faculak's life for 11 years, having been home to her grandmother, mother and father. Visiting nearly daily, like Kilgour, Faculak said the facility is not only home to her mother, but also home to her "extended family," and she has learned from and enjoyed the many benefits and activities involved with the facility.

"There is a misconception that Boulder Park projects come out of residents' taxes, but this is a nonprofit, and there are so many things going on here that offer the opportunity for the community to be a part of," she said.

The courtyard and walkway project is a perfect example of a community benefit, Faculak said, because she, Kilgour and others envision the finished product to be something the entire community can enjoy, getting "back to nature" in such a way that can also help connect residents with the outside world.

"Visitors can get outside with the residents, which is something that is hugely beneficial for them and their health," she said. "And the entire community can use it, just enjoying time outside and the beauty of nature."

Kilgour and other family members donated enough funding for the fence, and Boulder Park representatives "welcome donations" to support the remainder of the project. Kilgour said the idea is "more of an asset for the whole community" than just the facility and its residents.

Foltz and Faculak expressed thanks and respect for Kilgour's actions in the project, both appreciative of his involvement.

"This is a great example of something that is very selfless, giving not only to all the residents here now but also to all those in the future," Faculak said. "It is a wonderful way to leave something to the facility and the community."

Foltz said Kilgour embraced a vague idea she had — "I just thought we'd get some people together, and, poof, we'd have a fence; I had no idea what would be involved," she said — and made it a reality.

"God really puts people in your pathway that you need at that moment. I am amazed. I am in awe of him," she said.

The opportunity for residents to get outdoors, have some safe time alone out with nature, and the ability for those in the rehabilitation center to get some exercise, are all priceless benefits for the facility, Foltz and Faculak agreed.

Faculak said while Kilgour's contribution is one that has amazed her and others, she reminded the community that any contribution of talent, money or time is always welcome at the facility. There are countless opportunities for individuals to make a contribution, whether it be visiting during Friday Happy Hour when residents and visitors enjoy refreshments and a variety of local entertainment, craft time, reading a book to a resident or just stopping by for a chat with anyone, it is an important gesture.

"A small gift can make a big difference. It is important to keep the residents here connected with the outside world and community, and visitors are always welcome," she said, adding her own time there has "enriched" her life and made her a better person.

Norwood Township sans Ethics doctrine

Norwood Sans The Ethics
BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

At a glance...

Norwood Township officials annexed the requirement for new officials to sign a code of ethics pledge, regarding it as a duplication of expected practices.

""We take an oath of office and swear to uphold the constitution of the state and, anybody whose integrity is in question ... should not be appointed in the first place.""

Tom Mielke
NORWOOD TOWNSHIP PLANNING COMMISSION CHAIRMAN

The duplicitous doctrine which some claim came back to bite both Norwood officials and a local mine owner is no more.

Norwood Township Board members this week rescinded their three-year-old requirement for newly elected officials to sign a code of ethics pledge—the same pledge which, among other statutes, Traverse City Judge Thomas Power weeks ago cited in his decision to shut down recently resigned Norwood Supervisor Wayne Wynkoop's limestone mine—which unnecessarily mirrors existing oaths of office.

"It was not an ordinance so there was no need to have any public hearing on it. We just removed it as part of a condition for serving on a board. That was actually Wayne Wynkoop's idea when he was elected supervisor," said Norwood Township board member Denny Way. "He felt like there was a need for it because there were people questioning the conduct of people on the board. He thought he would draw up a letter and take it over and above the oath of office we usually take."

Norwood Planning Commission member and chairman Tom Mielke agreed the pledge was unnecessary and lauded the 2—1 vote to void it.

"We take an oath of office and swear to uphold the constitution of the state and, anybody whose integrity is in question to the point that they need to sign a statement like that should not be appointed in the first place," he said.

Mielke added the code of ethics played a role in the court ruling regarding Wynkoop's business, part of what led to the supervisor's resignation announced last week.

"I think part of his (Power's) judgment on avoiding the appearance of impropriety as basis for vacating the (Wynkoop's) special use permit granted by the planning commission was based on this code of ethics."

Mielke added, "In a small township everybody knows everybody and somebody's always going to think you're doing somebody a favor. How do you avoid the appearance of impropriety when that could be so different to so many people?"

With Wynkoop having resigned and board member Sadie Bartosik out due to illness, only three board members were present to vote: Way and township clerk Michelle Cyr voted in favor and board member David Leusink voted against the measure.

Norwood resident and founder of Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety, the citizens group who recently won a court decision which prevents Wynkoop from operating his limestone mining operation, Bill Gnodtke is surprised the board rescinded the code of ethics, but does not feel the move will be detrimental to the township.

"My feeling is that the board is governed by statue and their own conscience and that this was unneeded when it was adopted."

Gnodtke said. "It comes at an unfortunate time, but I do not read anything sinister into the actions of the board in rescinding it."

He added, "I would have thought, with all the things going on in this township, that this would not be much of a priority."

Way was careful to remind township residents that the board is still bound to uphold all ethics and standards required of various respective offices.

"We just won't refer to that particular document," he said. "It's not like we're going to run amuck and do anything we want."

On a related note, the NTCHS will next face Wynkoop, the architect of the code of ethics who did not return calls by press time, at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 19 in Bellaire's 13th Circuit Court.

Could HR position prevent city woes?

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Having already approved hire of a part-time airport manager for the city, Charlevoix City Council members heard further testimony regarding potential hire of a part-time human resources assistant to "reduce the risk of the city's liability," and address other personnel issues.

Discussion continued on the matter at a work session held last week, and council will make a formal decision on the matter at a special council meeting Thursday, Dec. 13. City Manager Rob Straebel made the recommendation to hire the two part-time positions at a Nov. 19 council meeting, and met the group's request for more information regarding the HR position last week. Straebel presented the council with three options on the matter: continue doing HR related tasks in-house, hire a professional outside consultant for an unspecified amount of time, or hire a part-time HR assistant.

Straebel's presentation was joined by input from council members, most of whom supported the part-time hire despite disagreement on the matter in the past.

"I think we've wasted enough time on this. The cost of a salary (for this position) is nothing compared to what a lawsuit would be if there ever was a problem," said Lyle Gennett. "I think we need to move forward with this."

The group's recommendation, which will be considered and likely voted upon at the Dec. 13 meeting, is to hire an HR assistant under terms of a 20- to 24-hour work week for 50 weeks per year, with evaluation every year or two years. Straebel's initial recommendation was to contract the position for two years and re-evaluate the need for it at that time, but discussion led to the decision to make it known to the hire the position may not be long term.

"It is already in the contract for every city employee to be evaluated at budget time each year. If the position isn't needed or there isn't money for it, it is eliminated," said Mayor Norman Carlson. "I think it would be fair to let the person know that (will be the case)."

Straebel and others agreed there could be a greater need for the position — potentially even a full-time HR position — in two years, or there could be no need for it at all. The need for the position initially lays heavily upon updating city policies regarding compensation, hiring procedures and other personnel matters, updating policy language to comply with state and federal regulations, establishing and maintaining employee evaluation procedures, and creating and maintaining job descriptions for all city positions. Once that is "brought up to speed," Straebel said, the position could have little to do or be kept busy, depending on how state and federal laws change.

Straebel offered pros and cons to each of his three options, noting expense as a major con to hiring an outside consultant. After "looking around," he found the average cost is $75 to $150 an hour,

City Manager Rob Straebel presented three options to city council members regarding HR issues: hire outside consultant, hire part-time HR assistant, or do nothing.

Council members are leaning toward creation of the position on a temporary — likely two-year — position and will vote at a special meeting at noon, Thursday, Dec. 13.

City considers hire of HR position which would not only be a financial burden but also limit the time that person could spend with city employees.

"The input I've gotten from department heads is the need to have someone on staff in the building to bounce ideas off and work with. This would limit the amount of time the HR person could work with our staff," he said.

Advantages to the approach are the strength of knowledge and experience in HR issues.

"To do nothing" was another option Straebel presented, an approach he said could lead to problems. Input from city employees as well as outside individuals, including representatives from Michigan Municipal League, suggested a liability risk if nothing is done.

"The report from MML summed it up very well: the city cannot afford to continue as-is," he said, noting such problems as out-of-date policies and time taken away from department heads, including himself, addressing HR matters.

"I spent two hours just in the last two days myself dealing with an HR issue. Department heads are spending a lot of time dealing with this, and it is taking away from their other duties," he said.

Updating job descriptions will become even more vital in coming years, Straebel added, due to the anticipated retire of "a lot of employees in the next few years." Baby Boomers are "a large percentage of our work force," he said, representing "pivotal" positions that will need to be filled.

"We need to plan ahead for that," he said.

The option to hire a part-time position would come with an anticipated $30,000 to $33,000 price tag for the city. Straebel said $32,900 is currently budgeted for the position, and the advantages likely outweigh the cost. The hope, he said, is to hire someone to work within the budgeted amount, work in-house to "interact with department heads and help with the issues that exist."

When questioned about partnering with another municipal entity, Straebel said he checked with Charlevoix County, but "there was no interest there," as county officials felt "county issues were not the same as city issues." County officials desired to continue having commissioners handle issues on a case-by-case basis. Other neighboring entities such as East Jordan and Harbor Springs have their own systems in place.

Straebel said working with such entities in an option in terms of developing HR procedures. Noting the "wheel does not have to be re-invented," he said the city could rely on other entities for developing and utilizing procedures.

Council member Jill Picha offered the suggestion of hiring an outside consultant just to "update the files, policies and other things," work with the department heads, and then leave the issues in the hands of in-house employees.

"In my experience (in business) once you have everything in order and trained all the department heads, you just have to keep the information on file," she said, adding if a problem arose, "you would have to ultimately hire an attorney anyway."

Carlson said he believed the need for an HR position would continue after paperwork duties, as "every month, every year something changes with state and federal guidelines." Picha added she is not against the part-time hire, but wanted to "put the idea on the table."

City Clerk Carol Ochs said an HR person could be kept busy with tasks such as public relations duties, employee moral and other things done "on a daily basis," also stressing the need for a pro-active approach regarding liability.

"Someday there could be something that could turn around and bite us. Wouldn't it be nice to head that off at the pass and not get to that point," she said. "The bottom line is you need to decide whether to make this position, then put it in the hands of the city manager, let him manage and decide how to best implement (the position)."

Ochs also noted the city paid for an HR audit this year "and failed badly," stressing the $33,000 cost of an HR position would be worth it considering the potential cost of such failed audits.

Carlson noted other benefits as well.

"The legal stuff is very important but an HR person also creates an atmosphere that is good to work in. They do the PR stuff, work to promote the city, and pat everyone on the back for doing a good job," he said. "They can keep morale up and keep that 'city first' attitude."

Thursday's special meeting begins at noon, and Straebel expects to be prepared to begin the hiring process if council approves the recommendation. Advertising has already begun for the airport manager position, and Straebel said the city could begin scheduling interviews after the holidays, depending on the quality and number of applicants received by that time.

Family physician comes to Charlevoix

Mark Smith, M.D.

The Charlevoix area has gained a new family practice specialist. Mark Smith, MD, has opened a practice at 14730 Park Avenue, on the Charlevoix Area Hospital campus, where he will see patients every Wednesday. Dr. Smith also staffs the hospital's emergency department several days a week.

A Michigan native, Dr. Smith studied at Aquinas College, earned his medical degree from Wayne State University School of Medicine, and served his residency at Grand Rapids Family Medicine. He is certified by the American Academy of Family Physicians.

Area residents may remember Dr. Smith from the East Jordan Family Health Center, where he was on staff in 2003. Prior to coming to Charlevoix with his family, he practiced for four years in Manistee.

Dr. Smith is married to Mary Ivy, MD, an OB/Gyn specialist who recently joined Charlevoix Women's Health Care. The couple, along with their two young children, is making their home in Charlevoix.

"This was such a wonderful opportunity," Dr. Smith said. "Both of us love this area and we're happy to be back."

For the time being, Dr. Smith will be in his office only on Wednesday, although he looks forward to building a practice and expanding office hours as time and space become available. With a focus on comprehensive, preventive health care, his practice will include people of all ages—from kids to geriatric patients.

Those who would like to make an appointment with Dr. Smith may do so by calling his office any day of the week, at (231) 547-6510.

10 Reasons to bring it
Home for Christmas!

1. Taxes

3. Employment
Area businesses employ area people. Your local spending helps create jobs for your friends, family and neighbors.

4. Quality Merchandise
When you buy locally you're building on a relationship with a business. Your satisfaction is paramount to the business so any problems you may have will be handled on a personal basis.

5. Community Involvement

YAC gives youth chance to meet area needs

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

In 1990, the Kellogg Foundation had a vision — to establish a community-minded, community-funded endowment entity in every county in Michigan.

Before the turn of the century, the vision had become reality and now, among the 83 county foundations, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation has nearly $22 million in net assets to its name, more than 200 charitable funds, and ambitions to continue its trend of growth.

"Our growth is a testament to the generosity not only of those who live in Charlevoix year round but also to the summer residents," said Community Foundation President Bob Tambellini, noting the more than $1 million distributed to local organizations and programs each year.

While proud of the foundation as a whole, Tambellini digressed to congratulate one of the organization's proudest endeavors— the establishment of the Youth Advisory Committee, often known as YAC, which invites students from five area public high schools and two charter schools to "work together intelligently to decide how to distribute $50,000 in funds each year."

"It is a real unique experience. How else would ninth through twelfth graders have the opportunity to work with these kinds of resources in an intelligent way and work with others to meet the needs of the community?" Tambellini explained.

Sixteen area students are YAC members this year, coming from Beaver Island, Charlevoix, East Jordan, Boyne City and Boyne Falls schools as well as Northwest Academy and Boyne Concord Academy charter schools. The students work collectively to distribute up to $25,000 in each of two grant cycles each year, in March and October, offering grant support to local programs they believe meet local needs.

It can be a challenge at times, Tambellini said, to get youth, especially those in the freshman and sophomore age range, to "change their way of thinking," and focus on others instead of themselves.

"I think it is perfectly natural for young people to be somewhat self-absorbed, especially at younger ages, and an experience like this gives them the opportunity to learn about other people's needs and the kinds of services available to meet those needs," he said.

For many youth involved, YAC is the first connection to needs such as training for at-risk youth, gathering warm winter clothing for children without hats, coats or gloves, or programs that help families needing food or shelter. Other programs such as those supporting school programs, craft programs or music and dance may not be as foreign, but remain important in their efforts to help the Charlevoix community, Tambellini said.

In the fall 2007 grant cycle, YAC members supported these and other needs, awarding 9 grants totaling $23,350. BASES Teen Center, the Blissfest Music Organization, Child and Family Services of Northwest Michigan, Jordan Valley District Library and the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan were some of the organizations students deemed worthy of their financial backing, decisions made following a very involved and professional process, Tambellini said. Reviewing formal proposals from the organizations, listening to presentations and visiting the organizations to get a first-hand view of the programs made YAC members aware of and familiar with many programs in the area.

"They come in as freshmen cold to all the nonprofit organizations in the area, but by the time they are seniors they have worked with and know all about the organizations. They come to be opinionated about the services offered and learn a lot about them," he said.

Youth — and adults — are often unaware of the services provided by organizations such as United Way, the American Red-Cross, the Salvation Army, the Women's Resource Center, area libraries and area art organizations "until they need them," Tambellini said. Involvement in YAC, and the Community Foundation in general, can help people "see how these nonprofits touch the lives of themselves and their loved ones and see what connections are there."

Tambellini said the legacy of community foundations throughout the state began when the Kellogg Foundation offered $35 million to the Council of Michigan Foundations, the "umbrella" organization for foundations throughout the state, hoping to encourage growth in philanthropic giving in Michigan. An incentive to create community foundations came in the form of a promise to give 50 cents for every dollar raised by communities that agreed to pursue the idea. In 1991, Charlevoix County accepted that challenge, and had 5 years to raise $50,000. The goal was met and, like others that met the challenge, the $1 million base was put into a fund designated to support a youth program. Hence, the YAC group was formed.

The Community Foundation as a whole is supported by three larger foundations — the Kellogg Foundation, the Malpass Foundation and the Frey Foundation — as well as community funding support offered through contributions to the 200 charitable funds that have been established since 1991. Managing funds and distributing grants is done by the 15-member Board of Trustees, a group Tambellini said creates and maintains the reputation of the foundation.

"The trustees have offered the greatest amount of credibility. They are local people, highly thought of, well-known, and they provide a sense of comfort," he said.

In its 15-year history, the foundation has developed a credible reputation, a system for developing and maintaining the six types of funds available to donors, and met the wishes of all donors in terms of what services should be supported in the community. The growth and success of the foundation is something Tambellini, who has been involved since the beginning, is proud of.

"One of the greatest measures of our success is the extent of participation we've received," he said.

What has YAC and Community Foundation done?

YAC has awarded $593,000 to local programs since it began distributing grants in 1994

Each year YAC distributes $50,000 to programs, split between two grant cycles

In the last 15 years, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation has awarded $7.5 million to local programs

The Community Foundation awards $1 million annually in support of nonprofit organizations

New drivers' licenses aimed at boosting security

At a glance...

- Optional "enhanced" driver's license can be used at border crossings, making travel easier, reducing the need for passports
- Only Michigan residents who are also US citizens will be eligible
- Standard licenses could also be upgraded to help prevent fraud

The Drive for a safer Michigan

Secretary Land proposes enhancing security of driver's licenses, adding convenient option.

Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land recently announced an initiative to provide Michigan residents with another layer of protection by enhancing the security of driver's licenses.

"Our world continues to change and Michigan must keep pace," Land said. "This plan ensures the integrity of state-issued licenses and helps to secure American's borders. Of course, our customers' needs are always important to us. That's why we crafted our initiative to provide residents with a convenient option depending on their travel needs. Bolstering the security of our licenses is good for families, good for Michigan and good for America."

Land's proposal contains two packages of bills. One deals with upgrading Michigan's "standard" driver's license and the other creates an optional "enhanced" driver's license that is suitable for border crossing under the federal Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative (WHTI).

The upgraded "standard" driver's license and state issued identification card will have added security features to prevent fraud. Only people who are Michigan residents and legally present in the United States will be eligible for the license. The upgraded license also can be used by residents for domestic air travel where the federal REAL ID-Act takes effect. Without these upgraded documents, all Michigan residents will need a passport to board even domestic flights. Primary sponsors of these bills are state Sen. Alan Sanborn and Tony Stamas and state Reps. Phillip Pavlov and Mike Nols.

The optional "enhanced" driver's license and state ID card can be used for travel to and from Canada and other Western Hemisphere countries once the more stringent policies under WHTI take effect. Only Michigan residents who are also U.S. citizens will be eligible for the enhanced license. Residents who do not have an enhanced license or ID card will need a passport to visit Canada. Land first introduced the concept of an enhanced license in 2005 as a way to prevent the new federal requirements from negatively impacting commerce and inconveniencing residents who visit Canada. This plan has been supported by many in the business community including the Detroit Regional Chamber. Primary sponsors of the WHTI bills are state Sens. Judy Gilbert, John Pappageorge and Cameron Brown, and state Reps. Steve Tobocman, Ed Clemente and Bill Huizenga.

"Southeast Michigan, particularly tourist destinations like downtown Detroit and Mexicantown, and our entire state have strong economic ties to Canada," said Tobocman, D-Detroit. "The enhanced license will protect that vital relationship by keeping border crossings convenient without sacrificing homeland security."

"Nothing is more important than the safety of Michigan's residents," said Gilbert, R-Algonac. "By enacting these changes, we will take a critical step in ensuring a secure future for our state and nation."

Both the upgraded standard and enhanced versions will comply with REAL ID Act requirements, a national effort to prevent terrorism, reduce fraud and improve the reliability of identification documents issued by states. Only the enhanced documents, which are optional, will comply with WHTI.

In addition to the latest security features, the upgraded standard license will contain bar code technology similar to the one on current Michigan driver's licenses and ID cards.

Cost of the new licenses and ID cards will be slightly higher than the current versions due to the enhanced security features and additional required document checks. The actual amount will not be determined until all components of the law are finalized.

The federal government has yet to release final rules for the REAL ID Act.

Residents unite to push Boyne City Road repairs

BY STEVE ZUCKER NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

HORTON BAY — Although there are bound to be some bumps along the road, a group of Charlevoix County citizens say there ought to be far fewer as they travel one of the busiest roads in the county.

Bay Township resident Jerry Matelski, who lives on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road (also known as C-56) said around Oct. 1 he was talking with his neighbor Bill Winn about the bad condition of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road — the county's main east-west road.

Their conversation led to action. They've formed a group — the Concerned Citizens of Charlevoix County — put up signs at either end of the road to alert motorists to their cause, set up a Web site, called elected officials, attended township board meetings, circulated surveys and now they want the rest of the community to come to a road funding meeting later this week and share their views about the condition of the road.

Matelski and his group say the road is a safety hazard and in need of a complete overhaul. Matelski says the edges of the road in many places are so rough that it not only causes excessive wear and sometimes damage to vehicles traveling the road and it can cause people to have difficulty keeping their vehicles under control. He said some people straddle the centerline as they travel in search of a smoother ride — which is also a hazard.

Where's the money going?

Charlevoix County Road Commission Manager Pat Harmon, whose crews are responsible for maintaining the road, couldn't agree more.

The problem, Harmon says, is finding the money for what he estimates will be at least a $5 million project.

At 7 p.m. on Wednesday at the Boyne City City Hall, Harmon will meet with officials from the cities of Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan for an annual meeting at which they will decide how to spend the federal and state road funding allotment for the county for the coming year.

Actually, there won't be much to split up.

That's because the roughly $400,000 in road construction funds the county is projected to receive for 2008 is already spoken for. In fact $266,000 of it was spent last year to pay for the Thumb Lake Road reconstruction project. The rest is to be socked away until 2010 when it will be used with money from 2009 to pay for a project to reconstruct Division Street in Boyne City. Right now, Harmon said the earliest money might be available for work on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road is 2011 or 2012. And even then it won't come close to paying for fixing the entire length of the road.

Matelski said he's had conversations with leaders of the three townships in which the bulk of the road runs — Bay, Evangeline and Hayes — and said those leaders have expressed an interest in providing some money from their respective road improvement funds to help pay for the project.

Another option, Harmon said, would be another attempt to pass a county-wide road millage. In 2006 Charlevoix County voters defeated a request for a five-year one-mil levy by about 150 votes. Officials estimated the millage would have raised about $1.87 million per year.

Christmas Project gets boost from area churches

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Twenty-four years ago, the idea to expand the food pantry organized through the First Congressional Church in Charlevoix into a Christmas gift-giving project to help area families arose, serving13 families on a budget of $300.

Last year, 175 local families were helped with the Christmas Project, which now encompasses community members as well as the First Congregational Church and other area churches, businesses and organizations, on a budget of $6,500. In 2007, 204 families have signed up and the financial demand continues to grow.

"I don't even want to think yet about the budget for this year, but we're pulling together," said Bev Boss, one of a number of dedicated volunteers bringing together the community effort that aims to make Christmas a little merrier for families facing financial struggles.

The growth of the Christmas Project has brought a variety of facets into the mix, creating a number of vital community partnerships such as that of the Marine Corps with their Toys for Tots campaign, the St. Mary Church of Charlevoix with its Giving Tree campaign, and separate collections such as food, winter clothing, toys and books for area families. Christmas Project coordinators faced a challenge in 2007, wondering, with the increase in families needing help, how to find funds to purchase Christmas books for every family with children of elementary school age or younger. Boss said 100 books are usually purchased, but funds were tight, numbers were up, and the group was unsure of where to turn.

But the community stepped up, Boss and fellow Christmas Project Chairperson Joan Lemerand said. The Charlevoix Public Library offered an in-kind service, volunteering to order the books through the library, reducing the expense. Also two area churches — the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix and the Bethany Lutheran Church — donated funds for the book purchase.

"We (Bethany Lutheran Church) contribute in some way every year, either donating coats and hats or some other thing, and we decided this year money was needed more," said Mary Fikes of the Bethany Lutheran Church.

Boss and Lemerand said they were excited about the support, but even more excited — and surprised — at the news of the $1,600 donation the church was making. Fikes said the congregation raised $800 through a silent auction and dinner at the church, and a national organization known as Thrivent matched the amount through its Caring in the Community program.

The First Congregational Church got its youth involved with fundraising, holding a number of "noise offerings," said member Marty Trubilowicz, which raised $160 in change to donate to the cause. Together, the donations will cover the cost required to provide every family with a Christmas book.

Another facet of the Christmas Project has also felt the burden of tough economic times this Christmas season. The annual Giving Tree project, organized by the St. Mary Church of Charlevoix, invites families to fill out a tag, which is placed on the Giving Tree in the church, with Christmas wishes and needs for families and children.

"This one is for a two-year-old boy and has his clothing size on it, some clothes that he needs, and an idea for toys for Christmas," said Giving Tree Coordinator Beckie Wimmer, explaining church members can then take a tag and fill the wishes, and items are distriubted to the families at the Christmas Project distribution.

This year 240 names were placed on the tree, with a backlog of names piling up when there was no room left. The St. Mary Church alone "can only handle so much," Wimmer said, and about 25 names remain on the tree. Any one interested in making some Christmas wishes come true can pick up a name by Dec. 16.

Items from the Giving Tree project, Toys for Tots, the Christmas books and all other items collected during the Christmas Project campaign will be distributed to families Dec. 21 at the VFW Post # 1153, located at 12735 U.S. 31 in Charlevoix.

DISHEARTENED BY GOHS

Editor,

In reading the once again, poorly penned Ben Gohs article "Before peace first must come truth," (Nov. 14th page 4) I am outraged that something so insensitive, so biased (Anti-Israel, Pro-Palestine) and so disturbing would be published in our hometown newspaper. Two nights before that release, the Community Room at the Library was filled with concerned people from Charlevoix, Petoskey, Traverse City, and other areas gathered to hear the presentation, "Paths to Peace: Palestinians, Jews & Americans Speak Out." That presentation provided valid viewpoints to consider and resources to help educate ourselves more fully with information and writings from both sides to help better project a future where peace is a possibility. As Rabbi Chava Bahle pointed out, peace will happen when we can see past the point of "sides" or "my story vs. your story" and we come to a place where there are no sides, where we are beyond sides ... there we will have a chance for peace.

Why couldn't a positive article summarizing what occurred that evening be published? A long time ago Gohs wrote an article about "writing about nothing to write about" –guess he's back at it again.

Disheartened,
Trudi Rightsell

SUPPORT FOR ENERGY BILL

Editor:

On Dec. 6, Congressman Bart Stupak took a very important step in addressing the threats that global climate change presents by joining 234 other members of the U.S. House of Representatives in passing the bipartisan Energy Bill. This bill includes a national renewable electricity standard and better vehicle fuel economy standards which represent a serious down payment on comprehensive climate change legislation.

I am very grateful for Congressman Stupak's support of the Energy Bill, and urge him now to keep the momentum going by becoming a co-sponsor of one of the two comprehensive global warming bills currently under consideration in the House. To date, 170 of his colleagues have signed on to co-sponsor the Safe Climate Act or the Climate Stewardship Act. Each of these pieces of legislation include provisions for reducing greenhouse gas emissions, encourage innovation in new and renewable energy technologies and provide funding to protect wildlife and their habitat. These bills meet the standard most scientists say is needed to avert catastrophic climate change, which is cutting global warming pollution by 2% per year.

A federal legislative solution can truly drive American's great ingenuity, create a "green" generation of jobs, and meet our responsibility to confront global warming for the sake of our children and generations to come. I encourage your readers to learn more about this issue by visiting www.targetglobalwarming.com and to contact Congressman Stupak's office at (202) 225-4735 or www.house.gov/stupak to voice your concerns about climate change and what must be done to arrest its advance.

ROAD COMMISSION: RECONSIDER

Editor:

The decision and rationale to NOT plow roads in this county is absolutely ludicrous and dangerous. Whomever is holding the population of Charlevoix County hostage so you people can prove a point needs to be exposed for the moronic short-sighted management strategy that it is.

This decision needs to be reversed-NOW!

You are crippling the business community, area tourism, using the area law enforcement unnecessarily, and posing a life-threatening situation to anyone who cannot get out, anyone who has a fire, or anyone who is on life support is having their very existence jeopardized by you so you can create a demand for a tax increase to operate.

Frankly, the Charlevoix Courier and Petoskey News Review need to be brought into this situation and the management of the road commission and it's aloofness to the citizens who pay their taxes to allow you to operate the commission is really the issue here. YOU WORK FOR US!!!! You are public servants.

I have sat through presentations on why you are allowing major roads to fall apart-like the Boyne City Road-to tick off the populace in order to raise road taxes. Government bodies have two reasons for being in existence: to provide safety to the citizens, and to allow free and safe transportation to occur. You are doing neither. Holding the citizens hostage by endangering their lives could result in a massive lawsuit and then you would jeopardize the secufrity of the county finances.

Frankly, maybe we need to see that the road commissioners become an elected office and take care of two problems at once.

This is an outrage to the good citizens of the County. You must be stopped and this all needs to be exposed for the cheap political circus that it is.

We have enough people in Lansing damaging this State without you people turning around and repeating their mistakes. Stop. Wake up. Plow the roads and start managing to a productive end, not a political end.

HELP FOR SENIORS

Editor:

In 2006 my wife, Helen, and I moved from Central Lake to the East Jordan Housing Commission Apartments (Lakeview Manor) under the director Ginny Carey. We were having trouble understanding the new prescription drug Part-D Plan. We were totally confused about my wife's medication. I asked Ginny for help and she referred me to the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging, under the director Susan Bergmann. I called her and she gave me an appointment. I met Mrs. Bergmann, explained our situation and she in turn introduced me to Marge Krehak, the office manager. Marge was able to correct Helen's problem. Those two ladies, Mrs. Bergmann and Mrs. Krehak, came to our rescue for which we are so thankful. Along with other valued advice, they are doing us seniors a great service. We also find the Charlevoix County Senior Centers are very good to us seniors. The good food, entertainment and services; our wonder is why more seniors don't take advantage of these centers and services to be had.

Michigan behind on healthy targets for youth

Unless Michigan acts more decisively in the next few years, the state will fail to meet many national standards for healthy children, families and neighborhoods. Fewer Michigan teens are binge drinking and smoking but more children are overweight and exercising too little, the 2007 Kids Count in Michigan report concludes.

The report examines 18 wide-ranging health goals for children and teens that are set by the Healthy People (HP) 2010, a national initiative to advance health and well-being. Michigan is making progress, but it is not fast enough to meet the goals in many areas, and minority children and youth are further behind in meeting most of the targets.

"Being healthy is about much more than just making sure a child gets adequate medical care. The health of our children reflects the conditions in which they live in our communities, such as housing, and the resources in their families and neighborhoods," said Jane Zehnder-Merrell, senior research associate at the Michigan League for Human Services and project director.

The report includes detailed profiles of child well-being for the state, each of its 83 counties, and the city of Detroit.

According to the report, Michigan achieved the HP 2010 targets for three indicators by 2005: immunization for toddlers, teen pregnancy and physical fights among high school students.

The state rate for fully immunized toddlers reached the HP 2010 target of 80 percent by 2002. In 2005, the state pregnancy rate of 28 per 1,000 teens, ages 15 – 17, was well below the HP 2010 target of 43 per 1,000, and the 30 percent of Michigan high school students who reported having been involved in a physical fight in the previous 12 months fell below the target of 32 percent.

"This good news didn't hold true for everybody," said Michele Corey, Community Advocacy Director at Michigan's Children, a partner in the project. "These achievements mask substantial disparities by race. Rates on these measures are much worse for African American children who are three times more likely to live in poverty than white children. Unless we change our strategies dramatically, African American children will not meet the target goals by 2010."

Striking racial disparities persisted on most of the indicators with African American children having roughly triple the rates of infant mortality, and double the death rates for young children and early elementary children, hospitalizations for asthma among young children, and low-birthweight babies. An overarching goal of the Healthy People 2010 is eliminating disparities in health outcomes, according to the report.

Four areas where the state experienced worsening rates included low-birthweight infants, child abuse or neglect, overweight high school students, and a companion problem of too few youth exercising vigorously on a regular basis. The roughly 11,000 Michigan babies born weighing less than five and one-half pounds in 2005 suffer from elevated risk of developmental delay, chronic health problems, and even death. The 2005 state rate of 8 percent of low-birthweight babies remains well above the HP target of 5 percent.

"These trends are particularly troubling as these childhood conditions elevate the risk of latter physical or emotional health problems as these children and youth become adults," noted Zehnder-Merrell.

The most dramatic improvements reflected declines in substance abuse among teens. Binge drinking among Michigan high school students dropped by 23 percent, and tobacco use by 22 percent between 2000 and 2005. In 2005, 23 percent of high school students reported using tobacco during the previous 30 days, compared with 30 percent in 2001. The rate of students who reported consuming five or more alcoholic drinks within a couple of hours dropped from 29 percent to 23 percent over the same period. However, in order to meet the Healthy People 2010 target of 11 percent of high school students binge drinking, Michigan's 2005 rate would have to drop by half in the last five years of the decade.

Kids Count in Michigan, a collaborative project of the Michigan League for Human Services and Michigan's Children, regularly collects and publishes information about child well-being as a basis for public policy development and community action. The project is part of a broad national effort to improve conditions for children and their families. Funding for the project is provided by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, the Detroit-based Skillman Foundation, the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan Foundation, the local United Ways. The annual data book is available from the Michigan League for Human Services and on the web at HYPERLINK "http://www.milhs.org" www.milhs.org

Citizens work for fountain

FOUNTAIN

At a glance...

The Fountain of Youth Committee must raise $100 000 for the interactive water fountain hoped to be included in the East Park Project

Charlevoix DDA will contribute to the $280,000 expense

To contribute, contact the Charlevoix County Community Foundation (231)536 2440, or call (231)920-1351

DDA. The private donations Winn and his committee hope to gather account for 26.32 percent, with the remaining 21 percent, or approximately $80,000, coming from the Marina Fund, raised from boater fees.

The idea was investigated by the DDA, "to see if it was at all affordable," Winn explained, and the proposal was then approved by the Charlevoix City Council. Now the Charlevoix Community Foundation has come on board, hoping to use its 501(c)3 nonprofit status save grief and time in the fundraising process, offering to act as feduciary for the fundraising efforts to offer tax exemptions to donors. Members of the Charlevoix Fountain of Youth Committee, as they have come to call themselves, then set forth with efforts to raise their part of the bargain, requesting community support.

Just over two weeks ago committee members sent nearly 1,000 letters to "friends of Charlevoix," explaining the project and requesting help with funds to construct and maintain an interactive water fountain "as the final and crowning enhancement of East Park." Winn described the fountain as a segmented area with spring-like fountains in which children "of all ages" can play in the water as their movements and/or remotes can trigger springs of water. The concept, he said, is similar to the traditional practice of running through a yard sprinkler, but on a larger, more interactive scale.

"It is so fun to watch. The kids have a ball with it (as the water turns on and off and they run through.) I don't know who has more fun — the kids or the parents," he said.

Committee members — Mary Adams, Dan Barron, Linda Boss, Norman Carlson Jr., Kirby Dipert, Hal Evans, Robert Hoffman, Denise Sandison, Gina Whitney and Winn — worked to put together a fact sheet that answers any questions and concerns citizens may have, including the size of the fountain. The committee assures the fountain will not reduce the outdoor usable area of the park, expected to be about 95 percent of the total park. Outdoor usable area in the old East Park layout was 92.5 percent.

The committee also addressed weekly operational costs, broken down as:

- Electricity usage: $112
- Water usage: $4.41
- Chemicals: $30
- Labor: $215.95
- Total estimted weekly costs: $362.36.

All maintence costs will be paid by the DDA.

While expected to offer asthetic benefits to the park, Winn said the project as a whole is something that speaks to the character of the Charlevoix community.

"This would be frosting on the cake (for the East Park project.) It would separate us from other communities of this size and it could really define us by saying something (positive) about our community coming together to support something like this," he said.

A $250 donation is needed to be a bronze medal donor, a status that puts a name on the memorial wall planned for the project. While donations of all sizes are welcome, that is the minimum donation required to have a name added to the wall that could help "leave a legacy" behind in Charlevoix.

"People could look at that years from now and say, 'see, my parents helped build this.' It is a way to leave a legacy," Winn said.

Bronze, silver, gold and platinum donors are welcome, with costs ranging from $250 to $4,999. "Further levels of donations will be accepted and acknowledged," the committee stated. The donor wall will be constructed near the fountain.

The pressure is on for the committee, Winn said, because "projects of this size usually take six months or more and we don't have that." In order to plan construction, schedule construction and order materials, the group has until January to meet its goal.

"We want to have this in schedule with the rest of the park project," Winn explained, meaning the hope is to have the fountain complete by Memorial Day 2008.

Hoping to convince residents their investment "in this exciting project will benefit our community for generations to come," Winn and the rest of the committee invite anyone interested to contact the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at (231)536-2440. Inquiries can also be pursued by calling (231)920-1351.

Charlevoix Area Community Pool announces improvements

The Charlevoix Area Community Pool (CACP) would like to let the public know about some repairs and improvements that will be made over the next few months, which will require that the pool be closed one full day and part of another.

Swimmers may have noticed some construction that started Nov. 19. The pool will be closed while some repairs are made to one of the pool's exterior trusses that span the pool. The pool will be closed while the workers are in the attic. One of the walls has shifted over time and needs to be straightened, then secured into place. The pool will need to be closed while this wall is moved back to its proper position. This should only take one day and will be announced when the schedule is firmed up (weather). Site Planning Development Co. of Charlevoix was awarded the bid for this project.

The pool's Ethel Coeling Fund at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation will provide about $23,000 of a $26,000 project to add an ultra violet disinfectant system to the pool's filtration system. Chlorine is the main disinfectant used in the pool. The ultra violet light system will be a secondary system which will allow the chlorine level to be lowered (reduced cost and may help those allergic to chlorine) and it also kills viruses sometimes found in pools that chlorine has trouble killing. The ultra violet system explodes the DNA of these viruses as the water passed thru the system, rendering them harmless.

The pool's staff and board strive to keep the pool up-to-date with current swimming pool technology, as well as to keep up with the repairs that need to be made on the 10-year-old building. The project completed this past spring of replacing the old air conditioning type of dehumidifying system with newer technology has worked out very well. The air in the pool space is replaced very 6-10 minutes, depending on the level of humidity. Fresh air, as needed, is heated with natural gas. This system costs more for natural gas but uses much less electricity than the compressor system and is a lot less costly to maintain. This system, which also improved the air quality of the pool, cost $111,000 and was paid for by contingency funds set aside for the past three years from the Recreational Authority taxes.

For information on pool programs or activities, please call 547-0982.

Charlevoix steals show at Petoskey tourney

BY ANDY SNEDDON
NEWS-REVIEW SPORTS EDITOR

It only seemed like March.

Then again, it was Petoksey and Charlevoix, and there were enough pre-game storylines to fill a short novel. And enough intensity, excitement and physical play to make it seem as if it was a win-or-go-home scenario.

In the end, it was Charlevoix's wisp-thin Nate LaBlance who put his signature on it, hitting five 3-pointers Saturday en route to a career-high 26 points as the Rayders held off a late Petoskey charge to beat the Northmen, 59-54, in the championship game of the 7th annual Petoskey Boys' Basketball Varsity Invitational.

"Our coach said whenever we're playing for hardware, it just takes it to the next level, makes everyone play a little harder," said LaBlance, who led the Rayders with 14 points in a 54-46 semifinal win over Marquette on Friday and earned the tournament most valuable player award.

It was LeBlance's shooting — he made 10 of his 16 field goal attempts including an efficient 5-of-8 from 3-point range — and a stifling press that carried the Rayders, who once again appear to have the talent, depth, experience and chutzpah to make a legitimate run in the Class C state tournament in less than three months.

"The last two years when we played Petoskey, they were two games that I didn't feel like we showed up and played at all," said Charlevoix coach Keith Haske, whose team had lost its last two meetings with Petoskey by an average margin of 23.5 points. "I really felt our kids came to compete, and the last two years we didn't."

The Rayders employed an aggressive, stifling press, making the Northmen work hard simply to get the ball past halfcourt. And eventually, it took its toll.

"Pressure was the key, we didn't handle it very well," Petoskey coach Dennis Starkey said. "It took us out of our offense. Took us out of what we wanted to do."

Charlevoix opened the tournament with a 54-46 win over a good, albeit short-handed, Marquette team, while Petoskey ran by Kalkaska, 72-48.

"I'm excited about the fact that we've come out against two very good teams that are physical, fast, strong — all the things you want to go against," said Haske, whose team plays Bellaire in a non-leaguer on Tuesday, then opens Lake Michigan Conference play on Thursday at Grayling. "For us, it's a great learning experience, particularly for our big kids because those are the two most physical teams we'll play all year."

And it was exactly that Saturday as neither team backed down in a game that at times more resembled football. The Rayders broke away in the fourth quarter with a 17-5 run after which they led, 57-44, with under three minutes left.

But the Northmen responded with 10 straight points, eight of which came from Dustin Dibble, to claw within three, 57-54, with 34.2 seconds remaining.

"We didn't do well finishing the game," Haske said. "They're such a well-coached team that I knew something was coming. I tried to tell the kids ... and we didn't handle it well. That's a tribute to them doing something a little different, trying to get back in the game. But (we) found a way to pull it out."

Dibble and Steve Behan finished with 21 points apiece for Petoskey, but both had to work very hard for everything they got.

"I don't know how he got them because we did everything in the world not to let him get the ball," said Haske of Dibble, who played at Charlevoix for two years then transferred to Petoskey before last season. "He's amazing. We have athletic, quick kids and he still was giving us tronble."

Weston Bryan, the player who bird-dogged Dibble for most of the game, hit a free throw with 21 seconds left to extend Charlevoix's lead to 58-54, and Cliff Jones added a free throw with 7.6 seconds remaing to ice it.

Playing against Dibble, and beating Petoskey, made the win all the more satisfying, LaBlance said.

"We play a lot of basketball in our spare time," he said. "(Dibble) either comes over to Charlevoix or I come up here. Just playing against one of my friends is kinda fun. We talk to each other during the game, give each other a hard time a little bit. Just have fun. Last year they beat us pretty bad and it was fun to come over here and return the favor, I guess."

Jones, Justin Friske and Corey Gotshall added eight points apiece for the Rayders, while Bryan grabbed seven rebounds.

LaBlance and teammate Corey Gotshall were named to the all-tournament team along with Dibble and Behan, and John Kasza of Kalkaska and Joe Simon of Marquette.

Cliff Jones had eight points and Justin Friske added seven in the Rayders' win over Marquette, which was playing without four players due to suspensions. LaBlance also had five steals, while Weston Bryan and Austin Wilhelm had four rebounds apiece.

Joe Simon led Marquette with 18 points, while Antone Ramos added 12.

Marquette built a 23-13 lead early in the second quarter, but the Rayders whittled away and tied it, 28-28, by halftime.

The Redmen then took a brief four-point lead, 34-30, early in the third quarter, but Charlevoix surged -- keyed by back-to-back Jon Putman 3-pointers -- to an eight-point lead, 47-39, early in the fourth. Marquette eventually got to within three points, 49-46, with 2:26 to play, but the Rayders outscored the Redmen, 5-0, down the stretch to nail it down.

Simon scored 29 points to lead the Redmen to an 81-40 victory over the Blazers in the consolation game. Kasza scored 17 to lead the Blazers, while Schuba added 11.

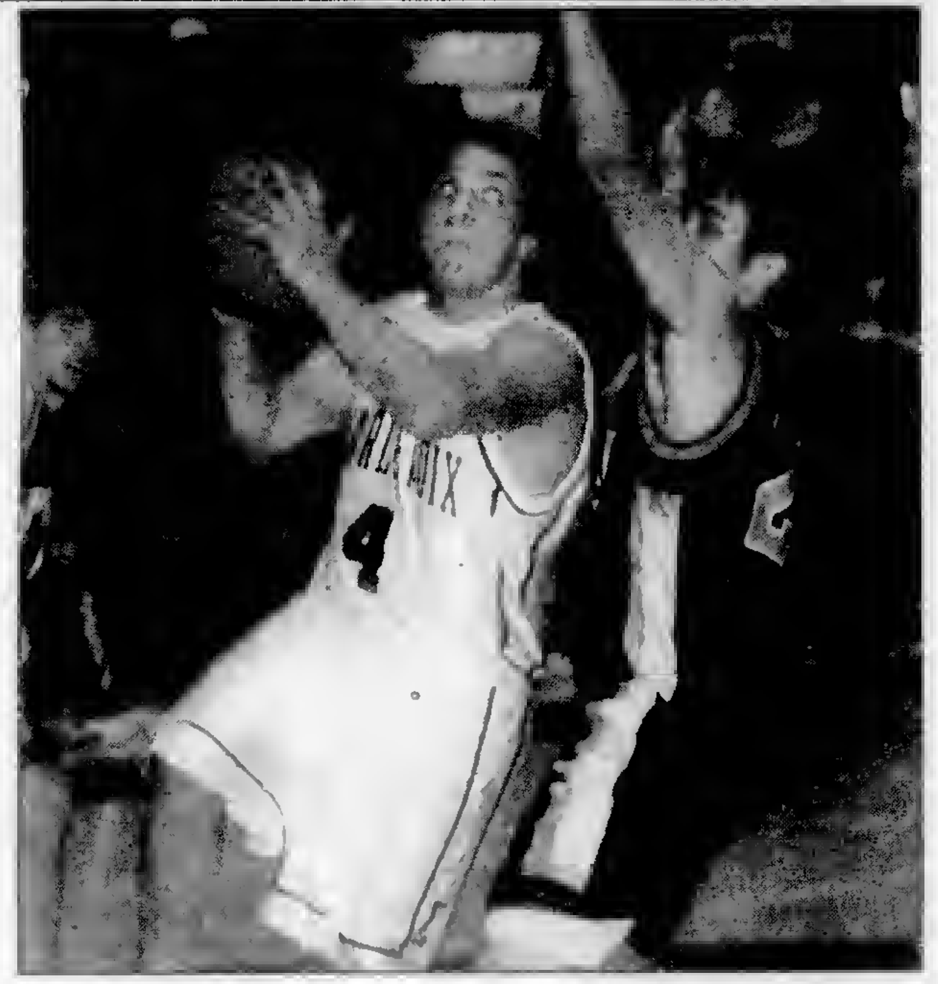
JV BASKETBALL

Rayder finish 0-2

Charlevoix finished 0-2 over the weekend at the 7th Annual Petoskey Junior Varsity Boys' Basketball Invitational.

The Rayders opened the tournament with a 60-45 loss to Marquette, then fell to Kalkaska, 64-50, in the consolation game.

Bill Ivan had 10 points and 10 rebounds for the Rayders against Marquette. Clayton Mitchell and Casey Helstrom scored 14 points each for the Rayders against Kalkaska.



Charlevoix senior guard Cliff Jones (4) drives to the basket by Petoskey's Tim Bellmer Saturday in the championship game of the Petoskey Invitational. The Rayders won, 59-54.

Charlevoix woman gives birth in car

BY LOUISE NELLE NEWS-REVIEW STAFF WRITER

Breann and CJ Winnell of Charlevoix gave birth to a daughter, Claire, at 3:18 a.m. Wednesday, Dec. 5, in the parking lot of the Charlevoix Family Video.

At 3:18 a.m. Wednesday, Dec. 5, while most were sleeping in their beds, Breann Winnell was giving birth in the parking lot of the Charlevoix Family Video.

One moment, Breann and her husband, CJ, were driving from their home in Charlevoix to meet their midwife when she felt the baby coming faster than expected. CJ said he had just passed the Charlevoix airport when he heard his wife grunt and say, "The head is out." He immediately made a U-turn and headed back toward Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"I'm just glad it was three in the morning and there was no traffic," he said.

But the Winnells never made it to the hospital. With no time to spare, CJ — an EMT specialist — pulled into the driveway of Family Video, jumped out and ran to the passenger door to his wife. Standing in a snow bank with snow falling down around him, he helped his wife deliver from the front seat of their car. Moments later, his baby girl fell into his hands weighing 6 pounds and 13 ounces.

"It happened really fast, neither of us expected it to be that fast," he said.

Looking back on that night, when CJ pulled over Breann said she was not thinking about where she was or that she was not going to make it to the hospital.

"We didn't really have time to think because it was so quick," she said. "I just remember pushing and seeing sparkles of snow floating in the air."

Her delivery went smoothly, though. Three pushes and her daughter, Claire Anne, was born.

CJ said when he first saw Claire the umbilical cord was wrapped around her neck. He removed it, heard her cry and knew everything was fine. After wrapping her as warmly as possible, the couple continued on their way to the hospital to follow the normal procedure of cleaning and weighing the baby.

Twelve hours later, Breann was back home introducing her first daughter to her sons, Grant and Harrison. The boys immediately took to their sister, who is doing well.

"She's doing wonderful. She's nursing good, eating and sleeping like newborns do," Breann said. "We'll have a great tale to tell her of how she came here."

Louise Nelle can be contacted at 439-9339, or lnelle@petoskeynews.com.

Holiday survival guide: Be merry not weary this Christmas season

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

They arrive hours ahead of time, elbowing their fellow man to be the first in line before a frantic stampede for holiday victuals and this year's hot toy...

Is this really Christmas?

With all the goodness the holidays represent, people still find themselves slaving away in the kitchen, distraught over what to buy who and bogged in weight gain and even depression, but with some help from local businesses, everyone can breeze through this busiest time of the year.

HOLIDAY HEALTH

"We encourage people not to forget about taking care of themselves," said Candy Smith, manager of Harbor Health and Fitness. "Even though they may think baking something or buying something for someone is the fit they want, that person really wants them to be in good spirits and good health."

She added, "If you ignore your own well-being, you may be grumps or suffer ill health."

Smith's tips for good physical health:

- Drink plenty of water — sugared and alcoholic drinks tend to dehydrate a person
- Eat plenty of fruit — substitute an apple or orange for that Christmas cookie
- Get plenty of exercise — physical activity is a natural appetite suppressant
- Eat balanced meals — heading into a buffet situation ravenous is a sure-fire way to over-eat

Harbor Health and Fitness, open seven days a week: 6 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Thursday; 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Friday; 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday; and 12:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Sunday, is currently holding drawings for those who work out at the gym nine times each month.

"Even if they don't win a free massage or time with a personal trainer they will win by taking care of themselves," Smith said.

Mike Felix of Charlevoix County pumps iron at Southside Gym In the weeks leading up to Christmas. The 66-year-old said there is no good excuse not to take care of yourself no matter what time of year it is.

HOLIDAY ENTERTAINMENT

Take a break from shopping and let the sweet holiday sounds of local musicians soothe your stress.

At 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 14 in the high school auditorium, Charlevoix Middle School will host its Christmas concert.

At 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 18 at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix, Northwest Academy will host its Christmas concert. A reception with refreshments will follow.

At 2 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 19 the kindergarten through second grade will perform their sing along concert. Beginning at 2:45 p.m. the same day the third and fourth grade classes will perform their sing along Christmas concert at Charlevoix Elementary School.

CHRISTMAS BREAK = IDLE HANDS

When you're not building snowmen, skating or sledding at Mt. McSauba, here are a few ways to keep the youngsters from climbing the walls with anticipation and going Christmas crazy:

Visit www.dltk-holidays.com for hundreds of free decoration templates the kids can print out and color, Christmas cards they can personalize and other crafts they can make.

www.kidsdomain.com has detailed instructions for making decorations, gifts and Christmas cards for children of all ages. The website also contains puzzles, games and holiday stories guaranteed to keep the little ones entertained.

Www.childfun.com has plans for dozens of activities including parties and singalongs, hundreds of free print and color Christmas themed pages and even some Christmas tongue twisters.

OH TANNENBAUM

A holiday tradition for many will come to an end this year as Brooks Hill Tree Farm will be no more in 2008. So, if the thought of driving through snow-covered woodlands looking for just the right tree appeals to you, Brooks Hill is the place to go.

Faith Brooks, co-owner of the farm, said the operation, located at 8773 Maple Grove Road in Charlevoix, is still do-it-yourself.

Trees are $5 per foot and saws are provided at the plantation.

HOW-TO TREE CARE

- Shake a tree before purchase — a few falling needles is normal, but excessive green needle loss indicates a dried out tree
- Avoid a pale tree with significant needle loss
- Use a tree stand with a water reservoir — cutting 1/2 inch off the trunk will facilitate water absorption
- Get the tree in water within six to eight hours — do not bruise or dirty the cut surface
- Maintain adequate watering — the general rule is one quart of water per inch of trunk diameter
- Keep the tree away from sources of heat — turning your thermostat down a few degrees will slow the effects of drying out
- Inspect lights before use — throw away damaged or old lights; small lights produce less heat
- Do not overload electrical circuits — turn Christmas lights off before leaving home or bedtime

OTHER FUN CHRISTMAS TREE FACTS

- One acre of Christmas trees on a farm creates enough oxygen for 18 people
- Christmas trees filter dust and smog and help prevent soil erosion

Land OK'd for wind test towers

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Thousands of acres of local land have already been designated as potential sites for wind turbine generators.

Representatives of Heritage Sustainable Energy, pleased the Marion Township Planning Commission approved two special use permits to allow anemometer towers used to test wind speed, must now await final approval from Marion's zoning board.

"We hope to go before the zoning board in January and get them (meteorological towers) installed in mid- to late- January," said Heritage project manager Rick Wilson.

The two 197-foot tall wind testing towers, one approved for Marion Township Supervisor Wilson Boss' property and the other on Marion resident John Frey's land, cost approximately $20,000 each and will remain there for one to two years.

"We've acquired somewhere around 3,500 to 4,500 acres of wind energy leases in Marion and a little bit in Norwood," Wilson said.

Wilson said the reception by locals has been positive so far.

"We really seek to achieve a level of enthusiastic support from the community and don't have any intent of developing a project that isn't compatible with what the community wants to see done in that area," he said.

The reason the zoning board must make a determination on the anemometers is that the zoning ordinance does not address the use of guy wires intended to keep the towers erect.

New Chamber director chosen

Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce President Tom Conlan stands with newly-appointed Chamber Director Erin Bemis. The Charlevoix native will take the place of out-going director Jacqueline Merta as of Jan. 2, 2008.

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

The search is over.

Having narrowed down the playing field from 40 candidates to 6 in the quest for a new leader for the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce just a few short weeks ago, the Chamber Board of Directors made their choice. Charlevoix native Erin Bemis was named the new executive director Dec. 10, taking the place of out-going director Jacqueline Merta as of Jan. 2, 2008.

"The decision by the board was unanimous. Erin stood head and shoulders above the rest," said Chamber Board President Tom Conlan.

One of a five-member selection committee involved in the hiring process, Conlan said the group had "a good kind of problem" when they sat down to review and interview the six finalists for the position. Five of the six candidates could, the group felt, "step in right away and do a good job." All five committee members however — Conlan, Chamber member Kirby Dipert and Chamber board members Jay Bingham, Patt Blanchard and Linda Bradley — agreed Bemis stood apart from the rest.

Interviews were held Dec. 5 and 6, and the group "decided to let the decision sit for the weekend," Conlan said, agreeing the following Monday to recommend Bemis to the Board of Directors, who accepted the recommendation. Bemis, already involved in a number of community activities, said she is excited to begin her new role.

"I see this as an extension of the volunteer work I was already doing," she said.

The Charlevoix High School graduate earned her bachelor's degree from Hillsdale College.

Wind test towers could get final OK by January

WIND

"The base sits on the ground with no foundation and the guy wires support it on four sides," Wilson said.

Wilson said he isn't sure how many citizens have signed contracts with his company.

"I would stress that the met(eorological) towers are temporary to get a good sample of the wind energy for that region," he said.

Heritage Sustainable Energy, in Traverse City for four years, is an off-shoot of energy company Rock Management.

Marion Township Board Member Joe Seidel, who attended the meeting as a concerned citizen, has several questions about how the wind turbine generators, if eventually installed, will affect present and future property values and why he, as a township official, had not been informed of the plan until recent days.

"Since nobody actually told me about this I am concerned that the rest of the township officials seemed to be fully aware of the matter even though it has not been brought up until 10 days or so ago," Seidel said. "There seems to be a lot of people who know a whole lot about it all of a sudden."

He added, "It seemed that the neighbors had some questions about the sizes of towers and their effect on properties and those transactions and company representatives kind of hedged on that; it didn't seem like a lot of questions were answered there."

Seidel said considering the township has little or no experience in dealing with wind energy issues, he hopes officials are not moving too fast.

"I'm just a little concerned that the due process has not been necessarily followed—curiouser and curiouser [sic]," he added.

Marion resident Josh Dhaseleer concurred with Seidel's sentiments.

"They kept saying, 'We need to put up towers and study for a year, year-and-a-half before we can put up the turbines,' so it wasn't super informative," he said. "But it sounds to me like they already know where they want to put up the towers."

Dhascleer alo expressed concern that at the meeting Tom Cooper, a Heritage representative, "would not give out any concrete numbers on how many there will be. They wouldn't commit to anything."

While the standard offered by Heritage states the primary contract is for five years, it appears that it can be renewed at Heritage's pleasure in perpetuity.

"I was originally told it was for 20 or 30 years, but Tom (Cooper) told me it's forever," Dhaseleer said. "And they told us the royalties are like $15,000 to $18,000 a year, but the guy I talked to at the Michigan Land Use Institute told me to realistically expect more like $3,000 to $8,000."

He added, "It felt kind of like the same kind of pitch you get from a used car salesman—I'm not sold on it."

Wilson said the negative feedback has been minimal and that the economic and environmental boons from wind energy far outweigh any negatives.

"You have issues with greenhouse gas emissions from the burning of coal, which is our primary electrical source, so we're trying to move in the direction which decreases greenhouse gas emissions or Co2," Wilson said. "In addition to providing clean, renewable energy for the state of Michigan, it also provides benefits to the community both from land owners getting paid a royalty for the electricity generated by the turbines and the creation of new jobs in the area for the installation and construction process and during the operations and maintenance there will be a handful of skilled individuals to maintain the machines."

He added, "And then there are the obvious taxes assessed on the equipment and that will be a significant benefit to the local tax base." Wilson said 80 percent of Michigan's energy is purchased from outside of the state and the more energy created from within, the more Michigan utility customers and workers will have to gain.

New Director to start Jan. 2

CHAMBER

studying business administration, marketing and French. Bemis said she is committed to the Charlevoix community and civic involvement, currently acting as president of the Keep Charlevoix Beautiful Board, a member of the St. Mary School Marketing Committee and a member of the Belvedere Club Community Relations Committee.

"I am ready to jump right in. I am already involved (in the community) on many levels, and taking this position was a natural appeal for me," she said.

Conlan said the Chamber Board shares Bemis' enthusiasm.

"We are excited to have a new director with the qualifications and energy that Erin will bring to the job. A new generation of leadership is emerging in Charlevoix and that is as it should be," Conlan stated, adding Bemis has "demonstrated in the past and will continue to work together well with our Mayor Norman Carlson, the DDA director Keith Cary and the City staff."

Bemis said she understands she will have "hig shoes to fill" taking the place of a 30-year veteran in the director position, adding her predecessor Merta was "a cornerstone in the Chamber's history." Among her first goals is to meet and get to know all Chamber members, and she encourages anyone to "stop in" and get to know her as well.

Bemis said she is a "detail-oriented person," a characteristic she expects to boost her success in all projects in her new job.

"I believe details make or break a project," she said, adding her pro-active approach and natural ease with people will also benefit her in the position.

Excited about the period of change Charlevoix is currently in, Bemis said she looks forward to being a part of the trend.

"I am thrilled to have the opportunity to lead the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce during such an exciting time," she stated. "With the new marina and reconstruction of East Park, our strong school system and new leadership, the possibilities are endless for positive enhancements."

Bemis made a public appearance Tuesday at a reception held in honor of Merta, who resigned after 30 years with the Chamber. Another public appearance will be made at the annual Chamber Dinner, expected to be held in late January.

In addition to the announcement of the new director, the Chamber board announced election results for 2008 board members:

- Tom Conlan (Belvedere Club and Golf Club) Chair
- Patricia Blanchard (Shop of the Gulls) Vice Chair
- Jay Bingham (Bingham Insurance Services) Treasurer

Other Board members are:

- Linda Bradley (Charlevoix Manufacturing Company)
- Steve Bennett (MacDougall House)
- Chris Turkelson (Hayes, Turkelson & Groat)
- Mike Hinkle (Charlevoix State Bank)
- Dave Kurchinski (Michigan Officeways)
- Elizabeth Rich (Harborview Cafe & Villa Moderne)

The Crying Towel gets down and dirty

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

My new editor probably should have thrown this work of filth at my feet and asked why I was trying to get her fired, but she didn't.

However, the nail biting legal department with their thinning hair and palpitations urged me--and by "urged" I mean jabbed at me with sharp sticks while grunting menacingly in what I'm pretty sure was Latin—that I must, at the very least, forewarn my readers that treacherous content lies ahead.

So, if you pronounce schedule "shejwool," faint at the site of luncheon meat, subscribe to the New Yorker, lift your pinkie while drinking or get your wine out of a bottle instead of a box, you might want to pick up a copy of Dog Fancy or watch a rerun of the McLaughlin Group 'cause the Crying Towel is going to the loo.

My news junkie pal, who sends me so many column ideas, gave me a double whammy this week: Not only did Mr. (please don't squeeze the Charmin) Whipple pass away, but a Pennsylvania woman recently won a lawsuit against Kmart after they illegally taxed her on bath tissue.

I know what you're thinking, and you're right: Lazy writers (like me) and overworked editors DO wait for this kind of story to come along so we can print headlines like "Woman Flushed Over Swirling Controversy." and a quick check online revealed the punsters going to town on these stories.

All this bathroom oriented discourse got me thinking about my own sordid childhood.

My father's sense of humor ranged somewhere between Red Foxx and Lenny Bruce. Bodily functions were his obsession and nothing was taboo.

Dad spent so many years telling us to pull his finger I'm convinced he inadvertently conditioned himself to the point where tugging his digit is now a physical necessity, and until I was 11 I thought our home was overrun by barking spiders, greased elephants and that the house only settled on days mom made chili.

To those of you who feel this column is going downhill fast, I say: What, Dog Fancy didn't do it for you?

Our white trash circus was worsened by the fact that nine of us shared (unless you count that Folger's coffee can by the sump pump in the basement) one restroom complete with half-dollar-sized mushrooms growing between the bathtub and floor; and we routinely went sans paper, though there's nothing funny about making the mad dash while scrounging for a sock or book with pages no one would miss—sorry, David Copperfield.

In my defense of the aforementioned unconventional implements, I should point out that people have historically used everything from corncobs (which I can only assume is akin to shaving with a cheese grater) to rag on stick, silk and—allow me to pause for hecklers—yes even newsprint.

Looking back, the only humorous thing associated with a bathroom that I can remember, aside from watching a one-armed man scream at a drunken 15-year-old who proceeded to befoul every porcelain receptacle in the man's cabin during my friend's '92 graduation party (a series of stories best saved for the Townhouse some Saturday evening), was when I was 13 and my mother summoned me and my brother Hammy to the outer door of her sanitary sanctum sanctorum—some of the most meaningful conversations between mom and me were had through that old pine door.

By the time I knocked to see what was the matter, she was sobbing. She cracked the door, regained her composure and from her throne told us to listen as she read aloud the blueberry pie eating contest from Stephen King's "The Body" (I implore you to read it.), a story of an obese young man named David Hogan who exacts revenge on the cruel townsfolk by initiating a pastry puke-fest of old Roman proportions.

Mom kept herself together up until Davie, with queasy gullet, opened his mouth with a great blue smile before belching an inhuman amount of castor oil and pie on the previous year's champion hence setting off a chain reaction.

I remember blowing snot bubbles, crying great hot tears and shaking while fighting for air and trying not to fall down as she told of poor Miss Norman who, exhibiting good manners to the bitter end, upchucked in her own purse.

To news junkie I say: Keep sending these strange news bits. To anyone I may have offended I say: Pull my finger.

The meaning of light and life, to a bontanist

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

To a botanist like me who identifies closely with the growing plants around me, green is the color of life and light can be seen as life itself. Both light and green are hard to come by at this darkest time of the year. Even though we have in downtown Charlevoix those new, energy efficient "green" lights on our street trees. Thank goodness for the Christmas tree tradition, which brings a little green and even some light into the house: Never mind that the tree may be artificial and the lights not yet "green" ...

One the few days at this time of year when we see the sun at all, it seems so far away. It is not difficult to understand how northern people, in the centuries before clocks and calendars, felt that the sun was abandoning them, and that they had to do something in order to lure it back. This certainly explains why a lot of religious tradition, mostly from Northern Europe, concentrates the most important festivals at this time of year. We seldom dance around large bonfires built on the highest available hills any more, or sacrifice virgins, but we still participate in festivals with their roots in the urge to lure the sun back from its apparently far away travels.

We did have a day of sunshine last week, which made it perfectly clear just how far away the sun was. My shadow at midday on our flat driveway was more than 15 feet long, and the sun itself was nearly hidden behind trees two houseboats to the south. Within a few days, the earth, with or without our celebratory assistance, will begin to tilt us northern people toward the sun, and the tropical plants in my little greenhouse will begin to breathe the same sigh of relief that we people do.

Plants are easier to fool about the movement of the seasons than are people. I have been giving the tropical greenhouse residents the illusion of equatorial days by providing them with four hours of extra light each day. It is not enough to help their growth, but it convinces them that they live somewhere south of Florida. The total hours of light and darkness, rather than the amount of light, is what tells most plants when and where they are in the world. Without the green in my greenhouse and the ease with which I can fool my tropical charges, time around the Winter Solstice would be even gloomier.

Enjoy the season and give some thought to both the people and the plants that suffer from too few hours of daylight.

LETTERS to the editor

WYNKOOP NOT MISTREATED

Dear Editor,

Well, Mr. Wynkoop is at it again! In the Charlevoix Courier's article of Dec. 5, as well as in his letter of resignation as the Supervisor of Norwood Township, Wynkoop plays the victim. Now, according to Wynkoop, the court has joined the Norwood Township Citizens Group (NTCHS) in an effort to deprive him of his just rights to develop an industrial limestone quarry in an agricultural and rural residential zone of the township. Mr. Wynkoop, and the township planning officials who support his cause, need to wake up. The Wynkoops and the township have now lost two court cases in this matter because they broke the law.

In one case, the zoning administrator and zoning board of appeals improperly and illegally declared that Wynkoop had a non-conforming use right to mine free of township regulation. The court disagreed. In the most recent case, the court said that "there is the appearance of impropriety" on the part of the township's planning commission members. The court also voided the special use permit as a matter of law under the precedent set in Barkey v. Nick, 11 Mich app 381:161 NW 2d 445 (1968) and Abrahamson v. Wendell (On Rch), 76 Mich app 278, 282; 256 NW 2d 613 (1977). The SUP was voided because Supervisor Wynkoop abused his position and his powers of appointment and removal, actions that went "beyond what case law permits." Wynkoop, as well as the chair of his planning commission, Tom Mielke, have repeatedly tried to trivialize the court's verdict by saying that Judge Power withdrew his SUP because of a "possible" appearance of impropriety. In fact, Judge Power ruled that the supervisor committed unlawful actions and that the planning commission's actions gave the appearance of impropriety.

Actually, the appearance of impropriety does not come close to describing some of the doings in Norwood Township. What about recent township contracts with the Charlevoix County Road Commission to gravel certain township roads? Mr. Wynkoop discussed and recommended these contracts to the township board, but never revealed that the taxpayers' money would go to him in a pass-through contract. Would this be a "possible" appearance of impropriety?

So what was the response of the Norwood township board to the most recent court decision? At their meeting of Dec. 3, (see Charlevoix Courier December 12) the board voted to repeal the township's code of ethics. How's that for bolstering the public's confidence in the honesty of township government?

Sincerely,
Charles Cleland

Behind the News: wait service 101 for restaurants

BEHIND THE NEWS

Edith Gilbert

BY EDITH GILBERT SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

There's a new approach that food writers are taking when they review restaurants. For example, the New York Times columnists used to only describe the food that was served--if it was spicy, juicy or crunchy. Then gradually critics started to mention the décor or ambiance of the restaurant. Recently, I have noticed that some attention is given to the service provided. And high time!

I recall the day when friends told me while ordering at one of our better restaurants in Charlevoix that the waitress said, "Everyone who wants fish, raise your hand!" Things may have gotten better since then, but not much. Staff is still asking, "You guys ready to order?" or "Are you still working on that?" The only food that deserves the latter comment in my opinion is crah legs!

Sure, restaurant managers stop by your table and ask, "Is everything all right?" and diners politely nod and say, "Yes", but later they complain bitterly to me as we walk to the parking lot: "Why do they fill my glasses and coffee cups to the brim? How can you keep from spilling the drink in your lap?" Or "I wish they didn't clear plates before EVERYONE has finished. It makes a slow eater like me feel rushed!" Which reminds me of the time a waiter took my dinner plate away--while my fork was still in my mouth!

Why is it OK for wait staff to constantly interrupt a lively conversation or the closing of an important business deal with, "Is everything all right?" No, my dear, everything is NOT all right—you are interrupting and that is rude! Instead stop by the table, pause and make eye contact and then your guest will be free to nod or ask for more rolls or whatever.

I know that it is not easy to run a restaurant and summer resorts have a heavy turnover in staff. That is why many places feel the need to hire trained help from Argentina, Poland or Jamaica instead of local college kids. Unfortunately many of our American youngsters are used to eating on the run. No more Sunday family sit-down dinners at Grandma's, because she is now living in Florida or Arizona or is off on a cruise. The only restaurants they have time to attend after soccer or basketball practice are fast food restaurants like McDonalds or Pizza Hut. Nor do restaurant owners have the time to train these busy kids beyond taking orders, handing them in to the kitchen, remembering who ordered what, and making out the bill. These kids are never told that, "We eat from the left, and drink from the right!" Coffee cups are set down on the table on either side instead of on the right. Baked potatoes and salads are set down anywhere there's room and it is up to the diner to guess whose salad belongs to whom.

We're proud that Charlevoix has been named a Cool City! Now it's time for restaurant owners to get together and give us some Cool Service! I understand that our Chamber of Commerce is planning to help promote this new Cool Service project for the benefit orflocal restaurant owners and their clientele. They deserve three cheers for planning to tackle this challenging project.

State to groom ski trails

State Representative Mike Lahti recently announced the House and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources have reached an agreement to continue grooming 16 cross country ski trails that were not scheduled to be maintained this year.

Lahti, the Chairman of the Natural Resources Subcommittee, worked closely with DNR Director Rebecca Humphries to secure funding which will ensure winter recreational trails will be groomed and parking lots will be plowed for the holiday season.

The DNR announced previously that 16 trails throughout Michigan would not be groomed this winter, due to a cut in funding. The trails will now remain groomed until at least mid-January, when Lahti hopes that a supplemental bill will be approved providing additional funding for grooming.

"In anticipation of a supplemental bill package, immediate funding of winter recreation areas until a Jan. 15 vote on the supplemental budget was necessary to prevent them from closing," Lahti said. "We need to keep these valuable resources open for the enjoyment of our residents and tourists."

OBITUARY

Edith M. Balch

Edith M. Balch of Charlevoix passed away Dec. 7, 2007 at Bortz Health Facility in Petoskey. Edith was born in Charlevoix Feb. 10, 1919, the daughter of Eleanor (Gravelin) and Amos O'Neil.

On October 17, 1936, Edith Married Kenneth A. Balch of Charlevoix and they continued to make their home in Charlevoix for more than 69 years. Kenneth preceded her in death in June, 2006.

Edith was retired form Dockside Pharmacy in Charlevoix (formerly Schroeder's Drug Store) where she enjoyed visiting with the people who would stop in daily for coffee. She also enjoyed a rapport with the local teenagers who would visit the soda fountain for lunch or a Coke after school. Over the years, many of those teenagers continued to stop in for a visit with Edith when they would return to Charlevoix.

Edith enjoyed camping, bird watching and following the local football and basketball teams. She also was an avid hunter in her younger days.

Edith is survived by her three sons, Kenneth (Kaye), Ronald (Deanne) and Gary (Teresa), five grandchildren and six great grandchildren. In addition to her busband, Edith was preceded in death by her parents and her sister and brother-in-law, Freda and Glenn Pemberton of Charlevoix.

Cremation has taken place and a graveside memorial service for Edith will be held in the spring. The family suggests that donations in Edith's memory be made to the Charlevoix-County Humane Society or the charitable organization of your choice. Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix is handing the arrangements.

Red Cross: blood needed for winter months, holidays

- The need for blood never takes a holiday. Hospital patients need blood daily for the treatment of cancer, serious diseases, surgeries, and accident and trauma.
- Blood shortages are typical during the winter holidays.
- People get busy with holiday activities and travel and don't take time to give blood.
- Snowstorms and cold weather adversely affect donor turnout.
- Conversely, demand for blood can rise with increased roadway and vacation-related accidents.
- Previous winter shortages have been as severe as 15 to 20 percent below desired levels.
- Michigan's Red Cross considers a three-day supply safe and adequate for meeting the needs of hospital patients in hundreds of Michigan hospitals. A five-to-seven day supply is considered optimal.
- You can help. Encourage someone to give the gift of life for the holiday season. And make an appointment to donate blood at a blood drive near you.
- The American Red Cross holds blood drives daily—from the Michigan-Ohio border to the Canadian Border in Sault Ste. Marie.
- To donate blood, one must be 17 or older, weigh 110 pounds or more and be in general good health.
- Donors may give whole blood up to 6 times per year or every 56 days.
- Call 1-800-GIVE LIFE or visit www.redcrossmichigan.org for an appointment or more information.

Hidden pump causes spill at area landfill

Spill poses no human health risk, officials say

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

At a glance ...

700 gallons of 'chemical tea' spilled at the Cedar Ridge Landfill, owned by Waste Management of Michgan, Inc.

Spill is believed to have contaiminated 1,600 square feet

Four to six inches of topsoil removed to prevent hazard

WMI has spent nearly $10,000 on clean up so far

A pump designed to prevent rainwater from collecting in an Ironton landfill transfer station caused a 700-gallon leachate spill this autumn.

The transfer station's pump fed rainwater into a landfill leachate tank—When rainwater flows over garbage it creates leachate which pools at the bottom of a landfill and is later pumped using an above ground tube and hauled away—causing the contents to overflow from the above ground tube.

"There wasn't, in any of the documentation on the site, anything that showed that tank was connected to the leachate tank," said project manager Phil Mazor of Waste Management of Michigan Inc., the company that owns the Cedar Ridge Landfill located at 11633 Saunders Road. "That tank has been disconnected so it can't pump into that leachate tank anymore and I have scheduled it on a regular basis to be pumped to remove the rainwater."

This spill is thought to have contaminated nearly 1,600 square feet of the 40-acre site, and though the site with the 15,000-gallon leachate collection tank has been closed since 2002, maintenance is an ongoing process.

When operational, Cedar Ridge Landfill accepted what is considered non-hazardous solid municipal waste which is a mixture of household and commercial garbage.

Mazor, who said the leachate only poses a health concern if ingested, said with the previously unknown issue of the transfer station pump fixed, there should be no similar problems in the future.

The analysis, which was found by TestAmerica Labaratory in North Canton, OH, to be "well below the reporting limit for samples" and showed ethylbenzine, naphthalene, trimethylbenzene —components of fossil fuels and certain types of ash—and various inert constituents according to Mazor.

Four to six inches of soil over the contaminated area were removed to prevent any possibility of environmental hazard to remain.

"The important part is they notified us right away and they got it cleaned up," said Waste and Hazardous Materials Division lead worker John Ozoga III of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. "They are very compliant on this issue as far as the spill goes. We have not been able to determine fines or penalties at this point but there will probably not be any fines."

The cleanup, including leachate analysis and preparation of the incident report has cost WMI nearly $10,000.

Though compliant on most of the issues, Ozoga said he was concerned about the MDEQ's ability to enter the landfill.

"Their company has been a little restrictive on our access to their site and I've taken exception to that," he said. "We literally have a right to go there anytime we choose. Scheduling an appointment is not conducive to us."

He added, "We're not adversarial on this thing, this is just my job to make sure they clean this up."

In Ozoga's letter of warning he stated that WMI was in violation of three sections of environmental law: Failing to ensure all leachate is disposed of properly; causing a discharge of leachate; and for discharging into the waters of the state a substance that is or may become injurious to the public health.

Unless test results determine otherwise, Ozoga said he has no anxiety over the possibility of the leachate entering nearby waterways.

Landfill neighbor Wayne Saunders said he knows of no problems on his property due to the landfill.

"Tanker trucks go by maybe once or twice a week," he said. "But I have my well checked every year and it always checks out great."

The landfill site is naturally geologically protective due to all the clay below the ground, according to Ozoga.

"It's sitting on 40 to 50 feet of clay," he said. "It is impermeable and it doesn't pass water like some of the other landfills around which are on sand. If those have a spill it leaks right into the ground."

Leachate from Cedar Ridge is pumped into an injection well, or underground void, in Johannesburg.

A report has been submitted by WMI and is currently under review to verify compliance.

"I won't be sure until I (look at) the final report that the dirt and water was removed," he said. "It will be taken care of and I think we'll also resolve the access problem."

A typical landfill, Ozoga said, may gross $12 million a year, but a $1 million a year of that income could go to pumping and hauling leachate on a regular basis.

Newer landfills— Michigan no longer has operation dumps where litter is simply piled on the ground or in holes — are constructed like bathtubs with lids and pumping stations which remove the rainwater that enters them and collects at the bottom.

This graphic of a modern landfill shows the differences from the old style garbage dump where trash was simply piled on the ground or pushed into a hole and covered. The two major differences between this landfill and the Cedar Ridge Landfill which recently experienced a several hundred gallon spill of landfill leachate is that the methane produced by decomposing garbage is burned off instead of recovered for future energy usage and the leachate collection system is pumped into trucks and shipped to an underground cavern instead of being treated on-site.

St. Mary students share their giving spirit

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

The spirit of giving.

Christmas is a time to give, not receive, and that is the message members of the Fun and Fellowship Committee of St. Mary Parish shared with St. Mary School students, parents and parish members during the first Christmas Social Dec. 6. The message was received loud and clear. Committee Chair Kelli Kwapisz said while preparing for the delivery of 110 crafts made at the Social for area home-bound senior citizens.

"The idea was to emphasize the sense of community giving," Kwapisz said.

Sue Cook of the Charlevoix Area Commission on Aging, said the gesture is one that will bring some much-needed smiles to some very special people this Christmas.

"I am getting goosebumps just thinking about it," Cook said in reference of the pending arrival of the crafts at the homes of seniors throughout Charlevoix that participate in the Meals on Wheels program. "This will really make our homebound seniors very happy and will brighten their day."

More than 100 St. Mary students from pre-kindergarten to sixth grade spent the evening singing Christmas carols, led by Pastor Jerry Hunko, talking to Santa and making Christmas ornaments and other crafts to donate in the spirit of giving. Fun and Fellowship Committee member Nancy Day said the goal of the Social and the craft project was to parallel the idea of giving during the holiday season and "to promote the sense of community partnerships."

"It was so fun to watch the children, their parents and parish members working together on these crafts," Day said, noting the range of ages involved, working together on a common goal.

"It really brought the kid out in everyone," Kwapisz said.

Homebound seniors are not the only members of the Charlevoix community to receive crafts from the social. Kwapisz said more than 150 crafts were made in addition to the 110 ornaments given to the Commission on Aging, and the other crafts will be sent to patients at Charlevoix Area Hospital Christmas morning. Patients will receive decorated placemats and other crafts from the students.

The Christmas Social is just one of what the Fun and Fellowship Committee hopes to become a variety of fun and functional events. The committee, newly formed in September, aims to hold fun events every month and find ways to connect St. Mary School and Parish with the community.

COA responds to community feedback

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

The Charlevoix County Commission On Aging wasted little time before beginning work on the oversights and shortcomings identified in the countywide senior satisfaction survey.

In light of the less-than-desirable outcome the Commission On Aging added staff, implemented services and set committees to work on preventative rather than reactionary measures.

"We knew we had some work to do and we knew the public was demanding more services, but we didn't know where their priorities were," said Commission On Aging director Susan Bergmann. "This was our opportunity to increase or expand services where needed and to create new services."

She added, "We've increased staff to meet the needs of senior citizens, we've increased servers per client as needed and we've increased the mailing of our newsletter circulation, which has doubled, and added liquid meals if needed—I think we're getting there."

The commission has eliminated the ceiling on the number of hours seniors may utilize personal care and on the number of hours for caregiver relief services.

"I think we've gotten a lot of support from clients with their letters to the paper and we get a lot of positive feedback from seniors who attend the centers and in-home services," Bergmann said. "I feel very positive and optimistic things are improving."

> "I feel very positive and optimistic things are improving."
> Sue Bergmann
> COA DIRECTOR

She also said staff's work is "definitely making an effect on seniors to their benefit."

Some policy and staffing actions taken so far include:

- Implemented an emergency assistance program for seniors in financial distress
- Brought adult daycare center up to five days a week
- Monthly Sunday dinners on Beaver Island to provide nourishment and fellowship for island seniors
- Plan to renovate East Jordan Senior Center -- air-conditioning, kitchenette, miscellaneous upgrades
- Working on a plan which may amend current transit services to allow senior friendly transportation out of county
- Implemented an honor system for sliding scale services such as snow plowing
- Eliminated any requirement for social security numbers to help prevent identity theft
- Hired a full-time data base coordinator to implement software and create a database to meet census and reporting needs while streamlining processes

"We have a lot more work to do of course. This is just the beginning," she said. "Most of these are short-term fixes that will be accomplished within six months, but it may take up to a year or two to address all the issues. We're just getting busy on newly established subcommittees and task force work groups to look at everything."

Bergmann said the increase in services and staff will likely force the COA to revisit their 2007-2008 budget and dip into their fund balance to make it whole.

"Our budget is about $1.4 million," she said. "We should be OK to meet our budget, but we may need to increase our budget next year and we will be using some fund balance to supplement our budget for this year."

One of the major costs is services to Beaver Island.

"Beaver Island is really coming up in that they want to be equal with what we provide on the mainland," Bergmann said. "Nearly 20 percent of Beaver Island residents are seniors (age 60 and up) and we're optimistic about increasing the services we provide to them."

City: Authorities could help save money

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Story Highlight

City exptected to approach Charlevoix Township Board in the spring to guage interest in developing Fire Authority

Mayor Norman Carlson says school-district wide Recreation Authority could "spread costs" of recreation among various entities, reducing financial burden on city

Cost saving potential and pressure from the state were cited as influence for the Charlevoix City Council to "look into" the feasibility of developing two authorities, potentially collaborating with the county and other area municipalities, to provide services.

Charlevoix Mayor Norman Carlson told council members at a special meeting last week he was interested in approaching Charlevoix Township and Charlevoix County boards sometime this spring to see if any interest exists in developing a Fire Authority and a Recreation Authority to "help spread costs around" as well as eliminate duplication of services. Carlson said he envisions the Fire Authority, if it were to develop, as a coordination between the Charlevoix City Fire Department and the Charlevoix Township Fire Department, governed by a board with representatives from both municipalities.

While this is not the first time the city has approached the township with the idea — Carlson said he made a similar request to the township about two years ago and "there was no interest at the time," he is hopeful times have changed enough to create a different response now.

"We (as a city) are now in a different situation (with a new City manager and new council members) and I hope to re-approach the Township in the spring," he said.

Charlevoix City Fire Chief Paul Ivan supported the concept, noting money and personnel issues as reasons to support an authority. Both departments have "hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of equipment," he said, and eliminating duplication of equipment purchases and services would save tax payers money and provide "a more efficient way to service" both city and township residents. He also noted the average age of firefighters available is climbing, and there may simply not be enough young, eligible bodies to staff two departments.

"I am of the opinion the day is coming we won't have enough people to staff two departments. Also the amount of money spent on training and equipment could be saved (with an authority.)" he said.

Charlevoix Township Fire Chief Curt Thompson said while he is "more than willing" to work with individuals to look into the feasibility of such an idea, he will not actively pursue it on his own because "my (township) board is happy with the way things are." He also said City residents stand to save money with an authority more so than township residents, noting his budget is around $90,000 while the city's is around $400,000.

"When it gets all said and done if we joined into a a district it would cost the township residents more," he said, although no research has been done on actual costs involved.

Both Thompson and Ivan noted past animosity as the reason the township branched off, and formed its own department in the early 1970s, they agreed those feelings are now gone and the departments could, personnel-wise, work well together. Ivan said he believes "we could start tomorrow if we had to." Thompson, though, said a lot of work needs to be done before any such collaboration could happen.

"If they think this can happen overnight they are mistaken. There are a lot of things to think about," he said, noting the need to decide what to do with equipment and buildings owned by each department.

"You would have to either sell it all and buy new (collaboratively) or decide what you would keep and what you would sell. This isn't something that would happen quickly," he said.

Ivan noted much discussion still lies ahead for both groups before any decisions are made. The idea is in early stages and Carlson has not yet officially approached the Township board, which would be a first step in the process.

Carlson noted pressure from state government to collaborate with other government entities, stating such efforts increases chances as grant opportunities.

Ivan emphasized the idea is not to advocate one department taking over the other but a collaboration between the two that would involve representation from both sides. He also noted his position woul be the one most threatened (a chief) and he would be mor than willing to compete for th role of chief if it came to that.

Thompson said he is "no saying it is a bad idea," bu that it will be a "hard sell" i the township.

"I would be more than willing to sit down on a committee and figure out the nuts an bolts to see what would mak this work," he said, adding however, he is not convince it would necessarily provid better service.

Carlson's other suggestion in regard to authoritie is establishment of a county-wide recreation authority an idea that would likely b even further out in the city' timeline than the fire authority. Carlson's concern is tha currently city tax payers fun all the beaches, Mt. McSauba boat ramps, walking and biking paths and water accesses. Those amenities are use not only by city residents bu visitors and many resident county wide. By establishin a county-wide or school district wide authority, the expense of such amenities coul be spread out among a grou of municipalities. He also intends to approach neighborin municipal boards about the idea, possibly as early as thi spring.

No action was taken by the city council on these items a this time.

Human resource position OK'd

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Little discussion occurred last week when Charlevoix City Council members unanimously approved City Manager Rob Straebel's request to hire a part-time Human Resources assistant.

The concept was discussed in detail at a regular council meeting last month and again at a work session Dec. 5, with council pondering the concept of creating a position for two or three days a week to handle such human resource tasks as developing job descriptions, updating policies and procedures, boosting City staff morale, and handling public relations issues. The group suggested at the work session that developing a part-time position to be re-evaluated every year was likely the best option, and the suggestion was formally approved last week, authorizing Straebel to begin advertising for the position.

Among the major concerns in regard to the position was the City's lag on updating personnel and other policies and keeping up with changing state and federal regulations. City Clerk Carol Ochs advised council Dec. 5 that lack of action could "come back to bite you" if any type of lawsuit was filed against the city for any policy related complaints, such as harassment issues, compensation issues, or hiring procedures. The anticipation is, Mayor Norman Carlson and other council members agreed, the position may not be needed after a year or two if all job descriptions, policies and procedures are updated as necessary.

Council's approval of the request authorized hire of an assistant with a yearly salary cost of no more than the $32,900 available in the budget for the position, with the employee working two to three days a week with specific, established office hours. An hourly rate will be established based upon qualification of the successful candidate, with proposed payment at $25 to $30 per hour. No benefits will be included but the City will offer the opportunity for employee contri-

Forum educates about historic preservation

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Richard Karp, founder of Karp Associates Inc., an historic rehabilitation organization, describes the economic aspects of historic rehabilitation and potential development of a local historic district. Karp was one of three presenters at the Charlevoix Historic Commission's educational forum held last week.

"This is just the first step."

That is what Charlevoix Historic Commission CO-Chair Bob Heath told the audience at the Commission's educational forum at the conclusion of nearly six hours of informational presentation last Tuesday.

"This was a good start. This is a seed we're planting today," Heath said, taking the spotlight following a number of presentations and question-and-answer sessions led by three visiting professionals with varied historic preservation experience.

A wealth of information regarding the importance of historic preservation, the "blueprints" regarding how it can be done and potential steps involved, stories about other communities already taking those steps, and information regarding the economic impacts and benefits of historic preservation was provided by the forum's three speakers: Kristine Kidorf, owner of Kidorf Preservation Consulting; Richard Karp of Karp and Associates historic preservation consulting and construction firm; and Michael Matts, Director of Historic Preservation and Planning, Gray & Pape, Inc. The trio provided varied information and interacted with an audience of nearly 60 community members to offer as much information as possible.

While concerns were raised, as well as acknowledgment that "you will never get 100 percent of people on board" with the idea of developing a Local Historic District in Charlevoix, support for the concept, which could potentially provide Charlevoix with access to a variety of grants as well as state and federal tax credit programs for facade and building improvement projects, was expressed.

"We've all seen what doing nothing can do," was one comment that stirred applause, followed by the belief "we're going in the right direction" with the attempt the Historic Commission is currently making to establish one or more downtown historic districts in the city.

"I think we should do what we can to restore the buildings downtown and save the Earl Young homes, but we should go beyond that. The houses we have in downtown Charlevoix are getting fewer and fewer, and all of them, not only the Earl Young homes, have historic value," commented resident and City Council member Lyle Gennett.

Much of the discussion centered around the concept of a downtown historic district which would, ideally, protect and enhance the historic integrity of buildings in the downtown. Historic Commission members invited the trio of speakers to discuss downtown district issues because that is the first focus of their plans to establish local districts. Heath told those present the Commission, following the formal establishment of Study Commission within the Historic Commission, named the east side of Bridge Street downtown as a focus for a district. A "very involved" survey was done to gather information about the history of the buildings, their historical integrity, and the potential benefit of a district. That information was used to develop a preliminary report, which the Study Commission sent to three state agencies: The State Historic Preservation Office, the Michigan Historic Commission, and the State Historic Preservation Review Board.

Currently waiting for a response from those agencies, Heath said the Study Commission is working to develop a similar preliminary report regarding the west side of Bridge Street, hoped to become its own historic district

Rich or poor, young or old, Angel Food Ministries offers high-quality groceries for low prices to a half a million families each month.

The cooperative food program, formed in 1994 by a pastor concerned with the large number of families in Monroe, GA who were struggling to put food on the table, may be the best kept secret in Charlevoix.

"Anyone can do this, and actually, we've been in town for two years now," said Charlevoix branch Director Robert Fales. "There are no qualifications for anyone who decides they would like to maybe have a chance to buy a few groceries at a cheaper price."

The groceries, sold in units for $30 each, come in the form of a different menu each month and there is no limit to how many units may be purchased.

A sample menu provided by Angel Food Ministries includes: Four pounds of chicken leg quarters, 24 oz. of beef back ribs, 1 pound of 80/20 lean ground beef, 2 pounds of breaded chicken tenders, 24 oz. of pork chops; 1 pound of ground turkey, 18 oz. stuffed manicotti, 12 oz. of smoked sausage, 1 package of seasoned potatoes, 7 oz. Cheeseburger Dinner, 16 oz. Green Beans, 16 oz. Baby Carrots, 2 pounds of onions, 1 pound of pinto beans, 1 pound of rice, 7 oz. blueberry muffin mix, 10 waffles and a dessert.

"They (people) can sign up by coming down to the Church of the Nazarene on the day we take orders and pay their $30 and we deliver it 2 weeks later," Fales said.

Orders, which can be made every month or only once in awhile, are both made and picked up at the church, located at 12023 Waller Road in Charlevoix.

"You can buy it once or you can buy 50 units, it's all up to you," Fales said. "We've had someone buy four or five units and feed their family for a whole month."

"Happy Anniversary and Farewell"

by Jacqueline Merta, President

In March 1958, the articles of incorporation were signed to form the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. These founders and the first Board of Directors were Norm Ance, Frank Boss, Dick Edwards, Richard Fochtman, Walter Hoffmann, Max Hosmer, Bob Lieberman, Bob Miles, Lee Moerland, Bob Neff, Fred Willis, and Earl Young. Prior to our present day Chamber of Commerce, in the 1920's and 1930's there were similar organizations that didn't survive. This one has survived, and thrived, for 50 years.

What makes the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce such a special organization? Our 500 members, and a host of programs aimed at educating, organizing, and promoting business in our lakeside community. As we celebrate our 50th anniversary, we can be proud of our achievements during the past five decades. As a Chamber of Commerce, our organization has supported the views of business in the political and civic arenas, worked to promote and retain businesses, promoted the retention and expansion of industries, supported a strong downtown, and created marketing and advertising programs to increase sales in-town and with out-of-town visitors. Our annual events bring thousands of visitors to our town, and they return time and time again to patronize our restaurants, shops, accommodations, and service businesses.

For 50 years the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce has been a vibrant part our community's history. For 30 of these years, it has been my privilege and honor to be the chief executive of our Chamber. It is a time to look back with satisfaction and pride, as I will say goodbye to the Charlevoix Chamber on December 31, 2007. I want to take this opportunity to thank all Chamber members past and present for their Chamber membership and community activism. It takes financial support to keep the Chamber office open so that we can accomplish our goals for the benefit of our community. In addition to financial support, many members have given countless hours and some have given countless weeks of their time, energy, and expertise to make a difference in our community. It has been a pleasure working with all of you: committee chairs and members, the many directors who served on the Board of Directors and Board chairs. It was my honor to work with Board members who are no longer with us; like Suzi Reis, Harold Krutsch, Phil Loomis, and Joe Maltese who gave many years of service in a multitude of capacities. All of the Chamber members, and all of the volunteers, through the years, Together, we have made a difference.

In addition to working with Chamber members, it has also been an honor to work with elected officials and staff at the City of Charlevoix, Charlevoix County, Charlevoix Township, Charlevoix Public Schools, Northwest Academy, St. Mary School, Charlevoix's churches and non-profit organizations, the Coast Guard, North Central Michigan College, Northern Lakes Economic Alliance, other chambers of commerce, and federal and state elected officials and staff. Thank you to all the Chamber staff members, who through the years have provided direct services to Chamber members and the general public. I especially want to thank Judy Corley, my friend, who has generously volunteered her time for the past two decades to the Chamber.

A lot of things have changed since I started working at the Chamber. For example, our annual budget has increased more than ten-fold in that time frame making us a much stronger Chamber of Commerce.

The idea of making a long career with one organization is not as orthodox as it used to be. It is bittersweet to end my career with the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce because, frankly, I will miss everyone who I have worked with, but I will remember the pleasure. It's been a wonderful experience working for the Chamber for all these years. It has been personally rewarding to watch Charlevoix grow and know that I've been instrumental in helping it do so. My career with the Charlevoix Chamber is ending, but I will still be contributing, competing and doing.

I wish the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce the very best in 2008 and in the many years to follow as the Chamber forges forward for the next half-century. To each and everyone, I wish you a "Merry Christmas" and a New Year filled with happiness, good health, and prosperity!

No child left behind? Area educators question

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

While these eighth-graders of Kay Wasilewski's Charlevoix Middle School math class will graduate before the 100-percent success rate requirement is implemented on graduates in 2013, they will face more stringent rules and regulations under the No Child Left Behind Act when it is likely reauthorized sometime in the upcoming new year.

A 100-percent success rate for all pupils may be an unreachable goal, but it may not stop the federal government from demanding it.

It could be up to a year before the No Child Left Behind Act (NCLB) is reauthorized, but that isn't stopping educators from discussing its ins and outs nor has it stopped more than 120 legislative tweaks to the program from being proposed.

"It has made districts more accountable and it has made us all focus on what the end result will be," said Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Chet Janik. "But it also has its challenges, for instance, 100 percent of students must pass a proficiency test by 2014 (and) because there are so many variables, I just don't think that's realistic."

Northwest Academy Chief Executive Officer Gary Stutzman concurred with Janik that "it's a lofty goal, but is it so lofty it cannot be achieved?"

Janik said he is unsure whether those who made the ruling took high school dropout rates, special needs students and other variables into consideration.

He added, "A lot of factors play into that, and while we should strive for that goal, I'm just unsure how we will accomplish it."

Passed into law in January, 2002, NCLB is, according to the U.S. Department of Education intended to ensure, "accountability and flexibility as well as increased federal support for education."

NCLB has several main components including the Title I program, which supports educational services, supplies and teacher training for special needs or at-risk children.

The department of education estimates 15 million students at a cost of $13.3 billion are served by NCLB's Title I program.

"Money is so tight at the federal level that the government is very closely scrutinizing every state's programs," Stutzman said. "We use these at-risk funds for those kids who are at risk of not being able to meet the standards of No Child Left Behind and they will get extra help in reading or math."

He added, "The biggest challenge I see is in reading. If a child has issues in reading, it makes everything more difficult."

Northwest Academy ($14,000 from NCLB), similar to Charlevoix Public Schools ($200,000 from NCLB), receives approximately two percent of their budget from Title I funds.

NCLB also requires all teachers to be highly qualified in their educational field.

"Studies have shown the single greatest effect on student achievement is teacher quality," stated on the U.S. Department of Education website.

Highly qualified is defined as a teacher who holds a bachelor's degree, is certified or licensed to teach in their state and has proven knowledge of the subjects taught.

NCLB allocates $5.1 billion annually to training, recruitment incentives, loan forgiveness and tax relief.

"I think there is good and bad in the whole thing. I think we have more professional development and teaching methodologies coming to the surface," said Charlevoix Elementary School Principal Dick Swenor. "The good thing is the MEAP (test) and I think school districts pay a lot more attention to curriculum than ever. I think education is operated like industry now where you research best practices and then use those, so I think there are a lot of positives."

He added, "I think some of the negatives are some of the local control we lost. I don't think there is a one-size-fits-all solution to kids and to education. Some kids need different things."

Swenor said Charlevoix Schools have always done well.

"Personally, I think No Child Left Behind was designed for inner city schools and districts that are struggling," he said. "But, our philosophy is: this is the game we're in and we have to do the best we can with what we have to meet everything (standards) we have to do."

NCLB provides $681 million to help students who do not possess proficient English language skills in addition to doling $504 million to help the schools of choice program to ensure no child is stuck in a school wrought with under achievement.

Lawmakers, who expect NCLB's reauthorization to be tackled after the November, 2008 election, are currently compiling related bills.

The 124 proposed NCLB amendments include the Student Breakfast and Education Improvement Act intended to improve student health; the Public School Repair and Renovation Act which would give $1.6 billion to schools for renovations and repairs; Providing Resources to Improve Dual Language Education Act to, "enhance the biliteracy, bilingualism, and multicultural skills for children in impoverished communities, including limited-English-proficient and minority children, through the use and longitudinal evaluation of dual language

Special moment captured in national publication

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Keith Haske, Charlevoix varsity girls' and boys' basketball coach, looks at the 2007 National Federation High School Basketball rule book, which shows on the cover a photo of Haske's 2004 state semi-finalist team from Charlevoix.

2004 is a year residents of Charlevoix and staunch supporters of the lady Rayder varsity basketball team remember well. It was a year when the lady Rayders broke a school record, taking the team — and its fans — to the state finals at the Breslin Center, the first time the girls' basketball team had advanced so far in tournament action.

It was an experience those involved will never forget.

Now, thanks to what came as a surprise to varsity basketball coach Keith Haske who led that 2004 team through its successful year, that year and the feelings felt at the time were brought back through a picture; a picture on the front cover of the 2007-2008 National Federation for High School Basketball rule book, a document distributed throughout the country that displays very prominently a shot of team members from the day they defeated Saginaw Novel in the semi-final game.

"It was really a special moment. Seeing that picture really takes me back to that moment," said Rayder supporter Chuck Jadwin whose daughter, Elizabeth Jadwin, is at the center of the photo.

Jadwin, who heard about the photo on the book from a friend while at church, was excited and extremely proud that his daughter and her former teammates "got their 15 minutes of fame, just like Andy Warhol claims everyone does." Haske, who was surprised when he received his copy of the basketball rule book as he does every year only to see his former players on the cover, said he is proud about the picture.

"I had no idea that was going to happen. It is really flattering to think every high school basketball coach across the country will see this," Haske said.

In the last few years, Haske has taken five teams to the finals at Michigan State University, and is always excited about such success stories. He said he is happy to see a team so documented, and he hopes

City council sets goals for upcoming year

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Charlevoix City Council members were joined by department heads and City Manager Rob Straebel at a special meeting last week to discuss and set goals for the upcoming year, extending many ideas from goals identified in 2006-2007 and intending to do what is possible maintain or increase services without increasing expense.

"This past Monday the (city) staff had a two-hour meeting and we looked at the goals established during the 2007-2008 budget (process.) We reviewed all 36 goals the city council and Mayor established last year," Straebel said, opening the table to discussion about a list of goals he and staff came up with.

Among the most pertinent action items, Straebel said, is to develop a Master Plan for the City's Parks and Recreation Commission, a move that could open the door to more grant dollars. Such a document would establish "an overall vision for Parks and Recreation, which many grants are often dependent upon," he said.

"Often our grants (for Parks and Rec) come from the DNR and the DNR often requires a Master Plan to be in place," he said. "We need to ask the question, what do we want to see with our recreation in the area, and what do we want to do (in upcoming years.)"

Discussion of other Parks and Recreation goals also included mention from Mayor Norman Carlson that establishment of a county-wide recreation authority could be a beneficial endeavor for the city (see related story, page 10.)

Straebel said "overall vision" is also a focus for the electrical department, whose goals include prioritizing infrastructure needs with associated costs, hiring two journeyman linemen due to two upcoming retirements, and prepare for unknown issues related to deregulation law changes.

Straebel presented goals in categories, which, in addition to recreation and electrical, included:

Personnel

- Hire a part-time Human Resource Assistant (see related story, page 14.)
- Hire part-time Airport Manager (see related story, page 14.)

Municipal Airport

- Complete airport landscaping
- Purchase airport equipment utilizing FAA grants.

Planning

- Complete Smart Growth Initiative with surrounding Townships and County
- Revise sign ordinance and City Comprehensive Plan

Streets/Water/Sewer

- Complete infrastructure improvements - Chicago Avenue
- Prioritize infrastructure needs with associated costs
- Plant between 100-125 trees

Marina

- Complete marina project
- Establish City Marina with Michigan Clean Marina designation
- Implement new DNR reservation system

DDA

- Continued implementation of Charlevoix Downtown Blueprint 2007
- Active recruitment and retention of businesses

Computer Network

- Develop GIS Plan-Continue with GIS work, implement preplanning efforts
- Continued computerization

Also presented were ongoing construction projects, such as a new pole building at the golf course and infrastructure improvements on Chicago Avenue. Future construction projects presented are:

- Depot beach improvements (sprinklers)
- DPW site
- Michigan Beach Development
- Sidewalks on Park from grant Street to city limits

City Council members expressed appreciation for department heads contributing input to the goal-setting process.

programs beginning in preschool through the fifth grade."; The Expanded Learning Time Demonstration Act, which would give funding to schools to, "improve student achievement through longer school days, additional school days, or a combination of longer school days and additional school days, as well as other methods."

While some hope to fortify NCLB, as many as 12 states are considering opting out of the voluntary program.

"I think it comes down to local control," Swenor said. "They don't want to have to do what the government says and I don't know that I agree wholeheartedly with that, but we have lost some things (due to NCLB)."

Swenor cited control over curriculum as one of the biggest issues.

Janik said another downside of NCLB is that it forces teachers to spend time teaching to tests, a move which puts a strain on the already limited amount of instruction time.

'Smart' technology brings fun to area classrooms

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

The days of chalk boards and dry erase markers are over

At least they are in the math classrooms of Charlevoix Middle School.

What has taken the place of the now considered 'old-school' teaching methods — chalk, dry erase markers and boards — is a new "SMART" technology that Principal Keith Haske couldn't be more impressed with.

"This is the best piece of technology I've ever seen," Haske said, watching math teacher Steve Hopkins demonstrate some of what the new technology can do.

SMART boards, a new piece of technology available to schools that allow for a more interactive teaching approach, have brightened the learning environment of Hopkins' room, he said, allowing him to use the Internet, a touch-screen, graphs, graphics, colors and visual affects — all at the touch of a finger — to teach his students in a new and "exciting" way.

"It gets things done faster and easier, and it really helps communication," Hopkins said.

Hopkins' room is one of four classrooms, all math rooms, that received a SMART board this fall. The technology was purchased, Haske explained, through state funding garnered after 98th District State Representative John Moolenaar, R-Midland, sponsored legislation to offer extra funding per student for math-related teaching materials.

"As I understand it, he and his children always struggled with math, so he sponsored this legislation to get kids more help with math," Haske said.

The legislation provided Charlevoix Middle School $15,000 to use as it saw fit to boost math programs. Haske credited Hopkins and others in the math department for "doing their homework" to find the best way to use the money.

"The math teachers did a great job researching what could enhance the technology and teaching here," he said.

Hopkins said SMART boards were an easy fit in the classroom, especially after he and other teachers started getting over the "learning curve" necessary for them to learn how to use and apply the technology. The potential functions are seemingly endless, he said, demonstrating just some of the many: Students can use markers to do math problems on the board, writing and erasing in an instant; teachers can use a finger to place number lines, graphs and graphics on the board, switching screens instantly, and use various colors to demonstrate things like counting on a number line; teachers can even show three dimensional dice graphics and make them spin on the screen to demonstrate visually the probability of rolling a certain number, putting a new 'spin' on a statistics and probability lesson.

"It really grabs the kids' attention. They like to come up to the board and write on it, and it is fun for them and me," he said. "They're not the only ones that have learned from these."

Haske said he has been impressed with the boards, and feels a great benefit is they teach students, who are of the technological age, on a level they are comfortable with.

"This is on their medium. You are teaching in the me-

The Bergman Center residents celebrate at a party given in their honor by the staff of the Charlevoix Public Library. G and Papa's Pizza donated pizza for the party and Harry Colestock presented a wonderful magic show for all to enjoy. The Aktion Club members from the Bergman Center visit the library twice per month to take all the library's recyclable materials to the recycle station. The staff hosts a party each year to thank the Aktion Club for their assistance.

Charlevoix girls undeafeated, but to be challenged

Undefeated, yes.

But the road promises to get more difficult, quickly, for the Charlevoix High School girls' basketball team

Emily Foster came off the bench to score 15 points and lead a balanced attack Friday as Charlevoix rolled to a 65-19 Lake Michigan Conference victory at winless Grayling.

The Rayders improved to 5-0 overall, 3-0 in the league. Grayling is 0-6, 0-3.

Meredith Rich added nine points, and KC McCary and Brooke Whittaker had eight points apiece for the Rayders. Tammy Potter and McCary grabbed seven rebounds apiece, and Potter added seven points.

The Rayders play two league games this week: At Traverse City St. Francis on Wednesday, Dec. 19, and at Kalkaska on Friday, Dec. 21.

St. Francis is 1-2 overall and in the league, with losses to East Jordan and Elk Rapids, and a win over Grayling.

Kalkaska poses perhaps Charlevoix's most difficult test to date. The Blazers entered the week 5-0 overall and 2-0 in the league. One of their wins, a non-leaguer, came over Traverse City Central, 59-51. The Blazers have also posted relatively convincing league wins over Elk Rapids and East Jordan.

Kalkaska was scheduled to play at Boyne City, 3-2, 2-0, on Wednesday.

Sarah Potter scored 19 point to lead Charlevoix to a 76-19 win in the JV game. Hannah Hyhl scored 20 points as the Rayders won the freshman game, 53-29.

Rayders take conference and non-conference wins

BY ALLEN TELENHOF
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

The Charlevoix Rayders boys' basketball squad opened its season with a 4-0 mark with a Lake Michigan Conference opening victory, a win over a tough non-conference foe and a tournament championship.

The Rayders defeated Grayling, 77-44, Bellaire, 72-71, Petoskey, 59-54 and Marquette, 54-46.

Against Grayling, the Rayders' pressure defense was the story as Charlevoix raced out to a 39-23 halftime lead and never looked back.

"Our pressure got to Grayling," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "They turned it over a lot and didn't shoot very well. That hasn't happened much down there (at Grayling) so we're just happy to get the win."

Corey Gotshall led the Rayders with 23 points and eight rebounds. Nate LaBlance had 15 points, four steals and six rebounds. Kyle Jones tallied 13 points.

Cliff Jones contributed six assists and Justin Friske grabbed seven rebounds.

The Rayders won an exciting one at home against Bellaire, keyed by Cliff Jones' steal and ensuing three-point play.

Weston Bryan hit a three-pointer to tie the score at 68-68 and as the Eagles attempted to play for the last shot, Cliff Jones picked the pocket of the Bellaire point guard, drove in for a layup, was fouled and hit the key free throw to give Charlevoix the lead.

"Cliff made a couple of key plays down the stretch that really made the difference for us," Haske noted. "Corey Gotshall also stepped up and played a great game. He was seven for ten from the free throw line and that means he is getting the ball and taking it to the basket, drawing fouls."

Gotshall finished with a double-double, 23 points and 13 rebounds. LaBlance added 12 points while Cliff Jones finished with 11 points and seven steals. Bryan had eight rebounds.

"I really thought Bellaire played an outstanding game against us," Haske noted. "They shot the ball well and handled our pressure."

Charlevoix opened the season winning the Petoskey Invitational, defeating Marquette in the first round and Petoskey in the championship. The Rayders led the Northmen 26-24 at the half and led by as many as thirteen in the second half, at 57-44 before holding on for the victory.

LaBlance, named the tournament's MVP, finished with 26 points, including five three-pointers. Cliff Jones, Friske and Gotshall each scored eight points. Bryan pulled down seven rebounds. Gotshall was named to the all-tourney team.

Dibble finished with 22 points.

Against Marquette, the Rayders shrugged off an early 10-point deficit and battled back for the victory. LaBlance again was leading scorer with 14 points and had five steals. Jones had eight points and Friske scored seven.

Charlevoix (4-0 overall, 1-0 conference) plays its first home Lake Michigan Conference game Thursday hosting Boyne City. On Tuesday, Dec. 18, the Rayders played at rival Traverse City St. Francis. Results were unavailable at press time.

that and a more local project production of a 30-minute video with highlights from that game and other state finals games — will help boost morale and team support, as well as finances. He said the videos will be available for sale at upcoming home basketball games.

Jadwin, who recently ordered his own copy of the rule book, said he is "a typical proud parent," noting how special that day and his daughter's whole basketball career was, and how fun it is for him to remember.

"Those girls played together since the fifth grade. All of their friends were there with them and they were really supporting each other," he said, noting other players in the photo are Stevie Murry and Jennifer Kochanny.

Jadwin shared Haske's excitement about the book and the photo of local girls being distributed throughout the country.

"The neat part is that that book will be in the hands of every high school basketball coach in the country. They'll say, 'I wonder who those girls are?' and at least 3,000 of us here in Charlevoix will have the answer," he said.

dium they are used to using," he said.

Having witnessed the success of the SMART boards in the classroom, Haske said his hope is to have one in every classroom, noting the potential for application in every subject.

"In Social Studies, you can stream right into video of something related to a history lesson, and the possibilities are endless for science," he said.

Hopkins said he has been using the SMART board in his classroom for just over a month, and is excited each day to consider, 'How can I apply this to what I'm doing today?' He said he can use it to plan lessons, save work done in the classroom, and even use graphics to tell his students they've done a "GOOD JOB!!"

Char-Em ISD AmeriCorps member Ellen MacDonald (center) and Charlevoix Elementary fourth grade teacher John Haan (top, right) are surrounded by students who collected a total of 314 items for the Women's Resource Center Safe Home, making them the highest donating class in the school.

Charlevoix Elementary project helps WRC

Charlevoix Elementary School students collected more than 2,400 food and supply items to donate to the Women's Resource Center through a drive organized by AmeriCorps member Ellen MacDonald.

The class that donated the most items – John Haan's fourth grade class with 314 items – was allowed to help load the supplies onto a trailer for delivery to the WRC, and later treated to a movie and popcorn.

Between November 12-30, MacDonald, a Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District AmeriCorps member, provided each classroom an empty box and a list of needed items that was sent home with the students.

"When a class filled a box, I emptied it and kept track of the number of items collected. The empty box was returned to the classroom to wait being filled again," MacDonald explained.

In total, the elementary students collected more than 2,400 items which were delivered to the WRC on December 7 for use at the safe home for women and their children.

Hey Jane!

M.J. Cargill

Hey Jane! I'm 65, retired, and have been the primary caretaker of my elderly dad for almost a year. He is active and alert by 90-year-old standards but needs somebody around for most of the time. I was a wild kid and gave my parents untold grief during my youth which caused years of estrangement. I eventually straightened out, became a professional and had a family of my own. Now I am retired and able to devote my time to my dad. My mom is gone and I was never able to reconnect with her and I am cherishing this time I have with him. Both of us are thriving. However, there is an ugly problem … my two brothers. They resent the dickens out of me! They never miss an opportunity to complain and criticize. They can do this separately or in pairs or even in a gang with their wives. They have a ridiculing opinion about everything from major to minor. From the brand of socks he wears to the number of doctor appointments. When I see their faces they are on the ready to tear me apart! For most of the time my dad and I enjoy a quiet, idyllic life. He is healthy and happy but after a visit from the siblings he can be upset for hours. This is not a good thing. I am writing to you because I know "the brothers" read this column. Give us a good opinion.

Siblings at war.

Dear Sibling

Wow! When sibling rivalry rears its ugly head late in life the results are seldom pretty. Long held negative attitudes have had lots of time to become works of art. If you are being treated as the "fair-haired child" despite your rebel past, watching the growing affection growing between you two could be making your brothers feel abandoned by him. The rebonding between you and your dad may be emotionally painful for them and so you become target practice. Your dad, 90 years or not, still has some parenting to do. He needs to make absolutely sure that his economic affairs are in order, that they are balanced and fair, and that there will be no changes. Then, there needs to be a plan developed where each of his children spend time with him alone. You might even find that a couple of family therapy sessions might give some insight. It sounds like you came home to do some emotional healing with your dad and found that parents come with families. Safe sailing and speedy healing. Hey Jane.

I did my usual polling. I asked 17 people about the story of the Prodigal Son. Most had heard of it but, surprisingly, only a few (3) could really give any details about the story. But this is a small town and one of the 'brothers' from above, unaware at the time, gave a good summation. The Prodigal Son, according to him, is all about…forgiveness.

Keeping your holidays heathy, happy and memorable

Sue Bergmann

Although the holidays are supposed to be a time full of joy, good cheer and optimistic hopes for a new year, many people experience emptiness and solitude. The holiday season is a time full of parties and optimistic hopes for a new year. But for many people it is also a time of self-evaluation, loneliness, reflection on past "failures" and anxiety about an uncertain future.

The following are some suggestions to keep your holidays healthy, happy and memorable:

Keep expectations for the holiday season manageable by not trying to make it "the best ever."

Be realistic about what you can and cannot do. Prioritize most important activities, do not spend too much time preparing for just one day (Christmas).

Remember that the holiday season does not automatically banish reasons for feeling sad and lonely, that there is room for these feelings to be present, even if the person chooses not to express them.

Let go of the past. Don't be disappointed if your holidays are not like they used to be. Life brings changes. Each holiday season is different and can be enjoyed in its own way. You set yourself up for sadness if everything has to be just like the "good old days". Look toward the future.

If you are suffering a recent loss, do what feels comfortable.

Do something for someone else. It is an old remedy but it can help.

Enjoy holiday activities that are free such as driving around to look at Christmas decorations. Go window shopping without buying anything.

Don't be afraid to try something new. Celebrate the holidays in a way you have not done before.

Spend time with people who are supportive and care about you. Make new friends if you are alone during special times. Contact someone you have lost touch with.

Find time for yourself. Don't spend time providing activities for your family and friends. Remember that holiday celebrations are opportunities to share time with the people you love. Make them easy on yourself and the person you are caring for so that you may concentrate on enjoying the holidays together.

Program offers food at discount

FOOD

He added, "And this is not secondary stuff, this is top quality stuff that comes from regular companies like Betty Crocker or Tyson Chicken, but because Angel Food Ministries buys so much of it, you're getting it for a lot less—A guy who is here from Georgia that runs the warehouse was saying when Tyson Chicken has a sale they call him first. They said he buys more chicken than Wal-Mart."

Aside from doing their buying in bulk, Angel Food Ministries offers low prices by employing volunteers to distribute the goods and host distribution sites.

"It's been a difficult thing to sell to people in Charlevoix because they're kind of looking at it as a welfare program, but you pay for what you get. It's just a chance to buy this food at a cheaper prices," Fales said. "We get all kinds of questions from people and we tell them, 'Hey, if you don't want to save money on your groceries, then don't do it. But, if you're looking to save a little money, here's your chance.'"

While the program is intended for everyone, the obvious boon to those in need has been recognized by several area business which have purchased nearly two dozen units of food to be delivered to needy area families.

"If you wanted to help somebody you could donate the money and we can send a letter to the recipient telling them they have a gift from a friend," Fales said. "We give them all the paperwork so when they come to pick up the food nobody knows how it was paid for to avoid embarrassment."

People on the state aid EBT card, formerly known as the food stamp program, are also eligible.

"The only thing we won't take is a check because they could bounce," Fales said.

The next opportunity to take advantage of the program is scheduled for Jan. 19 at the Church of the Nazarene.

Feasability of historic district discussed at forum

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

"This is just the first step."

That is what Charlevoix Historic Commission CO-Chair Bob Heath told the audience at the Commission's educational forum at the conclusion of nearly six hours of informational presentation last Tuesday.

"This was a good start. This is a seed we're planting today," Heath said, taking the spotlight following a number of presentations and question-and-answer sessions led by three visiting professionals with varied historic preservation experience.

A wealth of information regarding the importance of historic preservation, the "blueprints" regarding how it can be done and potential steps involved, stories about other communities already taking those steps, and information regarding the economic impacts and benefits of historic preservation was provided by the forum's three speakers: Kristine Kidorf, owner of Kidorf Preservation Consulting; Richard Karp of Karp and Associates historic preservation consulting and construction firm; and Michael Matts, Director of Historic Preservation and Planning, Gray & Pape, Inc. The trio provided varied information and interacted with an audience of nearly 60 community members to offer as much information as possible.

While concerns were raised, as well as acknowledgment that "you will never get 100 percent of people on board" with the idea of developing a Local Historic District in Charlevoix, support for the concept; which could potentially provide Charlevoix with access to a variety of grants as well as state and federal tax credit programs for facade and building improvement projects, was expressed.

"We've all seen what doing nothing can do," was one comment that stirred applause, followed by the belief "we're going in the right direction" with the attempt the Historic Commission is currently making to establish one or more downtown historic districts in the city.

"I think we should do what we can to restore the buildings downtown and save the Earl Young homes, but we should go beyond that. The houses we have in downtown Charlevoix are getting fewer and fewer, and all of them, not only the Earl Young homes, have historic value," commented resident and City Council member Lyle Gennett.

Much of the discussion centered around the concept of a downtown historic district which would; ideally, protect and enhance the historic integrity of buildings in the downtown. Historic Commission members invited the trio of speakers to discuss downtown district issues because that is the first focus of their plans to establish local districts. Heath told those present the Commission, following the formal establishment of Study Commission within the Historic Commission, named the east side of Bridge Street downtown as a focus for a district. A "very involved" survey was done to gather information about the history of the buildings, their historical integrity, and the potential benefit of a district. That information was used to develop a preliminary report, which the Study Commission sent to three state agencies: The State Historic Preservation Office, the Michigan Historic Commission, and the State Historic Preservation Review Board.

Currently waiting for a response from those agencies, Heath said the Study Commission is working to develop a similar preliminary report regarding the west side of Bridge Street, hoped to become its own historic district as well. The process will also involve a review and follow-up when the agencies respond to the preliminary reports, public education and more information, which will lead into another public event similar to last week's forum. Heath said the next step would then be for the Study Commission to set up a public hearing with the Charlevoix City Council, requesting them to establish the downtown districts.

"Initially we envisioned one downtown district, but that would have been a very large, tedious process," Heath said in reference to the plan to develop the two districts separately.

He also emphasized the establishment of any downtown

Help children remember the spirit of giving

No matter what holiday children and families celebrate, it's easy for children to get a case of "the gimmes." Parents often hear "I want this" or "I want that". It can be difficult to look beyond the holiday advertising and encourage children to embrace what the season is all about.

"Whether you celebrate Kwanza, Chanukah or Christmas, parents know it's not the actual gifts but what's behind the gifts that are important," said Steve Pastyrnak Ph.D, division chief, psychology, Helen DeVos Children's Hospital. "Helping children learn the fun of giving, and how rewarding it can be to select and wrap something special for someone they care about can be challenging but it is possible."

Four-year-old Michael and six-year-old Hannah Redmond of Ada benefit from a parental philosophy that places the emphasis on traditions rather than gifts.

"Our family looks at this time of year as an entire season rather than just one day," said Coleen Redmond, Michael and Hannah's mom. "We take advantage of local seasonal offerings, many of which cost little or no money. From watching the Santa parade and drinking hot chocolate to making gifts for family members, we are trying to teach the children to focus on others. It's not always easy but as a family we're really focused on the spirit of giving."

Pastyrnak encourages parents to help decrease materialism and increase a focus on the meaning of the season.

Teach Children to Question Advertising Messages

- Explain that commercials are designed to create demand for things people don't necessarily need. Talking to kids about what things are like in reality can help put things into perspective.
- Ask thought-provoking questions to get children thinking about the products they see advertised.

- "Do you think you need that product? If so, why?"

- "Do you think that product will make you happy? If so, why?"

- Limit your child's exposure to TV commercials by following suggestions from the American Academy of Pediatrics.
- Encourage children to watch public television
- Tape programs and watch without commercials
- Buy or rent children's movies

Focus on Family Traditions

- Talk about which family traditions your family loves the most and find a way to put emphasis on them. If you love the tradition of lighting the menorah, get together as a group to make your own candles.
- Find out what the holidays mean to others. Have your children talk to a grandparent or aunt about how they spent the holidays growing up.
- Create new traditions. Ask your children what they would enjoy doing every year and make an effort to do it. If you can't all decide on one thing, create several traditions so everyone feels like part of the festivities.

Give Gifts with Meaning

- Gift giving will likely always be a large part of the holiday season and with good reason. It can teach children to understand what makes others happy and what's important to people they care about. Watching loved ones' faces as they open presents that your children put a lot of thought into can make the holidays more worthwhile for your kids.
- Teach your children how to put real meaning into their gifts. Making their own gifts can make the experience of giving so much more rewarding for both parties.

Be a Role Model

Show your children that the holidays can be joyous and fulfilling, not just a stress-ridden time that revolves around marathon shopping trips. Emphasize that it's not about getting piles of presents but giving and receiving a few heartfelt gifts.

"By starting early with traditions that emphasize the true meaning of the holidays, parents can help to frame a child's perspective," added Pastyrnak. "Values emphasized during the holiday season often apply, and benefit, children all year long."

Charlevoix Roads: Worst yet to come

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

> Already strapped, the Charlevoix County Road Commission faces another 4% cut from the state

Crumbling and snow-covered roads will worsen before they get better, according to Charlevoix County Road Commission manager Pat Harmon.

And, while Harmon sympathizes with people like Barbara Goschy, who recently sat in an ambulance stuck on Townline Road in snow because side roads are not plowed under a new road commission policy.

"If we can figure out a way to pay for this, I'm not opposed to providing that service (weekend road maintenance)," Harmon said. "I'd be more than happy to make sure it gets done, but we've got to be able to find a happy medium where the road commission can survive and at the same time the public can be happy."

The problem comes, Harmon said, when weekend snow removal could cost around $100,000 that he simply doesn't have to spend

"They (state officials) told me to plan on reducing my budget by four percent in 2008 and four percent of my Michigan Transportation Fund is about $120,000 or so," he said. "And, that's if the price of diesel don't go up or if gas doesn't top $4 a gallon."

The majority of road commission funding comes from the fixed gas tax.

When gas prices increase, Harmon added, people drive less and therefore less revenue is generated to fix and maintain roads.

"Gas sales were down eight percent in October across the state," Harmon said. "The same amount of tax is collected whether the price of gas goes up or not."

The technical aspects of this whole issue mean nothing to Goschy who proved the worst case scenario is more than a possibility.

"It was on the day of the bad storm, I think on the first (of December). I started having heart pains and after about two hours I thought 'I better call an ambulance,'" she said. "They got me and she (driver) became stuck because the snow was so very deep."

She added, "It was very uncomfortable and I was very afraid."

Luckily for Goschy, who said she would support an operational millage for the road commission, the driver managed to rock the ambulance back and forth until she freed

City council: 'Plow roads'

Who will be held accountable?

That is the question Charlevoix City Council member Gabe Campbell presented to fellow council members at a recent meeting while expressing angst about the Charlevoix County Road Commission's recent decision not to plow secondary roads on weekends and holidays.

Admitting it is "not a city issue" directly, Campbell stated — and others agreed — an official statement should be made from the city on the issue.

"Somebody has got to tell them to get off their dime and do their job," Campbell said, strongly opposing the supposed money-saving move announced by the Road Commission last month.

A hot topic in the area, the decision has sparked anger and annoyance from many county residents, not just those living on the side or secondary roads that won't see plows or salt on weekends or holidays. Mayor Norman Carlson, council members Lyle Gennett and Greg Stevens and audience members shared stories of how they have already been adversely affected by the Road Commission's decision.

"My wife coaches in Harbor Springs, and those roads were bad enough (before)," Carlson said, noting travel for his wife when her basketball team

A number of businesses in the area such as area banks and churches have contributed to elements of the project in the form of Mitten Trees, Giving Trees and donating money to puchase children's books.

Little damage in chimney fire

At 9:54 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 16, firefighters were called to a chimney fire at 1936 U.S. 31 South, the Mary Faculak residence. When firefighters arrived, firefighters discovered a plugged chimney that did not allow adequate draft to a woodstove in the basement. No active chimney fire was found, but firefighters found traces of some burning that apparently had self extinguished before firefighters arrived on the scene. Firefighters were able to clear the plug in the chimney.

No one was hurt, and property damage was minimal. Firefighters were on the scene for about one hour.

Three-car accident

At approximately 6 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 16, a three-car accident occurred on US 131 near the entrance to Boyne Mountain Resort. The accident occurred when a motorist attempted to miss a deer by hitting the breaks. This caused a chain reaction of vehicles slowing to avoid the cars in front of them. The last motorist was unable to stop his car and rear-ended the vehicle directly in front of him pushing that car into yet another vehicle.

One driver, Kayla Hawk, 17, of Petoskey, did receive minor injuries including a complaint of soreness in her neck. Hawk was transported to Otsego Memorial Hospital for treatment and observation. All other occupants were unharmed.

This incident was handles by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department as well as EMS and Fire first responders from Boyne Valley and Boyne City.

Road Commission argues against 'misconceptions'

ROADS

it minutes later.

Harmon said he dislikes taxes as much as the next person, but feels it may be the only way to get things done.

"There are a lot of people who believe we're way overtaxed right now and you can't argue with that, but this stuff costs money and I have been told by the state that no help is coming," he said. "If I spend all the money I have for next year on keeping the roads clear on the weekends, I won't have any way of patching roads or mowing or brining (dust control) next summer and then people will be complaining about that."

While things may seem bad now, Harmon said he remembers a time when the road commission had to shut down for two months in 1988 due to budgetary woes.

"Until that revenue problem is fixed, I'm afraid it's going to get a lot worse before it gets better," he added.

A couple of misconceptions Harmon has recently heard are that plowing will never be done on weekends or holidays, which he said is untrue.

"This policy is not etched in stone. If we have an emergency and fire, ambulance, law needs to get through we will send somebody out," he said. "And as far as not plowing on holidays, I don't know where they got that because Christmas and New Year's don't fall on weekends this year."

Through a contract with the state, Harmon also has a man stationed on both Saturday and Sunday nights to be ready to clear roads like M66, US 131, US 31 and so on.

Charlevoix City Councilman (Second Ward) Gabe Campbell is less than thrilled with the way roads are being handled.

"I think it's ridiculous to say you're not going to plow on weekends," Campbell said. "If an ambulance or firefighters are sent out then you are putting them at risk."

Campbell wants to make the road commissioners, currently appointed by the county board, elected officials.

"We need to make it an elected position so they will be held accountable for their actions," he said. "The county could be in for a huge lawsuit if somebody is killed or hurt because some clown decided we shouldn't plow."

Campbell said he knows a school bus driver who became stuck when he turned on to a road which had been neglected.

"I've just had enough," he said.

Charlevoix County Board Commissioner Chris Christensen said he will not push for road commissioners to be elected officials, but he would like to see their term reduced from six to two years.

"That's ludicrous. Even mine is a two-year term," he said. "As the public in general, we need to get better control on what is going on."

Christensen, who feels the move not to plow on weekends was not the best idea, questioned how or if the road commission scaled back on services this summer to plan for the winter need.

"We need to be responsible across the board, but we can't have one bad weekend and say the road commission sucks," he said. "I give them the benefit of the doubt, but they had to have known they were going to be coming up short with funding."

Harmon said he could cut back on services and employees, but that it would not solve a thing.

"When you take away bodies, things don't get done like they have been done in the past," he said. "I don't know what the answer is; it's going to be a tough one to figure out."

He added, "I can't do more on less."

Christensen questioned Harmon's ability to stagger shifts so the snowplow drivers could work Saturday and Sunday as a regular day instead of collecting overtime.

Harmon said the union contract prevents him from taking a weekday away from a worker with the intent of denying them overtime on the weekends and that no matter what the circumstances, Sunday always requires double time pay.

While some criticize Harmon for not making ends meet on his nearly $3 million budget, he said people do not realize how much labor, materials and fuel cost.

"We spend roughly 1/3 of our budget on winter maintenance," he said. "So, when May gets here, and the white stuff is all gone, we have nothing to show for it—absolutely nothing."

He added, "I can't keep spending on services like in years past knowing I've got to reduce my budget by four percent."

For more information on how road commissions are funded, Harmon suggested people visit www.micountyroads.org.

City weighs in on road woes

holds Sunday night practices can be "really treacherous."

"There is a distinct difference (in the roads) when you cross the county line. As soon as you get to Charlevoix County, they look terrible. It is an embarrassment," Carlson said.

But Charlevoix County Road Commission is not alone in its financial woes. Road Commissions throughout the state have faced tight budgets due to rising fuel costs and unstable — at best — funding from the state, and all were hit with an additional hit recently with a four percent cut to the Michigan Transportation Fund. The fund provides a substantial contribution to road commissions in the state, and the extra cuts are forcing some, including Charlevoix, to make some drastic decisions.

Last week the Mason County Road Commission opted not to clear the roads after a Dec. 15 snow fall of about three to five inches, waiting until Monday to get to work. Saving money was the goal, as Charlevoix County Road Commissioners have said is the goal with its recent decision.

However many in the area are not buying it.

Public safety and economic impacts were noted by the group as major reasons to write a "strongly worded letter" stating the City's official stance against the decision. Campbell noted tourism is vital to Charlevoix County and the City of Charlevoix in winter months as well as summer months, and lack of road care on weekends could pose a problem.

"If people come up here on the weekends and get snowed in, they're not coming back," he said. "That could hurt us."

On the public safety side, council members swapped stories of ambulances getting stuck and concerns about citizens that reside on the secondary roads as well as emergency personnel that could be called out to such areas.

"Our firefighters, ambulance drivers, policemen and others that respond to those roads are in danger too," Carlson said.

Stating funding woes similar to those many other road commissions in the state are currently facing, the Charlevoix County Road Commission is expected to approach the County board next month to request more funding to handle the cost of continued road clearing. The issue is one that has stirred a public outcry the City of Charlevoix will now weigh in on.

"No one can predict the weather but you can't bottle up (funds) and save them for a rainy day. The rainy day is now," Carlson said.

The Crying Towel joins the War on Christmas

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Knowing millions of people believe in aliens because a UFO may have crash-landed in New Mexico 50 years ago, it doesn't much surprise me that the latest hoax turned moneymaking machine is thriving.

Fox News' John Gibson even entitled his book "The War On Christmas: How the liberal plot to ban the sacred Christian holiday is worse than you thought"—no doubt Fox's relentless terror-casts telling Americans their most sacred beliefs were under attack helped Gibson's book sales.

Gibson, who gives seven examples of schools which limited or prohibited certain religious phrases or items, then goes on to extrapolate from those few incidents that, "Millions of Americans ... feel that Christmas is under attack in such a sustained and strategized manner that there is, not doubt, a war on Christmas. It's no longer permissible to wish anyone Merry Christmas."

Seven separate incidents constitute a "sustained and strategized" war? See also the Twilight Zone episode "The Monsters are Due on Maple Street" wherein unwarranted mass hysteria yields death.

Private business owners and citizens have the right not to say "Merry Christmas," but there is no pending legislation to remove Christmas from any facet of your life, and when I checked last Friday, the county building and at least one school were each sporting an angel among their many Christmas symbols.

The religion that permeates most public entities will not soon diminish, but if congress may not establish religion, why may the city, county and state?

Gibson and other aggressors playing the victim support tyranny of the majority when they justify theocracy because America is primarily a Christian nation.

If anything, the founders looked to philosophers like John Stuart Mill who understood that might does not make right: "If all mankind minus one were of one opinion, and only one person were of the contrary opinion, mankind would be no more justified in silencing that one person, than he, if he had the power, would be justified in silencing mankind."

Governments must levy taxes to build roads, raise armies and provide education, not proselytizing in the public square.

Another favorite though false argument of these charlatans is that the founding fathers intended Americans to live by Christian values, a notion which conflicts with the ability to be free and pursue happiness.

Those who invoke our founders' intentions should read the words of Thomas Jefferson who wrote, "Believing with you that religion is a matter which lies solely between man and his God, that he owes account to none other for his faith or his worship, that the legislative powers of government reach actions only, and not opinions, I contemplate with sovereign reverence that act of the whole American people which declared that their legislature should 'make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof,' thus building a wall of separation between church and State."

Or perhaps you were thinking of Thomas Paine, who wrote, "Whenever we read the obscene stories, the voluptuous debaucheries, the cruel and torturous executions, the unrelenting vindictiveness, with which more than half the Bible is filled, it would be more consistent that we called it the word of a demon, than the word of God. It is a history of wickedness, that has served to corrupt and brutalize mankind."

And, let us not forget John Adams, who signed the Treaty of Tripoli in the late 1790s which stated, "As the Government of the United States of America is not in any sense founded on the Christian religion; as it has in itself no character of enmity against the laws, religion, or tranquility, of Musselmen; and as the said States never have entered into any war or act of hostility against any Mehomitan (Muslim) nation, it is declared by the parties that no pretext arising from religious opinions shall ever produce an interruption of the harmony existing between the two countries."

The truth is Christmas did not become a federal holiday until 1870; certainly it was not imposed by the founders, many of whom were deists who believed religion was an abomination on mankind.

Furthermore, the word "god" was not forced onto money 'til the 1860s and did not appear in the pledge until the witch hunts for communists in the '50s.

I am no Grinch. I observe Yuletide gluttony and say "merry Christmas," and I do not fear holiday symbols, but rather the underlying tyranny wrought upon this continent by the oppressive zealots who determine, largely based on sin as defined in their bible, I'm not privy to many civil liberties.

By the way, did you know there is a war on humanity and it's being led by little green men? Read all about it in my new book "The War on Mankind: How Gohs' plot to get your hard-earned money by playing on your fear and anger is worse than you thought"—I can only hope John Gibson will write the foreword.

A New Year brings new beginnings

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

My mind becomes more fuddled these days with age and menopause. Yesterday while getting my regularly scheduled "female" medical check up I received a telephone call from the Assisted Living complex to verify my 91-year-old dad's pedicure.

Mind you, I am displayed like a turkey on a padded stainless steel tray and have a doctor at the helm so to speak. I answer my cell phone and listen to the sweet sounds of a young woman reminding me that dad's appointment is scheduled for 9:40 a.m. My response was September 40th? Did I say that aloud? After she carefully reiterated "nine forty in the morning ma'm" did I realize my mistake. It's time to talk with the man in charge of my hormones about upping my estrogen intake.

This scenario was a good follow-up to the beginning of my morning when I carefully placed my hormone replacement therapy pills into my purse so I wouldn't forget the name of the medicine or how many refills were left. Two questions usually asked and I struggle for the answer as if I were a Jeopardy contestant. "I'll take 'medical history' for $50, Alex." To my surprise the lid had come off in transit and a myriad of little yellow pills scattered throughout my purse like tic tacs on a school field trip. It's going to be a long day today.

Saying the wrong word, repeating incorrect information, and losing things were not part of my plan in the aging process. "This will never happen to me," I would retort as a 20-something when I viewed similar situations with my own mother. Well, it is happening to me and each day I try to find new ways to cope. I am hopeful no will notice that I've forgotten about a project I thought I hadn't started and much to my amazement I had already completed it. Or on the other hand a project I thought I had completed hut actually never started. Mom did warn me there would be days like this but I didn't listen. A comment I hear much too frequently from my own family members. Yes, I'm listening but my mind changes it around to how I would like it to he said or done.

Along with the aging process comes the flurry of ads to lift, tuck, exfoliate or color various parts of your body as if you were a mistake. At first I fell prey to the glamour and excitement colorfully displayed on the shiny pages of the magazine. All the beautiful 50 and 60-year-old women in the ads were staring back at me with the enticement of a miracle product to make me look younger even though my mind was turning to the likes of cooked squash.

I've decided my new beginnings for the New Year will include worry less, enjoy more, and accept aging gracefully. That graceful part came from perusing the article by Anne Kreamer entitled: "Sex and the Gray-Haired Woman." Ms. Kreamer ran an experiment by posing as an interested client on one of the many internet love connections available. She posted a picture of herself as a brunette and again as the gray haired woman she truly is. The information she shared about herself was identical. The response came as a surprise when she received more attention from the gray haired photo. After meeting with various gentlemen who responded to her posting, she realized being true to herself is what men found attractive. This information should give a new level of confidence about going gray. Aging naturally lets others know we've lived and are confident with whom we are.

So as the New Year is soon to begin, it's time for me to accept the fact that I can't be right about everything, I need to write more information down and refer to it occasionally. It's okay that my hair is changing its color and my youthful glow is dimming. The important thing to remember -no one can take away my engaging laugh lines and quick smile that melts away the years and helps to soften the hearts of those who are trying to understand me.

OPPOSITION TO HR BILL 1955

Editor:

Fellow Michiganders, I would like to ask a question. Do we need to start a recall on 14 of our U.S. House Representatives that voted yes on HR Bill 1955? If your not familiar with this bill, I implore you to look it up! The vague language and "life-time appointments" to its commission, desecrates 250 years of sacrifices made by our ancestors. This bill takes our Freedom of Speech and Rights of Assembly away.

Imagine the context of a message being determined not by the author, but by the received. Say, for example, some author says, "it looks like rain today." The receiver of the message determines the context of the message to mean, "you are threatening my parade?"

If that sounds unacceptable to you, than you need to look up HR Bill 1955. The language of the bill is so vague that the government has a right to arrest you if it feels that you are planning or thinking about planning to use "force" or violence. If you picket against a war, that can be considered a "forceful act." " Planned use" or "threatened use" of "force" or violence all puts you into the category of a "Homegrown Terrorist" under HR Bill 1955 passed by The US House of Representatives. You don't have to act on it, they just has to have "reason" to "think" that you "might" be thinking about performing a "forceful" or violent act.

We need to act and we need to act now! We need to recall the 14 Michigan US House of Representatives who already voted yes on HR Bill 1955! This bill is currently in Senate Committee under SB 1959. We need to let our US Senators know that if they vote yes on this bill they too will be subject to recall. Michiganders, it is our time and duty for all those who gave their lives, to those who gave their sons and daughters for our blessed freedom to recall the US House of Representatives who voted yes on HR Bill 1955. Remember freedom is not free and we all need to step up and start recalling our US House of Representatives!

Hello from the new name in town

Erica Golf
Editor

So by now I am sure the faithful readers of the Courier, those I have met and those I have not, have noted their local paper has a new face, a new name among its pages. That name is mine and, like many of you, I am learning to get comfortable with that name printed in what is for me a new paper.

I come to Charlevoix from Ithaca, a place some of you nice folks I have met have driven through and have an inkling of why I left: someone forgot to put water in the middle of Michigan. Before Ithaca I called the Ludington area, aka Custer, my home, having grown up on a dairy farm there. I loved the area, loved the lakeshore, and am more than happy to once again call myself a "westerner."

Despite my jokes, I grew to appreciate and enjoy Ithaca during my time there. I worked for the Gratiot County Herald, serving a county of approximately 4,000 residents, none of whom I was acquainted with before starting my stint with the publication. Three years later, however, I had many friends, many wonderful "contacts" as we call them in the journalism world, and had grown to know the community well. The community, in turn, grew to know me, and threatened to drive up to Charlevoix to inform my new employers I was not allowed to leave the Herald.

While that reaction from my readers, contacts and friends made the decision to leave not a little harder, it also made me feel good about what I had done in my time there. Like most small communities, many of the people living in Gratiot County now have lived there for all or nearly all their lives. I was a "newby," a non-native, nearly viewed as a foreigner. But, in what now seems like such a short period of time, they came to think of me as one of them, a natural fit to the area. Such is the kind of "fit" I hope and expect to find in Charlevoix.

The introduction said, I now feel it fitting to offer more information about who I really am. I could tell about where I went to college and all that boring stuff but that doesn't tell much about the person I am. So I will start by talking about some beliefs that are very important to me. One that is pertinent to my role as editor is my belief of what a community newspaper is and what role it plays in a community. Such a newspaper is one that includes the community — pictures of dedicated volunteers wrapping Christmas presents to donate to area families, stories and pictures of a school project that taught children they can help others in their community or an announcement of a 100th birthday — and shares the news that community is interested in. A story I heard a few years ago stated it best: If there is a woman in town that has a goat, and every one in town knows the woman and the goat, and the goat dies, you write a story about the goat. That is what a community newspaper does.

This second one is a little off-topic, but I also believe in family time. I believe parents should take their children sledding on snowy days, read books to them at night, eat dinner at the table together, and be present for such milestones as tying shoes for the first time and using the potty for the first time (or any time really; the alternative is something parents may prefer not to be around for.) This kind of togetherness is unfortunately too often lost in today's world of video games, DVD's in the car and fast food restaurants.

I believe reality TV represents the downfall of our society. American Idol, Survivor, The Biggest Loser: These and other similar shows have become a cult-like fad in our society, pouring such information as who lost the most weight, who can better survive public humiliation and who can dive into a pool of fame with very little talent and even less effort onto a willing and captivated audience. I may be outvoted on the issue, and I know I cannot bring myself to spend time listening to Simon Cowell, Donald Trump or any other figure-head for this unfortunate form of so-called entertainment.

I think time spent outdoors is a cure for any ill. The sunshine, the breeze, the waves: The presence of nature cannot be duplicated. Any activity outdoors — snowshoeing, jogging (I'm not very fast so I don't call it running) swimming, hiking, hunting, sunbathing — can make any stress a little more bearable.

In lieu of embarking on a Gospel - O - Erica tangent, I will stop my ravings here. I do, however, encourage anyone wanting to hear more, or just wanting to say hello, to do so at the Courier office. I have had the pleasure of meeting a number of warm welcoming people, and perhaps some that only pretended to be warm and welcoming, and look forward to meeting many more of both category, as well as those not so welcoming, if there are any. I look forward to feeling at home here, and hope others can feel I am "at home" too.

Spreading Christmas cheer

Harbor Industries' annual tradition of spreading Christmas cheer in the community brought Mr. & Mrs. Claus (and lots of helpers) to Boulder Park Friday, Dec. 14 for some caroling. The holiday spirit was contagious; young and old alike got caught up in the celebration and big smiles and yule tide merriment were in abundance.

Steve Andreae, Vice-President, Joanne Curtis, Vice-President, and Martha Lancaster, Executive Director of Char-Em United Way play with some of the toy school busses which are being distributed to local children this season.

Local children will enjoy a gift of toy school husses this holiday season, thanks to the Association of Plastic Engineers, Char-Em United Way, and several community agencies.

"We learned that the Association of Plastic Engineers was donating 15,000 toy school busses through the Michigan Association of United Ways for local distribution, and decided to get as many as we could for our community," explained Martha Lancaster, Executive Director of Char-Em United Way. "I contacted several agencies with whom we work and arranged to distribute nearly 300 of the toys to the Women's Resource Center, Manna Food Pantry, and the Department of Human Services."

These three agencies will distribute the busses to children during the upcoming holiday season and throughout the spring. All are also seeking donations of additional toys, food, coats and household items to provide to families in Emmet and Charlevoix Counties.

"We were very happy to serve as an intermediary for this donation," Lancaster said. "Most people know that United Way raises funds to distribute to area agencies, but many don't know that we also help support local non-profit agencies in other ways, as well."

Norwood Mine issue not dead yet, Wynkoop says

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

Following a Dec. 19 court hearing in Bellaire to tie up a few legal loose ends, Norwood Township's former supervisor Wayne Wynkoop intends to exercise several options.

In addition to plans for at least one appeal, Wynkoop took the opportunity the day before his most recent court date to apply once again for a special use permit.

"I'm definitely appealing them (lawsuits), we were just waiting for this hearing to get the final paperwork," Wynkoop said. "He (Judge Thomas Power of Traverse City) told me to get a special use permit and then when I got it he took it away from me, so what other choice do I have?"

Wynkoop said he has a few options and he must explore them.

"I hand delivered it (special use permit application) to the zoning administrator. It's just like starting all over again," he said. "This is just one of my options and, until this type of option is completely gone, I plan on doing this as long as I can."

Norwood Township Planning Commission Chairman Tom Mielke said when the application comes before him, he will follow his obligation to due process.

"I think we'll have a public hearing on it and, though I haven't seen it yet, we'll go over it and go through the process of review and vote on it," he said. "We'll do what we're supposed to do."

Wynkoop is asking Power to reconsider his decision to void Wynkoop's special use permit on his Norwood Limestone Mine LLC. The date and place for a hearing where Power will decide whether to change his mind or keep his original decision intact has yet to be determined.

Wynkoop's most recent application for a special use permit, other than a change in the date submitted, remains identical to the first.

"There is no new stuff for anybody to wonder about," Wynkoop said. "If they approved it once and it met the ordinance, they should approve it again."

He added, "I'm no longer supervisor, so he can't throw it out on that reason."

Wynkoop said if he does someday sell, he will not likely remain in the area.

He added, "If I get to the point where I can no longer pursue it, then I will have to look at doing a sale and be done with it."

Giving Christmas wishes

Safeguard your home

While home safety is a year-round concern, it is especially critical during the holidays. Focusing on home protection, both inside and out, is an important part of preparing for a happy and healthy holiday season.

"Home safety should be top-of-mind for all homeowners," said Mark Greyerbieh, owner of Charlevoix Ace Hardware. "We take great pride in helping our customers make their homes as safe as possible for their families."

A proper security system is the first step toward maintaining a safe home during the holidays since many people are traveling this time of year. Indoor and outdoor lighting can be set up with timers that turn lights on and off to create the appearance of an occupied home. Additionally, the following tips will help protect the people inside your home during the holidays:

Install smoke and carbon monoxide detectors

According to the U.S. Fire Administration, fires will injure approximately 2,600 people during the holiday season, and cause close to $930 million in damage. These two inexpensive devices save lives, especially with the risks associated with festive lights and candles lit for long periods of time.

"Every floor of your home should be equipped with one smoke detector and one carbon monoxide detector, or a combo unit," says Greyerbiehl. "This is especially important near bedrooms, and well within earshot." The rule of thumb is to change the batteries when you change your clocks, twice per year. The average cost is between $2-$5 – a small price to pay for peace of mind.

Safeguard your fireplace

Your fireplace is the perfect centerpiece where you can entertain guests and keep warm. Without proper maintenance and cleaning, however, fireplaces turn into safety hazards. Call a professional to inspect and clean your chimney once a year. You can also keep birds and other small animals out of the chimney by installing a

What's up in Charlevoix?

The City of Charlevoix is under snow but not idle, noting the following activity:

Personnel

Charlevoix recently welcomed a new Planning and Zoning Administrator, Mike Spencer, who arrived from Montana. He began duties earlier this month, replacing Gary Harsh who resigned this fall.

Long-time city employee Diane Manore announced her retirement, and a reception will be held from 3:30 to 5:30 Dec. 31 at City Hall in her honor.

Recreation

Mt McSauba opened its ski and sledding hills Dec. 15, nearly a month earlier than last year. The date also served as the grand opening of the new ice rink located at the facility, which will be open throughout Christmas break as well.

Department planning

City Council members partnered with department heads within the city to set goals for the upcoming year, an early step in the budget planning process. Mayor Norman Carlson said the new process went well, and he appreciated the opportunity for department heads to connect with council members.

Carlson also said "no surprises" are expected in regard to the upcoming budget, which "looks good so far."

Construction

The East Park construction project is re-gaining ground with the recent good weather, having fallen about two weeks behind schedule during more blustery weather early in the month. Much of the stone work has been completed on the Harbor Master Building, paving for walkways has begun and about 90 percent of the stone work on the Performance Pavilion building is complete. If the good weather holds out, Carlson said, the Park should be done by Memorial Day 2008.

The Ferry Beach Boat Launch project is set to be complete this week, as planned.

Miscellaneous

A Court of Appeals judge has ruled in favor of the city in regard to a suit filed against the Zoning Board of Appeals. Earlier this summer, an individual applied for a permit for a boat house on Round Lake, and it was granted. Subsequently an individual approached the ZBA with a complaint about the permit, but because the complaint came after the 30-day period allotted for such input, the permit remained intact. Carlson said the ZBA was found to have acted in accordance with the law on the issue, and its decision stands.

Carlson noted road maintenance within Charlevoix city limits will continue, and the city will plow and provide salt on city roads on weekends and holidays.

Carlson encourages anyone with questions, concerns or ideas about city issues to contact him either by e-mail at boogie@chartermi.net or his e-mail listed on the city's website. He also said he can be reached by phone any time at 547-1938, and he invites input and involvement from residents.

Additional safety fixes

Ensure your area rugs have anti-skid tape or padding to keep them sure-footed, and always have a strong step stool on hand to reach items or seasonal decorations that are too high to reach in closets, cabinets or storage units.

"One quick safety fix for wobbly chairs and tables is simply a couple of wood screws and some carpenter's glue," advises Greyerbiehl. "Your guests should be able to practice 'safe seating.'"

By following these easy safety tips this holiday season, you can rest assured you'll have a safe and pleasant holiday. For more information on home safety, take a trip to your local Ace Hardware store or visit www.acehardware.com.

Northwest Academy plans for the future

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
STAFF WRITER

What will Northwest Academy of Charlevoix look like in five years?

That is the question school officials hope to answer as they begin their strategic planning sessions.

"Growth requires reorganization and this process they (Northwest officials) have chosen to embrace is a very participatory process," said consultant Dale Hull of Dale Hull and Associates. "Gary Stutzman (Northwest's Chief Administrative Officer and school leader) called me some time ago and said they are ready to take a good hard look at the next five years of their future and they are doing the right thing by planning for it."

Stutzman said an internal Strength/Weakness/Opportunity/Threat (SWOT) analysis was performed, the strategic planning sessions will yield the most unbiased and accurate results if facilitated by a third-party.

"It's important for every school to have a defined mission and vision that is very well articulated to every person involved with the school," Stutzman said.

A curriculum review was recently conducted by Northwest's charter holder Saginaw Valley State University in mid-Michigan.

"Our biggest challenge is that we have to develop a clear and consistent curriculum and have that stated in our board policies," Stutzman said. "And, we also have to put into place a long-term plan for regular maintenance and update of the building."

Strengths that have been identified include happy students, small class size and a safe school environment.

Threats included the need for a clearly defined organizational system.

"We've come from a co-directorship with two individuals leading the building to having one individual designated as the school leader," Stutzman said. "We have done that and now it's in place and we have a clear and concise organizational system so everyone knows who to go for and for what."

Opportunities identified include the long-term planning process, searching out new means of funding and planning for new and improved facilities.

Both Hull and Stutzman agreed it is important that students, parents and the community in general, even those with no affiliation to the school, are involved in the strategic planning process.

"I'm a real believer in the phrase 'it takes a village to raise a child.' I don't think the responsibility is just those of us who are parents, but everybody's responsibility to make sure we do the best for young people in the community," Hull said. "I think people should look forward to hearing from us, and if they do not, I encourage them to call Gary and say they would like to get involved with the process."

Dale Hull, of Dale Hull and Associates, gives a presentation to the staff of Northwest Academy of Charlevoix regarding their upcoming strategic planning sessions. The three to five-year plan comes on the heels of a Strenght/Weakness/Opprtunity/Threat or SWOT analysys performed by Northwest's charter holder Saginaw Valley State University.

As far as the specific needs and goals the school has, Hull said it is far too early to tell.

"There is a danger in predicting what you want the outcome to be, that is when you start to focus on what you personally want to happen, you lose areas which do not fall in to your wants," Hull said. "We are beginning this process with our eyes wide open and our ears wide open and we hope to learn as much as we can about what our constituents, in this case the students, want."

He added, "We need to learn what teachers and students are willing to do to get us there."

For more information on how to be a part of the planning process, call Stutzman at 547-9000.

Who cares about another teenage dropout?

Kevin Kreiser, the Northwest Academy student who left school last year to begin a life of uncertainty cared. In fact, he cared enough to return, graduate and join the Army.

"I just wanted to prove I am something," Kreiser said. "I want to be an engineer and I couldn't do that without finishing school."

The 19-year-old had too bright a spark to let hope die out, according to Chief Administrative Officer and school leader Gary Stutzman.

"He is a tremendously talented young man that has had a lot of experiences in his life," he said. "He left school last winter term thinking if he moved to another community he would be able to finish school and when that didn't work out he ended up dropping out of school."

But, Stutzman added, "Instead of accepting the GED routine, or worse, he came back to school this fall and fulfilled his requirements to graduate."

Cold weather increases fire and other risks

Winter weather brings more than colder temperatures, snowstorms and holiday celebrations. It also brings a significantly higher number of residential fires and accidental carbon monoxide (CO) poisonings, tragedies that can be prevented if appropriate safety precautions are in place.

According to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), home fires are most prevalent in December and January and the number of CO related injuries and deaths increase in winter months when furnaces, space heaters and other fuel burning appliances are in use.

"There are several reasons for the increase in fires and CO accidents in winter months," said Debbie Hanson, director of external affairs for BRK Brands/First Alert, a leading manufacturer of fire extinguishers, smoke and CO alarms and other home safety products "Candles and holiday decorations such as Christmas trees and lights, along with increased use of kitchen appliances for holiday cooking all contribute to the higher incidence of home fires," Hanson said. "Storm-related power outages and the improper use of supplemental or alternative heating sources play a big role in the number of CO poisonings. The consequences are often tragic and our goal is to help folks protect themselves during this critical time of year."

Winter Fire Safety Tips

Hanson said there are simple steps people can take that will greatly reduce the risk of fire-related injury and property loss, which is especially important in cold weather months.

Install smoke alarms with both Photoelectric and Ionization sensing technologies on every level of your home and in all sleeping areas for maximum protection.

Test smoke alarms at least once a week.

Change the batteries in smoke alarms every six months or when the low battery signal is heard.

Create and practice a home escape plan at least twice a year, making sure everyone is involved from kids to grandparents.

Keep a fire extinguisher or fire extinguishing spray in your kitchen and near other areas where a fire could occur, such as in a workshop, garage or near a fireplace.

Winter Carbon Monoxide Safety Tips

Often referred to as the silent killer because you can't see, smell or taste it, CO is the leading cause of accidental poisoning in the U.S. It is a by-product of combustion produced by cars, stoves, water heaters, fireplaces, gas grills and a number of other appliances. The following safety tips will help residents avoid CO and other dangers associated with power outages and changes in seasonal temperatures:

Never run a generator indoors or in a poorly ventilated area, such as a garage or porch, and use the appropriate-size power cords to carry the electric load.

DDA seeks grants to help fund East Park attractions

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

Despite the current appearance, East Park is on track for a Memorial Day grand opening. Keith Carey of the Downtown Development Authority is in the process of seeking grants to fund the potential interactive water fountain and trout ecosystem in the park, attributes he said will be "unique" to Charlevoix.

Efforts are continuing to bring some aqua-related fun to the new East Park, expected to be unveiled in May, with work currently revolving around grant applications and fundraising.

"There are a few foundations we are seeking gr ts from and will be submitting them (soon.) So far I am pleased with how the idea has been received from the stand point of downtown businesses," said Keith Carey of the Downtown Development Authority, adding many downtown businesses have become "heavily involved" in the project.

Partnering with the city and the recently-formed citizens' committee, the Fountain of Youth Committee, Carey said fund raising efforts are currently focused on garnering the $280,000 necessary to construct an interactive water fountain in the new park. Grant application ill go to the Frey Foundation, the Dow Foundation of Midland and the Grand Traverse Band of Odawa and Chippewa Indians to help "whittle down" the $100,000 the citizens' group needs to raise per the partnering agreement with the other entities. Carey said the DDA has agreed to contribute $100,000 and the city will contribute $80,00 rom the Marina Fund.

"We are working to reduce the amount needed from private donations," he said. "As I understand it, whatever we raise over that $100,000 will be taken away from what the City and DDA have to pay."

As of last week, fundraising efforts had brought in between $30,000 and $35,000 in private donations in support of the fountain project. Time is of the essence, Carey said, because if the interactive fountain is to be complete by Memorial Day 2008 — the scheduled grand opening of the new park plans for construction including bidding out work for the project and ordering materials must begin next month.

The limitation of time has put another aspect of the park — a trout stream ecosystem habitat — on the back burner in terms of fundraising. Carey said the old East Park was home to a "very basic" trout pond, maintained by the city, and was identified by citizens as a priority in the new park design.

"We wanted to replicate the old pond in the new park. It was a top priority for citizens and we were interested in bringing the old design back," he said.

Initially the proposed design involved a simple, oval shaped pond that would draw water from Round Lake, and drain back into the lake, a process deemed illegal by state standards. The new plan, Carey explained, became to incorporate a more complex, "visually attractive" component that creates a simulated trout habitat. Carey said the stream will utilize the natural landscape of East Park to create "rapids and waterfalls" and "replicate a natural stream."

"It is something that will be very attractive for someone who has never been in the woods to see a real (trout) stream," Carey said. "It will also help support a thriving trout population."

Several collective pools and shaded areas will add to the natural appearance, which will maintain the ecosystem year-round, Carey said. The educational opportunities are an extra benefit, he added.

"This is such a novel idea. Both the trout stream and the water fountain are things that no other downtown in our area has," he said.

While the water fountain is currently more of a priority for fundraising, Carey said the stream will be included in the park plans in some form, but design and scale will depend on available funding.

"The level of sophistication of the stream will depend on the money available. The good news is the educational component creates the perfect opportunity for environmental and educational groups to partner with us," he said.

Holidays + alcohol + driving = a bad recipe

BY ERICA GOFF
EDITOR

It's the holiday season: time to visit old friends, get to know new ones, reminisce, entertain, and be merry.

This time of year, such is the common pasttime for many, and, for many a common ingredient in such plans is alcohol. Is that wrong? No, so say area law enforcement. But the ingredient that should not be added, they said, is driving.

"This is the holiday season, a recreational season, a time when many families and friends are together out on the road. Do you really want to place them in that kind of situation?" commented Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater.

While Lasater has had his fair share of dealings with drunk drivers, as have many law enforment officers in the area, he believes the frequency of such experiences has decreased. In recent years increased fines, license suspensions and threats of jail time have made many drivers more conscientious about making the decision of who will drive.

"I think the laws and public attention (on the issue) have really promoted the designated driver philosophy," Lasater said, noting also the number of civil suits filed in the area in relation to alcohol-related crashes and a judge — 90th District Court Judge Richard W. May — that takes drunk driving related incidents "very seriously," have also helped send a strong message.

Charlevoix City Police Chief Gerard Doan agreed area residents, and society in general, have become more aware of and less accepting of drunk driving. The potential costs involved — fines, loss of driver's license, potential jail time, fees from the Secretary of State, mandatory counseling programs and boosted insurance costs — are some of the things that catch people's attention, and they have helped make people stop and think before getting behind the wheel.

The pressure on law enforcement to take the issue more seriously than was common in years past has also affected the relationship between drivers and officers.

"The days of officers taking a driver home are long gone," he said.

Doan also noted there is no "typical" stop or typical situation when dealing with drunk driving. Some circumstances could be similar — went to the bar with some friends, went to a Christmas party, didn't plan ahead for a ride home or "wasn't that drunk" — but, he asked, who is a typical drunk driving offender? Despite the increased laws and pressure to enforce drunk driving laws, the perception that a drunk driver is a criminal, an alcoholic that cares nothing for others is false. A drunk driver can be someone who had no intentions of hurting others or themselves. They are often just out to have a good time.

"The thing is, I'm not a criminal. Not everyone that gets a DUI is a criminal," said Ben, a 21-year old college student, wanting to remain anonomous, who learned that fact the hard way.

Ben will soon graduate from college with an engineering degree. He carries a 3.0 grade point average in school. He also has an Operating While Visually Impaired conviction on his driving record, a charge that came with 12 months probation, 50 hours of community service, attendance to 2 instructional classes, and more than $3,500 in fines, court costs and other expenses.

But Ben said he thinks he is lucky. His luck, he said, is related to what he now knows could have happened that night in August when he lost control of his truck on a back road after he swerved to miss a deer. His truck hit a bank on the side of the road, rolled and skidded more than 15 feet on its side.

"I was only doing 35 miles an hour," he recalled.

Ben also remembers not feeling drunk despite blowing well over the legal limit when law enforcement officials who arrived on the scene gave him a breathalizer. Ben's blood alcohol content was .127, well above the .08 limit for driving. Despite the costs he's had to pay for the incident, Ben

Charlevoix Ace Hardware backs promise of helpfulness

Store earns Highest in Customer Satisfaction among Major Home Improvement Retail Stores, according to the J.D. Power and Associates inaugural 2007 Major Home Improvement Retail Store Satisfaction Study

"The helpful place" is not just a clever marketing tagline: It is the way Ace Hardware approaches customer satisfaction every day. And thousands of homeowners clearly like what they experience. The nationwide network of 4,600 stores recently ranked "Highest in Customer Satisfaction among Major Home Improvement Retail Stores," according to the J.D. Power and Associates inaugural 2007 Major Home Improvement Retail Store Satisfaction Study.

Ace's success has been driven by its heritage of helpfulness, meeting and exceeding customer needs for more than 80 years. "It's an honor to receive such a prestigious and respected recognition," stated Mark Greyerbiehl, owner of the Charlevoix Ace Hardware. "My team takes great pride in, and enthusiasm for, the message we champion, and I think that has a positive impact on our customers inside and even outside the store."

The inaugural J.D. Power and Associates study is based on responses from 16,239 consumers who purchased home improvement products or services in the previous 12 months. Ace Hardware ranked highest among major retailers with an overall satisfaction index score of 812 on a 1,000-point scale. The score is based on performance in six factors: sales staff, merchandise and services, store facility, price competitiveness, sales/promotions and checkout.

"The real honor from this award is that it came from our customers," added Greyerbiehl. "It feels great to know that we're doing things right and making a difference in people's lives."

Charlevoix Ace Hardware, located at 06675 M-66 N has been part of the Charlevoix community since 1997.

Rayders charge over Traverse City St. Francis

BY STEPHEN BELL
NEWS-REVIEW SPORTS WRITER

Charlevoix's Justin Friske (left) and Corey Gotshall (right) surround Traverse City St. Francis' Holden Greiner Tuesday in the Rayders' 55-46 Lake Michigan Conference victory.

Traverse City St. Francis, with some remnants of a football hangover, shot 32 percent from the floor. Charlevoix, which has yet to click offensively, survived a major first-half scoring drought. So it wasn't exactly March-caliber basketball in Traverse City on Tuesday. But it was another hard-fought game between the Lake Michigan Conference rivals, the first of three likely meetings this season, with the Rayders prevailing, 55-46.

Charlevoix is 5-0, 2-0 in the league, while the Gladiators took their first loss and are now 3-1, 1-1.

"This was typical of how Charlevoix-St. Francis games have been recently," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "It was a physical game and it was tough to get open looks because they really played some great defense."

Not at first. Four different players scored Charlevoix's opening 10 points, and Cliff Jones' 3-pointer gave the Rayders a 13-4 lead through the opening quarter. But then came a scoring lull that typified the game for both teams, and carried over until the second quarter, a period in which Charlevoix didn't score until more than midway through on a turnaround 15-footer from Austin Wilhelm. He made the Rayders' next two buckets, then Collin McDonough, bumped up in the rotation with Thomas Parrish and Jon Putman out, nailed a 3-pointer from the right wing with 18 seconds to go, sending Charlevoix into the break up 24-23.

"Austin kind of bailed us out, then Collin hit the 3," Haske said. "All those little things add up, and it was a great team win."

Charlevoix led throughout the sometimes-sloppy second half, by as much as 10 early in the fourth on a sweet left-handed half-hook by Corey Gotshall. He was one of three Rayders with 10 points, along with Nate LaBlance and Justin Friske.

"Corey and Justin both played well; it was so physical inside," Haske said. "They were concentrating on Nate, so we were able to get Corey the ball in the seams. And we made a concerted effort to get it to Justin down low."

This was the first game where Charlevoix had the two-headed post threat it had hoped for in Gotshall, a 6-foot-3 senior who has already twice topped 20 points, and Friske, a 6-5 junior who finally hit double figures. Gotshall can score down low with either hand, or from the elbows as a shooter or driver. Friske, with point guard Jones running plays specifically for him, was able to show off his smooth post moves in the eye of the storm.

St. Francis got within three points, 46-43, with 2 minutes to play when Holden Greiner stole the ball and got it ahead to Jacob Schell for the score. But Gotshall, playing with four fouls, answered with two quick buckets.

The Gladiators chose the wrong guys to foul in the game's final minute, as LaBlance and Jones, who scored nine, made two free throws apiece to ice the game.

St. Francis was led by Corey Williams' 13 points, while the 6-8 Greiner had 11. Charlevoix was the first team this season to hold Greiner under 20 points.

"We shot awful," St. Francis coach Pat Cleland said. "We still haven't got our legs."

They should be back under them by the time the two play again, Jan. 30 at Charlevoix. A likely third meeting looms in the Class C district at St. Francis.

The Gladiators won the JV game, 62-26.

The costs of drunk driving are many

DD

said he considers the end result positive.

"My cousin was in the car with me," he recalled. "I could have hurt him or myself."

The 14 hours he spent in jail after his crash made him feel like a criminal, he said, and gave him a better understanding of what "safe fun" is.

"You can't take that approach of pushing the limits with alcohol (as you can with things like riding dirt bikes). You can't break the rules," he said.

Ben said $3,500 later, he knows "the money isn't the problem" as long as he learned his lesson.

Tim, another DUI offender wishing to remain anonomous, said he also learned he is not invincible after a night out at a bar. He was on a date, he said, and was too embarrassed to admit he shouldn't drive.

Tim said he made it most of the three mile distance to his home before his vehicle crossed the center line "just a little bit" and he was pulled over. His first thought: "I'm going to jail."

"Then I thought I was going to lose my job and wondered what I was going to do," he said.

The night that started as a celebration for him – "I hadn't been on a date in a long time," Tim said – ended with a night in jail, two years probation and a first offense impaired driving conviction. Tim was also ordered to attend two Alcohol Anonymous meetings every week, go to counseling sessions four days a week, and his driver's license was restricted. He also had to pay about $1,073 in court costs.

Now Tim has little time for dates, he said, because he works until about 6 p.m., goes to counseling four days a week, AA meetings at 8 p.m. twice a week and "can't even drive to church" on Sundays.

Tim's BAC was .16 when he was pulled over. He said he is now "so thankful nothing worse happened."

Tim has two prior convictions, incurred 17 and 18 years ago, and knows he could have gone to prison if those convictions had stayed on his driving record and his third arrest had led to a third offense conviction. Like Ben, this father insisted he is not a criminal.

"I am not a hoodlum, I'm not in and out of trouble," he said.

The situation was "ironic," Tim said, referring to the conception he and many others have, he believes, about DUI convictions. He doesn't go out much, hadn't spent much time at the particular bar he visited that night – "I hadn't been there in 15 years," he said – he has a good job and does not get in trouble. He has, however, paid nearly $6,000 total because of what he said was a bad decision.

Tony, a 25-year-old college student, said it took him two DUI convictions to fully accept that bit of advice.

"The first time it wasn't as much of a punishment so it didn't sink in. It was just money I had to pay and things I had to do," he said. "There weren't really any privileges taken away."

What really "made it sink in" was a second offense, incurred during Tony's "celebration" of the end of his first probation period. The second offense was more costly, he said, and left him without a driver's license for one year, three months of vehicle immobilization, one year of probation, about $1,700 in fines, and nine days in jail.

There was "a lot of fear" involved in going to jail, he said, given the image of "hardened criminals" often associated with being locked up. Many of the individuals also housed in the facility were there for the same reason – drunk driving – and some were there for assault and battery and other charges. While having the privilege to leave the jail for work every day was a relief, Tony said returning when the work day was over was difficult.

"Every day I had to go back brought this sick feeling to my stomach. It was the only time I've wanted the work day to last longer," he said.

The humiliation of that sentence was not the worst part of his experience, he said. Nor was the $6,000 shelled out for six months of counseling sessions or the time or money spent in mandatory Alcohol Anonymous meetings. The worst part, Tony said, was the affect on his family.

"They've been extremely supportive and I'm very lucky but to have to tell them the truth, to humble yourself that much for making such a horrible mistake, that was the worst," he said. "The effect it has on the family lasts much longer than time in jail."

Tony's BAC was .16 – twice the legal limit – both times he was pulled over. He said he'd driven after drinking many times before and always felt "if I didn't look drunk I was ok."

"I thought if I drove well enough and had never gotten caught, I was ok," he said, adding that although he felt "worse off" the second time he was pulled over he "was still in the state of mind that I was ok to drive."

He has since changed his mind.

"I used to think I was ok, that I was careful enough but now that I've been to jail and spent more than $10,000, I know its not worth it," he said.

These three men were lucky, however. Lasater said he knows of too many cases that brought far more troublesome costs, ones that ended with him "knocking on a door and delivering a message that a loved one has passed away."

"I have had to knock on 75 doors. When an officer deals with that and knows alcohol was a factor in the situation, it sticks with you," he said.

One night in particular, Lasater said, has remained with him throughout his career, one that for him started with a call to respond to an accident on the corner of U.S. 31 and Bay Shore. The night ended with him knocking on four doors, telling four sets of parents their teenage child had been killed.

"After something like that, I would go home and sit with my own children, watching them and wanting to protect them," he said.

Of course the situation is not always that dramatic. Drunk driving stops often begin with a quick assessment, Charlevoix City officer Matt Umulis said, checking three areas: speech, eyes and attitude.

"The speech is often slurred, and the eyes can be bloodshot or watery. The smell can be a giveaway too," he said.

Having spent just four-and-a-half years with the department, Umulis said he can see the difference in the number of drunk driving incidents, and is happy to see the numbers go down.

"It is not all about the arrests. That's not what we like to do and that's not what we like to see," he said.

Officer Pete Shrift, a 17-year veteran to the force, said just in the past five years the numbers have seemed to decrease significantly.

"You just don't see the traffic late at night like you used to," he said. "I think people are much more aware."

Lasater, agreeing the decrease in frequency is good to see, said it only takes one story to change the lives of many.

"This story is one that will always stayed with me," he said, telling of two high school seniors he referred to as 'Tom' and 'Tom's friend.'

Tom and his friend has been best "buddies" since kindergarten and made plans to go to a party during their senior year, Lasater said. Tom's father had a rule: if you drink, call for a ride. Tom did not drink at the party, but his friend did. Believing his friend would never put his life in danger, Tom didn't call his father for a ride, instead choosing to ride with his friend. The truck made it about a mile down the road.

"He rolled the truck, and it crushed Tom. Tom didn't make it," Lasater recalled.

During the holiday season, Lasater and other officers reminded it is a time for joy, a time for family, and a time to make wise decisions.

Officials encourage caution when decorating

The holiday season is traditionally a joyful time of the year, but Consumers Energy and the State Fire Marshal warn that it can also be a dangerous one if caution is not exercised with Christmas trees, holiday lighting, candles and cooking.

"We should all pause in the hectic rush of getting ready for the holidays to make sure we are preparing and decorating safely," said Michigan State Fire Marshal Andy Neumann.

In 2006, there were 189 candle-related fires reported in Michigan, resulting in 33 injuries, and more than $7.1 million in property loss. Christmas trees and holiday decorations were involved in 34 reported fires, resulting in one injury and more than $6 million in property loss and damage.

According to Neumann, the risks for a fire in the home increase significantly during this time of year for a number of reasons. Increased cooking, unattended candles and decorations and careless use of smoking materials make this a dangerous time for fires in the home. However, if people practice fire-safe behaviors and use a little common sense, home fires can be prevented.

To greatly enhance your chances of surviving a home fire, have at least one working smoke alarm on each level of your home, especially near sleeping areas. Test your smoke alarms monthly and replace the batteries at least once a year. Have an escape plan showing two ways out of every room with a designated meeting place outside and PRACTICE it with your entire family.

According to the State Fire Marshal's office, smoke alarms, batteries and carbon monoxide detectors don't just make great stocking stuffers, they save lives.

Consumers Energy and the State Fire Marshal offer these safe holiday suggestions:

Choose a fresh Christmas tree and water it frequently. Place the tree in a stand that will not tip over and keep the tree away from heat sources and exits.

Keep burning candles away from decorations and other materials that can catch fire. Do not leave children unattended in a room with lighted candles. Remember to keep matches and lighters out of children's reach.

When decorating with lights, purchase only those labeled by a testing laboratory, such as Underwriters Laboratories (UL). Check for frayed or damaged cords and replace them. Don't overload electric outlets and always unplug all decorative lights before leaving home or going to bed.

Never leave the stove unattended while cooking. Keep cooking areas clean, wear clothes with tight fitting sleeves, and turn pot handles inward on the stove and out of children's reach.

Special care should be taken around fireplaces during this season. Make sure the flue is open before starting a fire. Never burn wrappings or a Christmas tree in the fireplace.

When hosting holiday parties, provide guests who smoke with large, deep ashtrays. After the party, remember to check around furniture and in trash cans for smoldering cigarettes.

Always keep a fire extinguisher handy.

Charter to offer new Business Telephone Service

Charter Communications, a Wired World Company, cited community commitment and involvement, service efficiency and cost effectiveness as benefits it will bring to Northern Michigan with the arrival of its commercial division Charter Business Telephone Service.

Charter Business telephone provides commercial clients with the same service as other telecommunications companies, including the most popular features like hunting, which searches for an open line and automatically rolls over the call, and unlimited long distance calling, the company stated. Director of Business Development for Charter Business Joni Brengman said other telephone services may send calls over the public Internet, but Charter Business Telephone sends calls over its own state-of-the-art network which eliminates most bandwidth issues and improves the quality of calls. With the introduction of telephone service, Charter Business offers small businesses in Northern Michigan an opportunity to consolidate providers. Charter already serves the commercial market with commercial broadband service, offering extremely fast downloads and reliable high speed Internet service. When paired with other Charter Business services such as broadband high-speed Internet and video service, customers can take advantage of 'bundled discounts,' which often result in bottom-line savings, the company stated.

Bundled discounts refer to the cable industry's ability to provide cost savings to customers willing to consolidate their telephone, broadband high-speed Internet and video services with one company. Customers generally see substantial savings when bundling, compared to paying several different companies for multiple services.

Cities included in this launch are: Traverse city, Petoskey, Cadillac, Gaylord, Manistee, Harbor Springs, Charlevoix, Boyne City, Elk Rapids, Frankfort, Kalkaska, Bellaire, Beulah, Interlochen, East Jordan, Mancelona, Onekama, Lake Leelanau, Central Lake, Northport, Manton, Clam River, Williamsburg, Alden and Fife Lake.

For more information on Charter Business Telephone or any other Charter Business service call 888-340-9399 or visit the website at www.Charter-business.com.

Charter is the largest rural cable operator in the state, and the vast majority of Charter's systems are offering advanced video and broadband services. Charter has over 1,400 dedicated employees serving Michigan customers.

Michigan community involvement

Ongoing support of educational and government access channels in the community, including support of Michigan Government TV

Home repair tips: New paint, new look

A new coat of paint can easily turn a dark dull room into a bright and inviting one. Fresh colors add a new look to any room, and doing it yourself can save a lot of money. However, before you roll up your sleeves and lay down the drop cloth, it is important to prepare the surface properly.

"The surface to be painted must be clean, smooth, dull, dry and sound," said Shane Cole, paint manager of Charlevoix Ace Hardware. "Surfaces that are damaged or covered with grease, wax, oil, dirt and soap film will prevent the paint from applying evenly and adhering properly."

Preparing the surface before painting also allows for repair of damage and imperfections, and helps prevent the need for repainting. What follows is some advice to make properly prepared surface to paint:

Test any brown spots on the surface to determine if they are mildew or dirt. Dab the spot with household bleach, and if it disappears, it is mildew, not dirt. To remove mildew, mix a solution of one part bleach to three parts water and apply the solution to the mildewed area. Allow it to stand for 20 minutes, then scrub with a stiff bristled brush.

Scrape off any peeling paint, which is often caused by moisture. Be sure that plaster is thoroughly dry and cured before applying paint. Patch any cracks or holes with spackling compound, allow them to dry, then sand them smooth. Be sure to remove sanding dust.

Lightly sand the surface to be coated. Glossy paint will go on more evenly and adhere better to a sanded surface. Again, be sure to remove sanding dust.

Wash the walls from the bottom up, rinse from the top down, and allow them to dry thoroughly.

Once walls have been cleaned and are thoroughly dry, prime them with a high-quality paint primer so the paint has something to adhere to.

For more painting tips or detailed advice on home improvement, visit your local Ace Hardware store or log on to www.acehardware.com and click "Projects and Solutions." This section provides detailed, step-by-step instructions on common home improvement projects for do-it-yourselfers.

Sec. of State's dedication to customers noted in 2007

Secretary of State Terri Lynn Land continued the dedication to excellent customer service in 2007 that Michigan residents have come to expect from her administration.

For the fifth consecutive year, striving to use every tax dollar wisely and drawing on the power of innovation and technology, Land guided the Michigan Department of State to a number of advancements for millions of state residents.

"From day one, our philosophy at the Department of State has not changed," said Land. "We seek to provide the best possible service to our customers. When budget realities limit our resources, we find a way to do more with less. This year, once again, we are pleased to have achieved solid results for taxpayers."

Expanding the number of SUPER!Centers and PLUS offices, taking cost-effective steps that save tax dollars, implementing a new voter ID safeguard in elections, providing a new curriculum for driver education, and issuing heart stickers for driver's licenses that will help save more lives through organ donation are just some of this year's achievements.

Highlights of the department's 2007 accomplishments include:

- Enhancing customer service. Opening a new SUPER!Center in Oakland County and seven PLUS offices statewide in 2007 to offer enhanced services as part of Land's Branch Office Modernization Program.
- Offering document certification at all SUPER!Centers, as well as the Marquette County PLUS Office, so residents can avoid having to travel or mail to Lansing for help.
- Processing more transactions for customers online. There were 912,000 online registration renewals in fiscal year 2007 -- 55,000 more than fiscal year 2006. From 2003 to 2007, online renewals have jumped 230 percent.
- Launching the MIFleet pilot program with Consumers Energy, with plans to expand statewide. The program involves the issuance of special fleet license plates that save companies the trouble of putting new registration tabs on hundreds of vehicles each year.
- Recording the 175,000th transaction in the Dealer Direct Program, in which customers can purchase plates and tabs when buying a new car at participating dealerships.
- Strengthening the elections system. Successfully implementing the voter ID requirement upheld by the Supreme Court, which adds another layer of protection against fraud and ensures the integrity of elections.
- Creating a new version of the Qualified Voter File (QVF) software that allows clerks of smaller jurisdictions to directly access QVF records online rather than having to obtain the information from the county clerk's office.
- Completing the digitized signature project, which integrated 618 million signatures into the QVF to provide expedited and more accurate verification for local election officials. This new safeguard is especially helpful in the processing of absentee ballots.
- Harnessing the power of technology
- Increasing Self-Service Station transactions, where customers print their vehicle tabs in minutes, to more than 165,000 since inception, up 52 percent from fiscal year 2006.
- Using broadcast e-mail, a much more cost-effective method, to provide thousands of dealers repair facilities and mechanics with newsletters, training announcements and other important information over the Internet rather than mailing the materials to them.
- Saving money, spending smartly
- Providing campaign finance manuals, forms and instructions on CD rather than paper, a move that is expected to save the Bureau of Elections more than $100,000.
- Upgrading to high-speed cable rather than conventional data lines in branch offices, which provides faster processing and annual savings of $30,000.

Striving to ensure safety

- Implementing a model curriculum for students and instructors and other changes to the state's driver education program, making Michigan's roads safer.
- Promoting motorcycle safety by purchasing 24 training motorcycles with grant money, revising motorcycle knowledge tests and expanding the number of motorcycle training providers in the state to 31, up from 19 in 2004.

Helping communities succeed

- Distributing heart-shaped stickers to those willing to be organ donors for placement on their driver's licenses, a better donor identification system expected to save more lives.
- Recording the 200,000th abandoned vehicles cleared from roads and communities under the Abandoned Vehicle Law, which Land championed.

Land earned the Mayor's Cup, given by the Michigan Boating Industries Association in recognition of outstanding contributions to the recreational boating industry.

NWA grad heads to the miliary

KREISER

Weltback could not be prouder of her son.

"I think it's great. I think Kevin is going to excel," she said. "With his strength and knowledge, I think he's going t be a leader and I think this (Army) will be something he'll end up making a career out of."

Stutzman said he is happy to have Kreiser back as an alumnus.

"He will be one of these guys who climbs up the ladder," he said. "He's the kind of guy that would give you the shirt off his back and he has many talents. He sat in (Northwest Academy Christmas concert) and played even though he hadn't touched his instrument in a year. It was like he never stopped playing."

Weltback added, "I'm just so proud because he didn't give up. He had the opportunity not to go back (to school) but he came back and didn't let anything stop him. I love him and will miss him."

Following basic training at Fort Sill in Oklahoma, Kreiser is scheduled to attend Advanced Infantry Training at Fort Leonardwood in Missouri.

"This is giving me a jump-start on life and it will help pay for college," he said. "I'll be operating heavy machinery like backhoes and cranes."

Kreiser said he will miss the classmates and staff of Northwest Academy.

"Mrs. (Sue) Metzger has been supportive of me all year," he said. "If I ever get stuck, she is always there to help me."

Festival of Carols rescheduled

Is the third time a charm? The Jordan Valley Chorale hopes so. It's Festival of Carols Concert has been rescheduled to 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 30 in the sanctuary of the East Jordan United Methodist Church at the corner of Fourth and Esterly streets.

The program will include numbers written by Pergolesi to the contemporary composers Grotenhuis and John Rutter (assisted by handbells, maracas and chimes) and featuring Barb Dowty, soprano and Ron Klooster, tenor. The audience will join the chorale in many of the beloved carols of the season.

There is no charge, but donations will be gratefully accepted and contributed to the community food pantry. A reception will be held in the undercroft following the program and the audience is cordially invited to join the singers in fellowship.

Sunday hours to begin at library

In order to better meet the needs of the community, the Charlevoix Public Library will be extending its hours of service to include 1:00 to 5:00 pm on Sundays, beginning January 6, 2008.

65% of the 2005 strategic planning committee requested more weekend hours. Upon opening the new library, the board added two hours of operation on Saturday. Due to the unknown utility and operating costs in the new facility, the board chose to wait a year to expand the hours further. "Now that we have seen what a year in the building costs, the library board unanimously agreed to expand the operating hours to include Sunday," stated board president Mary Ann Chew.

Historically, in libraries throughout the country, Sundays are the busiest per hour day of the week. "Sundays will provide a wonderful opportunity for families to visit the library together, explaimed library director Val Meyerson. Although there will be limited programming provided on Sundays, it will be another day to visit, meet, and enjoy the facility." For further information about the library and its programming, visit the library web site at www.charlevoixlibrary.org.
